Boys of 14 and 16 Organise Gang War in New York

Gangster war in the New York suburb, the Bronx, reached its climax with the arrest of two youths of the so-called "Jackson-Ritter" gang for the murder of a 14-year-old member of a rival gangster group.

The two youths arrested are between the ages of 14 and 16. In the home of one the police found an "arsenal" comprising three rifles, a bayonet, knuckle-dusters and crowbars.

The murdered youth was found on the footpath opposite his school with bullets in his head.

Beethoven Home and University of Bonn in Ruins

American correspondents report from the Rhine front that Beethoven House in Bonn has been destroyed. Nothing is left of the great composer's birthplace, which had been a national museum.

Bonn University was reduced to a heap of ruins by Anglo-American artillery and bombs.

Communist Civil War Cloud Hangs Over France

New York "Herald-Tribune" reported a speech by the prominent American industrialist, Frederick Crawford, after his return from Europe.

He said that France and Belgium were giving the cold shoulder to the American occupation authorities to an increasing extent.

The censorship, he added, was responsible for giving the American people a thoroughly distorted picture of conditions in Western Europe. A general of high standing told him he hoped the Americans would be able to end the war in the West before France collapsed in Communist civil war.

Arms Factories Flooded Out in America

Owing to the flooding of the Ohio River, numerous American armament factories had to be closed and thousands of inhabitants of cities on the lower reaches had to evacuate.

The waters reached a height which had been registered only twice before.

In the aircraft factory of the Wright Corporation alone 125,000 workers are on forced holiday.

Road and railway traffic in four States on both sides of the river has been stopped.

"New York Herald Tribune" reports that 45,000 American soldiers are under arrest; 25,000 of them have been sent to penal servitude for crimes such as murder, rape and desertion.

Another 50 Bulgarian nationalists have been sentenced to death and "liquidated" by a Soviet shot in the nape of the neck.

U.S. Tanks Attacked From All Sides

Germans Recapture Town: Rhine Battle Widens

From the Fuehrer's Headquarters, March 28th, 1945.

The German Supreme Command announces:

In the course of the great defensive battle in North-West Hungary the German troops yesterday again prevented the break-through for which the attacking Soviets are striving with strong forces. The enemy who advanced across the Marczal Canal was checked on the central front. In the course of steadfast defence and numerous counter-thrusts the German forces inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy thrusting forward from the Gran bridge-head and destroyed 20 tanks.

In Upper Silesia on both sides of Loslau and south of Leobschuetz the Bolsheviks threw strong infantry, tank and battle aircraft formations into the battle without being able, however, to break through the German front. With the destruction of 86 tanks yesterday south of Leobschuetz over 600 tanks were knocked out in the twelve days' battle.

The gallant garrison of the fortress Kuestrin repulsed continued enemy attacks. The German Oder bridge-heads Zehden and Langenberg likewise withstood renewed enemy attacks.

Street fighting is raging in the southern part of Gotenhafen and Danzig. Heavy and light naval forces smashed the enemy tank attacks and deployments between Gotenhafen and Danzig. Also at the Frische Haff extremely bitter fighting is in progress for the possession of the Kahlenholzer Horn.

German motor torpedo boats acting as escort to a German convoy sank two Soviet speed-boats, including the flotilla leader, and captured parts of the crew. A third boat was so heavily damaged that the sinking of it is probable.

Whereas the enemy confined his activity east of Libau to minor thrusts, he increased his attacks north-east of Frauenburg and north-west of Doblen. They collapsed in fierce fighting in the face of the tenacious resistance of the German troops.

While protecting the attacks by German battle aircraft against enemy tank, supply and bridge targets the German fighters shot down 27 aircraft over the Eastern Front.

On the Lower Rhine the gallantly fighting German troops yesterday again prevented the enemy break-through attempts between Millingen and Dingden and defended themselves unshakably in the wooded terrain east and south-east of Wesel.

Mobile American forces were able to thrust forward from the Westerwald into the valley of the Upper Sieg.

South-east thereof enemy tank spearheads were checked between Dillenburg and Wetzlar. Weaker enemy detachments have also thrust forward from Limburg towards the south-east. From the Rhine bridge-head between Bad Ems and Caub the enemy is pressing forward towards the east.

At many points German combat groups are attacking the rear communications of the Americans. In the battle area on the Lower Rhine fighting is going on in the south-western part of Frankfurt. Enemy attacks and German counter-attacks alternated in the Hanau area, whilst attacks on Aschaffenburg were repulsed. To the south of Aschaffenburg American tank divisions have thrust forward beyond Lohr to east of Gemunden. They are being attacked from all sides at present. Enemy tanks to the east of Gemunden were destroyed, the town was recaptured. On the Bergstrasse as well as at the flanking front between Weinheim and Mannheim enemy attacks were brought to a standstill following fierce fighting.

In the Western Alps the German troops smashed strong attacks by De Gaulle Alpine troops which were repeated as many as ten times, inflicting heavy losses upon them.

Night thrusts of the enemy in the coastal sector of the Adriatic were repulsed, to the south of Lugo a British stronghold captured.

British terror raiders attacked North-German territory yesterday and several localities in Westphalia. Residential quarters of Paderborn were badly hit. During the night a weaker formation of enemy aircraft dropped bombs on Berlin.

Thousands of New Houses Planned: Three Built!

According to the "Daily Worker," of the thousands of emergency houses which were to be built in London during January, only three were erected.

The Minister of Labour admitted this surprising fact in reply to a cross-fire of questions put to him in the House of Commons by the Labour M.P. for East London.

Hungary Battles Cost Bolsheviks Half-Million Men

Between September, 1944, and February of this year Soviet losses in the Hungarian battle zone were more than half-a-million men.

These include 135,000 killed; 45,000 taken prisoner; and 400,000 wounded.

In addition 5,400 armoured vehicles, 4,800 anti-tank guns and 20,000 transport wagons of all kinds were either captured or destroyed; while 1,200 aircraft were shot down.

Sixty Thousand Women and Children Saved

Sixty thousand women and children, refugees from East and West Prussia, were rescued from Kolberg and conveyed to safety on board German warships and merchant vessels under constant Bolshevik fire.

Formations of the Luftwaffe joined in the evacuation before the use of Kolberg harbour became impossible, and over 4,000 women and children were saved by air.

According to reports from Rome an attack was made against the villa of Count Sforza. Two unknown assailants shot a servant. Sforza, like the other "purging" Commissars, has to be protected by an armed bodyguard.

Commenting on the journey of Benesch to the Soviet Union the diplomatic correspondent of the Swiss paper "Tribune de Geneve," says the Czechoslovak Statesman preferred to form his Government straight away in Moscow. Having learnt a lesson from events in Greece, Rumania and Bulgaria, he hoped to spare Czechoslovakia similar humiliations by fulfilling Soviet wishes beforehand.

Most Terrible Battle of Whole Pacific Conflict

After four weeks of the hardest and most desperate fighting, the battle for Iwojima, 1,000 kilometres south of Tokyo, has come to an end, says an official Japanese report.

When the American troops succeeded in penetrating into the last Japanese line of defence, the Japanese commander gave his surviving soldiers the order to go over to the last counter-attack, and they fought to the last man.

This struggle for Iwojima is described by the Japanese as the most terrible of the whole Pacific war.

The Japanese garrison, which numbered about 20,000 men, inflicted extraordinarily heavy casualties on the attacking Americans, who, according to reports from Tokyo, lost about 30,000 men.

Of 120 American bombers which attacked the Japanese city of Nagoya with incendiaries, Japanese fighters destroyed and damaged, according to latest reports, at least 84 machines, mostly through ramming. Fires caused in the city were soon got under control.

The U.S.A. Marine Department has, according to the American news service, issued statistics of the losses of the Marine Corps in the battles of Iwo, Piliu, Saipan and Barawas.

In Iwo 32 per cent. of the 61,000 soldiers employed were either killed or wounded; on Saipan the losses amounted to about 23 per cent. of approximately 47,000; and on Piliu nearly 25 per cent. of about 24,000.

Litvinoff for San Francisco

In London diplomatic circles it is thought likely that the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, Litvinoff - Frikelstein, will be the Soviet delegate to the San Francisco Conference, which opens on April 25th, and that Maisky, the former Bolshevik Ambassador to Britain, will accompany him.

Only 6 of the 45 nations who are to take part have so far appointed their representatives.

The Prime Minister of the South African Union, Marshal Smuts, announced in Cape Town that he would take part in meetings in London before proceeding to San Francisco.

William Joyce Says . . .

Red Hand Grasping at Britain's Lifeline

The battles on the Eastern Front continue to rage with unabated fury, and in some districts the fighting this week has been particularly fierce. The spectacular events in the West must not be allowed to distract attention from the vital significance of the struggle in the East, where the destiny of this Continent for many centuries to come will be decided.

It is, of course, only human nature that the British people should take an especially keen interest in the operations on the Lower Rhine, in which their own troops are engaged. Two days ago the London "Times" was constrained to remind the English public that the Allied gains of ground are being purchased at a high cost of human lives. It would be more in accordance with the spirit of truth to say that the soil the invaders have acquired has had to be bought with their blood, and the casualties can truly be described as enormous. Despite their airborne landings behind the German lines and the large scale of the attack, as measured in men and material, the British forces have not been able to make much progress beyond Wesel. To the east and north of Wesel itself, however, they have contrived to establish a fairly deep bridgehead, but their uttermost break-through attempts were foiled by the staunch German defenders.

In the Central and Southern sectors of the Western Front the fighting continues to be mobile, and it would be premature to give an appreciation of operations which are as yet clearly undefined. Let me warn you once again, however, to beware of the illusion that, because the Rhine has been crossed, the war is practically at an end. The German reaction to greater danger is that of greater resistance, and, moreover, I repeat, without any apology, the fundamental proposition that the defeat of Germany, if it could be encompassed, would mean no triumph for Britain, but would denote, as Smuts predicted a year-and-a-half ago, the domination of Europe and a great part of Asia by the Soviet colossus.

In view of the fact, there is no more pertinent question many thousands of British people could ask themselves than this: "Why are our kith and kin, our nearest and dearest, giving up their lives, and to what end?" I cannot reflect upon this query without being impressed by the contrast between British hopelessness or, I should say, the hopelessness of British prospects, and the steady, incessant, purposeful pursuit of their own ends by Stalin and Roosevelt. The Dollar Imperialists have marked Britain down as their chief victim because the process of robbing her is the most profitable. They have renounced whatever claim they might have been contemplating to an interest in Europe. They recognise this Continent as a sphere of influence belonging to the Soviet Union. This agreement was rendered possible by the co-operation of the Jews in Washington with the Jews in Moscow.

But Europe is only part of the world. When all is said and done, the Yankees will be able to recompense themselves handsomely in areas presumed, rightly or wrongly, to lie outside the scope of Soviet ambitions, and the "American Army and Navy Journal" gives indication of what I mean. This official organ of the United States forces bluntly declares that whatever islands in the Pacific the American troops occupy during this war will be treated after the cessation of hostilities as mandated United States territory, and that whatever efforts are made by Britain, Australia and France to place such territory under international control must be opposed. This candid pronouncement ought to be taken, and is doubtless meant to be taken, as a warning that Roosevelt does not intend to hand over to Britain, or any other Power, ground which his troops may occupy in the course of operations within the Pacific and Eastern Asia zones. That is a principle which, by its implications, might have very far-reaching consequences, should Japan suffer defeat.

In the meantime, the right atmosphere for the reception of the mission undertaken by Colonel Llewellyn, the Food Minister, and his Cabinet colleague, Mr. Lyttleton, is being created in Washington by American Congressmen, who are seizing the opportunity to protest against the export of food-stuffs to England. Two Senators, in particular, are making the strongest efforts to stir up opposition to the provision of meat supplies for the English people. Is it not very humiliating for Britain to have to beg an ally, a powerful ally, for food at a most critical juncture of the war, and to be conscious that, in making the humble petition, the missionaries are being openly and brutally denounced as mendicants?

Surely, if the alliance between Britain and the United States were based upon decent reciprocity, mutual respect, and similar ideals, this modifying spectacle could have been avoided, but the association between these two countries rests upon no such foundation. It only continues on the basis of limitless concession, on the one hand, and perpetual exploitation on the other—a basis which might have been modified if Mr. Churchill had not been so constantly ready to consummate any surrender rather than disappoint his dear friend, Roosevelt.

In the European and Near Asia zones, Stalin is conducting with ruthless vigour a campaign which is demonstrating day by day his complete indifference to British susceptibilities. After all, he has been proclaimed by Mr. Churchill as a man of honour, and he knows that the Prime Minister cannot now denounce him without making a fool of himself.

The American news agency, United Press, reports that, in all probability, the Turks will shortly be presented with a new Soviet-Turkish agreement and requested to sign it. If they refuse, Stalin would at once realise "the necessity, on security grounds, of occupying Turkey with Red forces," and "military exigencies" will demand the total and immediate assumption by the Soviet Union of control over the Dardanelles. British interests in the Eastern Mediterranean will be remorselessly set aside and, if protests are made by London, they will not be entertained. Then, when Stalin has made himself master of the Eastern Mediterranean, he will, I am convinced, exploit the services of his Communist friends in the Western Mediterranean in order that the whole of this sea, so vital to British Empire communications, may become a Soviet lake. Churchill's attitude towards this programme is sufficiently illustrated by this week's revelation that a number of British warships, including the dreadnought, "Royal Sovereign," have been presented to the Soviet Navy. Royal Sovereign forsooth!

Our New Bid For Fish

No-one in the Island can do other than wish that all success may attend fishing in local waters, now being organised on a scheduled basis.

Ours is an island with centuries of sea lore, and the farmer-fisherman has thrived for many generations in the farms and small-holdings near our coasts. Up to Edwardian days many fishermen pursued a regular calling, and the mackerel boats at various of our bays were craft which could and did stand up to heavy weather on distant fishing grounds.

The call of horticulture drew away many farmer-fishermen from the sea to more enticing work ashore—work which demanded a close attention to time-table, with a constant regard to ventilation of holdings. It must also be said that the cost of fishing, gear, outfit and apparatus also increased considerably, and so it came about that as Islanders we were led to rely increasingly on fish imported from the mainland: fish placed fresh and stiff on fishmongers' slabs as if just landed from local waters. Ice packing made overseas trade possible, while it discouraged many Sarnians from seeking a living as fishermen.

Still, the lure for obtaining mackerel and longnose caught in local waters has never waned, and the harvests of these have always found ready purchasers both in the market, the shops, and from travelling fish vans.

For years now fish has been acutely sought for in queues by the Island population. With overseas trade closed to us, it was left to comparatively few local fish-sellers to pursue the old calling, and the rationing card system was deemed the best way out of the difficulty when demand so much exceeded supply.

Under present announced conditions, catches of fish landed here will be divided—60 per cent. for the German forces and the 40 per cent. remainder to the civilian population. Petrol is being supplied free by the German authorities to licensed motor-boats. But it is important for all who follow the sea to remember that

RESPONSE TO MISS
GARDNER'S APPEAL

Sir,—I should like to thank all those who so kindly responded to my appeal for the Aged Poor Fund. Through their generosity I am thankful to say that I have been able to carry out my work. It means so much to the poor old people who depend on me, some for their rent but most of them now for food. It would be impossible for them to pay for it out of their few shillings a week so I hope that kind friends will continue to help me, and I feel sure that they will.

They tittered as she went

With halting feet

Along the busy street,

With studied close intent.

I saw those eyes

Prepared to criticize:

They saw, all gnarled and bent

Poor crooked age

On its last pilgrimage.

They knew not that within

A lonely soul

Had beautified the whole;

Tae only saw the skin,

So dry and old,

Perished with Winter's cold.

Their laughter was akin

To blasphemy,

Mocking God's imagery.

REGISTERED ACCIDENTS

Thirty-one accidents were registered with the States Insurance Authority for the week ending March 24, bringing the total since July 1 to 935.

A man escaped with nothing more than a bruised side after falling 20ft. from a ladder. Falling down stairs, a woman strained her shoulder. Another cut her leg on a piece of metal protruding from a pram. A spanner slipping caused a man to strike his chin on a metal instrument; and the chin has turned septic. A man crushed his thumb when he hit it with a hammer while holding a wedge, splitting wood.
