General Mark Wayne Clark was born in 1896 and entered the Army via West Point. He was promoted to major-general in 1942 and served as Eisenhower's deputy in the "Torch" landings. In November of the same year he was promoted to lieutenant-general and appointed to command the 5th Army the following January. Clark commanded at Salerno, first establishing a secure beach-head and then pushing north to take Naples on October 1. The 5th Army now advanced to the Volturno. In December 1944 Clark took over from Alexander as the commander of the 15th Army Group.
