LIGH OFFICIALS IN LONDON ARE STANDING BY FOR THE FINAL CAPITULATION OF THE HUN. THE END MAY COME ANY HOUR WITHIN THE NEXT TWO DAYS.

It was reported by the Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau in Stockholm yesterday that General Boehme, German commander in Norway, has decided to capitulate. An announcement was promised "later."

Unconfirmed reports circulating in Stockholm state that a British military delegation has arrived by plane in Oslo. Lieut.-Gen. Foulkes, commander of the First Canadian Corps, is going to Hilversum to-day to receive the surrender of the Germans in Western Holland.

Reports reaching well-informed Paris circles yesterday said that the "Big Three"-Britain, America, and Russia-had consulted to draw up the terms of the Allied proclamation which will announce the end of hostilities in Europe.

Almost complete silence from the Germans still in Norway, now totally isolated, may mean the Germans will give up without a fight, said an earlier Reuter message.

Four great forces-those of the whole Allied 21st Army Group of British, Canadian, and Americanicroops and of the Soviet Marshals Rokasson B. Vaccilovelay, and Thilton are now left without a front to fight on.

CZECHS' SURRENDER CALL

General Patton yesterday launched a new offensive into Czechoslovakia. One of the first rewards was the surrender en masse of the crack 11th Panzer "Ghost "Division.

The Czech national flag was reported to be flying again in Prague, and late last night a call to the Nazis in Bohemia and Moravia to surrender was broadcast.

While Dr. Preissler, Deputy Gauleiter of the Sudetenland, was admitting over the radio that Czechoslovakia was in a state of revolt, the Gauleiter himself was said to be engagedd in " important talks."

German Army Group G, composed of the 1st and 19th Armies, commanded by General Schultz, has surrendered to the 6th U.S. Army Group six miles from Munich, it was announced at SHAEF last night. Capitulation becomes effective at noon today.

This new surrender, adds Reuter, indicates the end of resistance in practically the entire remaining territory of Austria still separating General Devers from Marshal Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army west of Vienna.

ANOTHER 200,000 FOR CAGES

Gen. Eisenhower, in a statement last night, said: "To-day saw a steady continuation of German demoralisation and disintegration on the West Front.

"So great is the confusion among the enemy that the German officer, Lieut.-Gen. Foertsch, Commander of the First German Army, present at the negotiation, could not get an accurate number of the strength of Army Group G. He believes it numbers between 200,000 and 400,000.

"He reported that the Army itself has food for several days, but the local population, from some 2,000,000 to 2,500,000, is facing starvation.'

Germany Is Defeated

HE mighty march of events has reached its appointed end. Only the formalities of complete unconditional surrender are still to come.

A grand and monstrous evil, which has sprawled hideously across the face of Europe and threatened the civilisation of all mankind, has been purged in the fires of utter defeat. For nearly six years we have known its terrors. For all that time we have fought against it.

By the mercy of Providence we have not always known how close we were to destruction. But we fought on no matter what the condition, determined only never to give in.

It has been grim and bitter this fight against a ruthless enemy who had prepared in secret and whose strength had never previously been equalled. All the devilish ingenuity that the mind of man could conceive he turned against us.

Yet the end was inevitable, for his strength was founded on deceit and his himulus was hate.

It has come with startling swiftness. Disintegration and chaos, the loss and destruction of his cities, murder and suicide and discord among his leaders, apathy and indiscipline in his ranks, thousands upon thousands of prisoners in the hands of the Allies.

We are fully entitled to rejoice. We much for which to be have very thankful.

SUNDAY EMPIRE NEWS, MAY 6, 1945

T is over—all but the formal declaration. The long pull has ended. And no people have more right to be joyous, and to celebrate -in whatsoever fashion each individual feels disposed-than the longsuffering, hardworking, hard-fighting British.

This little island-the "aircraft carrier " anchored off the coast of Europe is probably now the modern way to speak of it-has had the closest shave since the Armada.

Danger Brought Us Together

FURTHERMORE - and if this doesn't play a large part in making post-war British life more co-operative and companionable I'll eat my hat - more British civilians have had more close shaves and far more dangerous years than this population has ever known in all its long, varied and truly magnificent history. I can't eat my hat.

sea, to grin-and immediately man another ship.

These things-all that wonderful steadiness and courage -are expected from your national character. And Britain incontestably won this war largely because she ran true to form.

But when I think of how this country snapped into it, and finally beat the highly efficient Nazis, I (no doubt I am prejudiced) remember Manchester -and I think of Sheffield, Leeds, Bradford, Birmingham, poor Coventry, the Rhondda Valley, Glasgow, and all the men and women along Tyneside and the River Clyde. I think of how they turned out the stuff that beat the Nazis. It is the MIRACLE of those big industrial centres, after so many years of slump, and the still-eager British engineers bent over their drawing-boards -that is what saved England in this war, in my opinion. And I want to say right here that if the British (I could almost particularise and say "English,' in speaking of this South-Britain snobbishness), don't quickly change their obsolete set of social values-i.e., rate the engineer socially in the high place that other countries rate him (such as Soviet Russia, Germany, the United States), instead of ranking him, in the

Yes, I would never forget that -for Britain is in fine condition now. Physically-and especially mentally-the average British and and woman are more fit and alert than they have ever been.

This war has trimmed Britain down just as noticeably as his training camp sends any boxer into the ring. The 1938 fat has gone-even from the minds of the politicians (or to be accurate from most of them). The "Dismal Johnnies" are already carping that now is the time when Drake's drum will sound at Plymouth. The most dangerous years for Britain now lie dead ahead. They say we ought not to celebrate in the face of so much world-wide human suffering. That life is going to be a very grim affair from now on. That only our grand-children (and perhaps not even they) will see the return of peaceful and contented years.

T FANCY the feeling of most of us civilians this morning is that we have been let out of gaol. For more than five and a half years we have been serving a sentence imposed on us by the ambitions of Germany.

We have finally been liberated by the heroic exertions of millions of our young men and our own people. If in the past I had been in

"Gosh" said he, drawing a deep breath and reaching for the cigarette case which I held out to him: "It's good to be out.'

"Well, now that you are out," said I, "what are you going to do with yourself?"

"That'll want a bit of thought," he replied good naturedly: "But I've made up my mind "-gesturing backwards -" that I'm not going in there again.'

Full Freedom, Please! WE, too, have got to do a bit of thinking to-day now that victory is here. What are we going to do with our-without interest. In the first place-and I hope it is understood that I write with due thought for all who have suffered irremediable hurt in this war and for the men who still have got to fight it out in the Far East - I want mynewly-restored liberty to be as complete as possible.

I want to be freed from the multiplicity of controls and masters that I have had to endure in the past five and a half years. I want to be allowed to be myself again.

So here it is-the muchtalked-of film. And there is almost as much talk in it as about it. A narrator butts into the action every so often to tell you what goes on behind the scenes, and how Dorian Gray (Hurd Hatfield) is madly pursuing pleasure and ruining his reputation, indulging in all manner of wild living, and driving his friends to despair and suicide

Without the narrator you would not really suspect this, for Hurd Hatfield's handsome features show no sign that he is enjoying a voluptuous existence. There is no indica-tion he is enjoying anyth ng tion he is enjoying anything.

Terrifying Work

Terrifying Work I suppose it would not have been possible to show on the screen the pleasures in which Dorian Gray is supposed to have squandered his young years. That is a pity, for when these things are merely hinted at by the narrator, while Mr. Hatfield behaves with the utmost decorum, not even the hideous changes in the portrait (a terri-fying piece of work in techni-color) can convince one that he was really as bad as all that. Still, allowing for the fact that M-G.-M. undertook an almost impossible task in making the film, there is much about it • Beautiful Pat Kirkwood makes the most of great opportunities in "Flight from Folly." give her innumerable opportuni-ties to display her vitality, voice and irreproachable lower limbs.

Barbara Mullen. THIS is a beautifully set and haunted house, its elderly and mystified owners (Barbara Mullen and James Mason), and a young woman (Margaret Lock-wood), who becomes possessed by the spirit of a tragic creature who died there 40 years before. It is not, to my mind, half as enthralling as the far subtler story by Sir Osbert Sitwell on which it is based-but it is very pleasant to look at, even when They overlooked one fact-that the Arnold Bennett story on which that film was based was a really good one. This time they have tried to make do with a sentimental piece of nonsense about a group of out-of-work vaudeville artists who take jobs as domestic staff in the house of a lonely old man (Mr Woolley), ard, led by Miss Fields as the sympathetic housekeeper, bring sweetness and light into his life. Well, it really will not quite which it is based—but it is very pleasant to look at, even when the dialogue is clumsy and the action seems to hang fire. Barbara Mullen deserves an Oscar for her exquisite perform-ance as old Mrs. Smedhurst. Incidentally, the publicity boys describe this as a ghost story in which "you see no ghost." That microphone was grasped eagerly by later performers who had no voice to offer. That microphone was grabbed by performers who, behind it, hid any facial expression they might have, and, holding it firmly, promptly lost the best asset an actor has—his hands. The big blokes of my day and Wilkie Bard was, like all great music-hall artists, a very fine actor. His sketch "The Night Watchman" was one of the classics of the music-hall stage.

The others were "A Sister to Assist 'Er," played by Fred Emney and Sydney Fair-brother; G. P. Huntley's "Buying a Gun"; all of Harry Tate's and a few of Fred Kitchen's. I had almost forgotten Alfred Lester's "A Restaurant Episode."

I met Alfred Lester when he was hardly known. He was in the middle of the bill at the Birmingham Empire Theatre in this restaurant sketch, and through me making a caricature of him we had a brief but pleasant friendship.

Alfred Lester was a lugubrious character, and was playing practically no part on the stage except himself.

I wert with chere going with his soliloquy of "nobody getting any younger." A wert with Harry to the bar. Harry said: "D'ye know what's the matter with him? He enjoys getting old." G. P. Huntley, of course, belonged to the musical comedy stage more than the music-hall. But with one exception he was equally at home on the variety stage. The exception was the opening night of "Buying a Gun," which took place at Brighton. At the first house the sketch was "a riot." "G. P. Yook his well-deserved curtain and everybody was happy-until the second performance came around. A certain amount of joy then turned to panic because G. P. Huntley was missing. THIS is a crazy musical— British made—in which that dashing, dark Miss Kirk-wood (who has already landed a Hollywood contract) demon-strates that brunettes have just as much allure as blondes, even as much as Betty Grable. Opposite Mr. Redgrave, who plays the colonel of the title, will be Rachel Kempson as a French girl. In private life Miss Kempson is Mrs. Redgrave. trates that brunettes have just s much allure as blondes, even s much as Betty Grable. The inevitable scena sequences coming to the West End.

recommend as a cure for the cross-bat habit. One is to practise in front of a full-length mirror and the feature about this sort of practice is that you can do it without any help-indoors. But be careful of the electric globes. The other practice plan for would-be stars with a view to developing the habit of keeping the bat straight right through a drive is to try making imaginary strokes with the left hand. Len Hutton's success is based on the straight bat. Watch him for a spell.

Camera Story of the Great Surrender

ONLY the camera can give an adequate picture of the unconditional surrender of the Nazi Armies in North-West Germany. Highlights and shadows are elusive and fleeting; difficult to record in cold type.

It was on May 3 that high-ranking German officers visited 2nd Army and 21st Army Group H.Q. to ask for surrender terms for the German military forces. They were General-Admiral von Freideburg, C.-in-C. German Navy; Gen. Inf. Kunzel, Chief of Staff to Field-Marshal Busch; Kontur Admiral Wagner, naval liaison, and an S.S. staff officer. They represented Despite and Keitel officer. They represented Doenitz and Keitel.

The study in expressions-mostly glum-was made as they held an impromptu conference among the trees.

On the following day (May 4) came the historic signing of the unconditional surrender of the German land, sea and air forces in Northern Germany.

Picture on the right shows Gen.-Adml. von Friedeburg, Supreme Commander of the German Navy, signing the terms. Field-Marshal Montgomery looks on.

There is a grim kind of satisfaction on Field-Marshal Montgomery's face. But for sheer delight see the picture below! Outwardly happiest man of the outfit is Trooper Bob Dawday, 7th Armoured Division, of Ipswich, who drove the surrender delegates from the front line to General Dempsey's H.Q.

hands of the Czech Resistance Movement since yesterday ciently frequent to be serious. Curfews are strictly enforced and rarely violated. A burst of Tommy-gun fire down a street where a suspicious shadow lurks after hours soon settles that. Fraternisation does not exist. There was a short space of time when contact between occupying troops in villages and the people they met every day began inevit-ably to drift towards fraternisa-tion.

Sometimes I think they are being too considerate. The Americans are more harsh, but not unreasonably so. There is another "Occupation Force" in the Reich to-day-the thousands of freed slave workers of all nationalities roaming the country. They have their own rules, and the Germans are terrified of them. Horror Pictures The Werewolf business is not a myth-nor a serious menace. Incidents there have been. In London, announced last night that Prague had again become the Czech capital, and was flying the national flag, Czechoslovak Radio sent out a dramatic appeal for air support, " as German tanks are heading for the city." Powerful forces of Gen. Patton's U.S. Third Army tanks and infantry launched their new offensive into Czechoslovakia at points along a 110 miles front.

They are 17 miles over the frontier, and so far there are no reports of opposition. Advances of 22 miles were also made into Austria.

Through the mountain passes of Czechoslovakia yesterday long columns of more than 1,000 lorries and tanks, covered in Wehrmacht camouflage, wound slowly into the American lines.

ALLIES TOO STRONG FOR US

Germany's crack Eleventh Panzer "Ghost " Division had surrendered.

Some vehicles carried white flags, but the German tankmen seemed in good spirits.

Some of them told Reuter's correspondent they had given up the fight because it was an order, but said that American artillery and planes were too much for them.

The general had declared the fight useless, and sent emissaries with a surrender offer into the American lines. In Austria, Gen. Patton captured Linz without opposition as well as the industrial town of Steyr. The Germans in Holland are still truculent, and Canadian troops in the sector report that the situation.

is unsatisfactory, though the surrender is proceeding normally since Blaskowitz, the German Commander, contacted the Canadian Corps Commander.

In the province of Oldenburg, where paratroops and S.S. men of Kesselring's original Rhine front armies apparently resent the piecemeal surrender of the shattered armies east of the Elbe, the German General in command had still not come forward late yesterday
