Post-War Draft Held Dangerous

Universal military training for youth after the war would lead to a dangerous situation, according to the National Council for Prevention of War, said yesterday.

Libby debated the question of whether the United States should require a part military training of its youth after the war with Japan. Charles H. Henshaw, retired commander of the 3rd Division, Eastern National Guard, at the Charles Street Forum.

Gen. Henshaw based his argument for such training on the premise that it would tend to keep youth out of "terrors" that it would be beneficial to youth, and that it would make any possible future war more difficult to start.

Blazing Air Battles Rage

Because the German planes did not bomb and only straggled around the Army territory, it seems likely that they were sent up merely to draw off American fighters so that they could not help carry up the German bomber-attack to the south in the First Army sector.

ALLIED BOMBERS OUT
LONDON, Dec. 17 (AP)—Heavy bombers of the RAF tonight raided the German cities of Cologne and railway center, following daylight American heavy bomber raids on Austria.

It was the RAF's first raid on Cologne since the December 14-15 attacks, when it was immediately answered. The big black British Lancasters went aloft after a day of unfavorable weather over the continent, but kept British-bombed American warplanes grounded.

Heavy bombers of the U. S. 8th Air Force, based in Italy, also met the first large formations of Me 262 they had seen in more than a month, when they attacked rail yards at Salzburg, Austria, and bombed the Austrian city of Wien.

Flying Personnel and Liberators from Italy hammered installations in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia Saturday in a day of diversified attacks in which 40 planes were lost.

At the time Moscow's reaction to the gesture of friendship in the Polish government's orders to the underground army to co-operate in the fighting into Poland and its iron-ore supplies in the west.

use of support from Churchill in Teheran and was growing impatient with waiting for some public acknowledgment of the deal. Churchill was vitriolic with passion after the conference and identified last night at Southern University, as that of William P. that he thought that the Curzon line should be the basis of negotiation.

He said that, in his judgment, the Russian demands on Poland were fair. Roosevelt's part in the deal at Teheran is not quite clear. It appears that he was not present at the time when Premier Stalin and Churchill reached their understanding on the division of the Balkans and the partition of Poland. But Churchill has said that there was at least some agreement in London to support the understanding in Moscow that the Curzon line should be the basis of negotiation.

Yanks Fight In No. Burma

REARMO, Northern Burma, Dec. 17 (AP)—American infantry and artillery units known as the "Mule Train Force" are now fighting in the North Burma area and advance elements of this unit are closer to Mandalay than any other Allied forces in Burma. It was disclosed today.

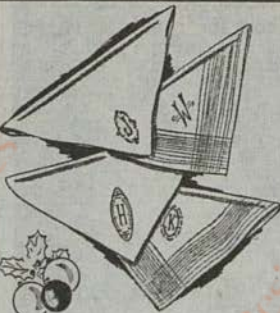

U. S. force is under the command of Brig. Gen. John P. Willey of Washington, Va. The first force that American ground troops were fighting alongside the British and Chinese was released after an American unit commanded by Col. Ernest Patrick of Carroll, Calif. made contact with the Japanese at "Pawnee," 20 miles south of Bhamo and some 120 miles north of Mandalay. Col. Baderbrook, in Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's anti-law.

The action at "Pawnee" occurred on the night of Dec. 9 when a small party of Japanese attacked U. S. and Chinese positions. The enemy suffered 50 killed before retreating southward.

Regional Director Arthur C. Gorman of the War Relocation Commission yesterday appealed to New England farm hands and farmers to work in war plants for the winter.

Gorman said that "the increased demand of our armed forces has resulted in a serious manpower problem" and that many New England plants were seeking workers for seasonal periods.

Manila and Tokio

The successful landings on Mindoro Island and the rapid advance of the ground troops seem to mean that at last we can get as many carrier-based planes into the air at various places as the Japanese ran out of their scores of fields, streaming rapidly from Leyte through narrow, twisting, inland passages and the Gulf Sea, to southern Mindoro, to destroy our transports and other craft exposed to the exposure to annihilation by the land-based planes. But the attacks from the air on MacArthur's armada are reported to have been few and feeble, not only because our machines had landed fields from which they might take off but because we had a huge number of the fleet. Moreover, our task force encountered no submarines or torpedo boats.

Either the surprise was again complete, which is difficult to believe, or Japan's naval and air units in the Philippines are less powerful than they seemed to be some months ago. We can guess that devices have been perfected for the neutralization of the Japanese, but the tactical losses of the MacArthur expedition are a strong indication that the plan is very weak in that section.

Does this latest stroke mean that there are landings soon on Formosa and the nearby Asiatic coast mainland, with continued strategic blows of the planes in the East Indies and Malaya in which the Japanese depend mainly for their oil and rubber?

The military experts are inclined to think so. They are in the daring tactics the pattern of the operations which preceded the present drive on the western European front. So far as ships and planes go, our forces can do about as they please. A landing on the mainland is apparently feasible, but whether the troops put ashore would be strong enough to withstand attacks from Japanese divisions is another matter.

Now that MacArthur's Army planes are 150 miles from Manila, the newspaper readers can get into the possibility that the Battle of Manila is not only a tactical but a strategic one. As they are only 750 miles from the Japanese, it is not likely that the Japs could make them unmanageable. But the Mindoro venture is a hint that we can move from Mindoro to Luzon, and from there to Manila. The Japs have a large force which apparently included battleships, cruisers and destroyers gives support to this theory. If we should enter the Boninas and make them a large base for Army air operations, not only Japs but the Japanese navy would be in a bad way. The Japs would have to evacuate the whole of the Philippines.

As Manila is more than 1800 miles from Tokyo, it is not Japs' proper base for operations of communication and her outlying parts which MacArthur is now using as his headquarters at the capital of the Philippines. The capital of Japan itself would be open to us now if we were on the island. These are the islands, therefore, which are clearly to fight prominently in the new campaign now on. If our forces could reach Tokyo to Japan is pronounced as it seems to be throughout the Philippines.
