Dear Lady Harris:

Herewith please find the copy of Sir Archibald's book that I referred to you about on the phone a few days ago.

Unfortunately it does not have a dustwrapper, but it is otherwise in good condition.

At one time it had more than the pencilled signature in it. I should imagine you would be able to rub the rest of it out if you wished to do that.

These copies are coming to be very hard to get hold of. I have been on the lookout for years for copies of my own "Night-Flyer", without any success. Becoming collectors' items does put the authors in the category of being museum pieces!

With all good wishes to you both,

Sincerely,

Robert Lytton

Dear Lady Harris:

Herewith please find the copy of Sir Arthur's book that I spoke to you about on the phone a few days ago.

Unfortunately it does not have a xxx xxx, but it is otherwise in good condition.

At one time it had more than the xxx signature in it. I should imagine you would be able to rub xxx rest of it xxx if you wished to do that.

These copies are coming to be very hard to get hold of. I have been on the xxx for years for copies of my own "Night Fighter", without any success. Becoming collectors' item does put the xxx in the category of being museum prices!.

With all good wishes to you both,

Sincerely,

Robert Wright
