

Jews' Tobacco Scandal

The London press is rather concerned at the moment about a scandal over cigarettes for the soldiers in India.

In the House of Commons it has already been declared that real revolts have taken place among the soldiers over the bad quality of the cigarettes. The soldiers have declared that instead of tobacco, horse manure had been used.

According to the latest press reports it seems that the whole scandal is reflected on a huge English-Jewish business.

A number of English Jews, who had never had anything to do with tobacco products before, founded a business firm in London and then went at once to India, where they received a contract from the Indian Government to supply their so-called V. cigarettes.

This war-contribution has apparently put millions into the pockets of this Jewish bogus firm. The makers of the cigarettes could not at first be traced.

Estonia's Youth Protests

The academic youth of Estonia has demonstrated against the so-called "liberation" of a number of "Soviet peoples." A demonstration of protest was held in the Technical High School at Reval.

The Rector of the school reminded his audience of the sufferings of the Estonian people at the time of the occupation of the country by Soviet troops. He said that his predecessor, three professors as well as numerous students had been deported by the Soviets. The Rector then registered his emphatic protest against the Soviet assertion that the Estonian people had voluntarily joined up with the Soviet Union.

"We do not desire," said the Rector in conclusion, "to be 'liberated' by the Soviets, as even a short occupation of our country by the Soviets would mean our death."

Spain Refuses Exchange Plan

In the periodical, "Economia Mundial," which echoes the opinions of the Ministry of Trade, the well-known financial politician and Professor of Economics at Madrid University, German Beracer, discusses the Anglo-American new Finance and Exchange Plan.

He says it is of no use to Spain, Britain and America knowing that the Gold Standard can no longer be introduced in its old form, are trying to inaugurate the old system in a new form, and on an international basis. They intend, in fact, to have all the advantages of the old method, without its disadvantages, and to set up an international committee to arrange for an international exchange, which would do away with the various individual interests which led to so much intrigue, mistrust and jealousy, and combine all under one stabilised exchange.

A stable exchange is good, but experience has taught Spain that it is possible to live without a stable exchange. Let national economy be stabilised and automatically the money market will right itself even without destroying the Small Exchange blocks.

William Joyce Sees

Churchill as Pro Soviet

Britain's "Slough of Despond" Deepens

William Joyce paid a glowing tribute to the prowess of the German Forces in his broadcast from Germany at 1.30 yesterday afternoon when he addressed the English-speaking world.

Joyce related the fine stand of the German Forces against the hordes of Soviets, and said: "The fighting spirit of the German Forces is of the finest quality: their determination, valour and military skill is not only unimpaired, but is stimulated by the heat of battle."

In the meantime, continued Joyce, it was evident that the political offensive being directed against Britain was to receive no resistance whatever from that nation. The Soviets were suffering enormous losses, and every 100 yards of advance they made was at the cost of blood, and the sacrifice of much material of war.

"Churchill in his old age has become as pro-Soviet as in his younger days he was anti-Soviet," exclaimed Joyce epigrammatically.

Here the broadcaster turned to the stirring joining of issue between England and Ireland, as the result of which the traffic between the two countries had been stopped by Mr. Churchill, and certain newspapers were now clamouring for sanctions against Ireland. Joyce at once agreed that he had no wish to enter into a discussion of the principles of International Law as affecting non-combatant nations: these provisions were so clearly defined as to render any debate upon them superfluous.

Freemasonry—the Vanguard of Bolshevism

By Erich Ehlers

As a result of numerous questions on the part of various masonic lodges and freemasons as to whether it was possible to be a freemason and belong to the Communist Party at one and the same time, the "Grand Orient of France" in 1937 saw itself obliged to express an opinion on this subject. In accordance with the usual Masonic tactics it avoided revealing its true attitude with regard to this problem and instead chose to publish a letter it had received from the notorious French Communist leader, Maurice Thorez. The latter stated that the principles of his party did not permit a party member to belong to a masonic lodge at one and the same time, and added that in his opinion membership of a masonic lodge was incompatible with membership of the Communist Party.

Thorez referred to the report of a meeting held by the Comintern in 1922, which clearly shows the close relations existing between the leaders of the Communist Party in France and the masonic lodges.

These relations were such that the Comintern, that is to say the leaders of the French Communist Party feared that freemasonry would gain the upper hand. For this very reason the "Grand Orient of France" refrained from expressing its attitude openly and instead quoted Thorez, thus confirming the partial attitude of freemasonry towards Communism, from which it only differs in the choice of its fighting methods. The partiality of freemasonry to Communism can be seen from a masonic document published in 1936, which announced the setting up of a masonic study-circle for the U.S.S.R. and proceeded to sing the praises of the Soviet Union and Bolshevism as follows: "A new community based on the idea of brotherhood has been set up, namely the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republic, which, populated by a mighty nation of 170 million persons, who have thrown off the yoke of the Tsarist regime, to-day forms a homogeneous state, which during the past eight years has become the cardinal point of international security."

The document continues with the words: "As you know, certain parties and certain governments, either for personal or for religious reasons, refuse to acknowledge the noble efforts which are being made to set up a new world order and continue to fight against the work of liberation which is in progress in the U.S.S.R. Nevertheless a new order and a new world will be set up, in which the words 'freedom,' 'equality,' and 'brotherhood' will receive their true significance. We freemasons must not remain indifferent to this mighty work, and we therefore consider it the duty of freemasonry, in keeping with its general principles, to promote the interest and the study on the part of freemasons in the Soviet Union, which we regard as the motive power of world peace and social progress."

So much for this document which in conclusion added that those freemasons who had visited the Soviet Union would give lectures on their experiences and impressions there to the members of the study-circle and that various Soviet propaganda films, which had been prohibited for public release, would be shown to the study-circle, as had once before been the case under the chairmanship of the notorious woman freemason, Eliane Brault, head of the women freemasons. The document finally stated that a representative of the study-circle was to be sent to the Soviet Union in order to make extensive investigations there and stressed that his mission would be all the more significant according to the number of freemasons he represented and that it was therefore the duty of every freemason who desired a better world for mankind to join the study-circle and support its work.

In 1937 this masonic circle of friends of the Soviet Union—which would surely have been a more appropriate name for the study-circle—distributed a circular among members asking them to take part in two masonic tours of the Soviet Union. It was pointed out in the circular that these tours had been organised at the wish of various lodges, in particular the masonic lodges "Thebab" and "Amities Internationales," and that members participating in these tours would be officially received as freemasons.

As had already been announced in the masonic document issued in 1936, this study-circle was extremely active and its activity served the purposes of Bolshevik propaganda exclusively. The Communist propaganda activity of the French freemasons was not however limited to this study-circle but also made use of all the masonic lodges throughout France, especially in Paris. During the years from 1933 to 1939 more than 230 lodge meetings consisting of lectures about the Soviet

NEWS IN BRIEF

An American agricultural and mining commission has arrived in Abyssinia.

The London "Daily Sketch" publishes a picture of the famous Colosseum in Rome with the caption: "Is this worth the bones of a British soldier?" It adds that in any case such old cultural monuments must be destroyed if it is to the advantage of the English.

The carrying out of the mobilisation in Estonia is almost complete. A greater percentage of the men reported voluntarily for war service.

The Moscow magazine, "War and the Working-Class," describes the Spanish State Chief as bandit and hopes that he will not come out of this war "Scot-free."

According to a report from London the Welsh coal miners' strike has spread. There are now between 60 and 70 thousand men on strike in the Welsh coal mining area alone.

The murdered Serbian Cabinet Chief, Colonel Massalovitch, was given a State Funeral on Thursday.

The British News Service reports from Detroit that the manufacture of aircraft for the United States Navy in the factory of Messrs. Briggs Manufacturing Co. has been brought practically to a standstill through the strike of 7,000 workers.

The Egyptian Prime Minister has protested against the declaration made by Smuts to make Palestine the National homeland for the Jews.

General Field-Marshal Rommel has inspected the defences along the Bay of Biscay and Normandy and in the naval port of Cherbourg.

"The fact that the gigantic movement which is upsetting the world is being accomplished in sorrow and in pain is in accordance with the eternal law of a Providence which not only brings to pass by struggle all that which is grand, but makes one create in grief," Adolf Hitler.

The success of the voluntary recruiting for the various newly-formed detachments of the Italian Forces is shown in a report from a recruiting bureau in Turin for the forming of new parachute troop battalions where no fewer than 2,800 youths have volunteered. Similar reports come from Majland, Venice, Genoa, Bologna and many other towns.

Union were held in the masonic lodges in Paris and suburbs.

The tendency of these lectures, 75 of which were held by persons who had visited the Soviet Union during the years from 1933 to 1936 alone, can be seen from the nature of the document issued in 1936 from the fact that numerous Soviet propaganda films were shown at masonic meetings, which had been prohibited for public release, and that various Communist functionaries spoke at these meetings. Among these speakers who supported the pro-Bolshevik meetings of the freemasons were a number of men, who played an important political part in France, such as, for instance, political delegates like Montagnon and Paul Perrin (the latter visited Moscow at the head of a French officers' delegation and was full of praise for the Red Army) and senators like Bachet and Brenier or even ministers like Marc Rucart.

There can be no doubt about the fact that this masonic propaganda work rendered invaluable services to Bolshevism, for, by means of lectures, films, the circulation of appropriate literature and the organisation of masonic tours to the Soviet Union, Communism systematically permeated those circles of the middle-class intelligentsia which met together in the masonic lodges. This class of people, who on the whole were not susceptible to Communist propaganda, was thus slowly but surely poisoned from within by the Bolshevik germ to such an extent that it has been extremely difficult to bring this class of persons in France to realise the necessity of combatting the Bolshevik danger which threatens Europe.

The significance of this process of Bolshevik decomposition in the masonic lodges cannot be overestimated. Communist propaganda not only exerted its pernicious influence on the members of the middle class who belonged to masonic lodges but also on other circles of the French nation thanks to the underhand work of those freemasons who were active in political, intellectual, cultural and commercial spheres—indeed freemasonry in France can well be described as the vanguard of Bolshevism.

OBITUARY

We have to record the death of Mr. Ph. de Carteret, of La Fregondière, at the age of 76. Mr. de Carteret, who owned this property, was not in robust health, but was fairly active, and was tending to his affairs as usual on Tuesday evening. He died on Thursday morning. The funeral took place last Saturday. Two deaths occurred in Sark on one day—a rare happening.
