

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
BERLIN, Nov. 12 (AP)—
Adolf Hitler and Soviet Premier Vyacheslav Molotoff, meeting for the first time in their lives, conferred well into Berlin's blackout tonight on matters that may exert a profound effect on Axis movements toward the Dardanelles and Near East.

They talked for nearly 2½ hours in Berlin's splendidly-remodeled Chancellery. With them were German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, Russian Foreign Vice-Commissar V. G. Dekanozov

and an interpreter, for neither Hitler nor Molotoff speaks the other's language.
A curious crowd stood outside the inky windows of the Chancellery, dark like every other Berlin building for the duration of the war. But the sun went down and the moon began to shine brightly and still Molotoff did not emerge.

Then, at 6:20 p. m. (11:20 a. m., E. S. T.), Molotoff and his aids left the Chancellery by motor car.
Molotoff called on the chief of the Nazi state after he had talked with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

The drums of the S. S. (Black Shirt Elite Guard) were rolling when the car containing Molotoff and Baron von Doernberg, protocol chief of the Foreign Office, drew up in front of the Chancellery.

East Boston Youths Claim Draft Honor

Ward 1 Volunteers First of 94 to Be Called Monday

PETER M. AMICO

ROCCO V. CARISTO

By JOSEPH F. DINNEEN

The chances of a man's being drawn in the first draft a week from today are comparable with that of winning a horse in a sweepstake, and if you are within the age and have not volunteered, you might as well relax. From present indications you might as well relax for about six months because the demand of volunteers to be accommodated in the draft—all seeking the honor of being among the first called or anxious to get their year of service over—is so great that there seems to be some difficulty even accommodating the volunteers.

When you consider that there are only 94 men in Boston out of 96,000 to be called next Monday you can understand why Rocco Vincenzo Caristo and Peter Maria Amico of East Boston are so delighted that they are dancing jigs.
Both are perfect physical specimens. Both have volunteered for immediate service and they are Nos. 1 and 2 on the list in Ward 1, Precinct 1, and because they come from the first precinct in the first ward and are the first volunteers, they may claim to be the first men selected under the 1940 Selective Service act in Boston.

Peter Maria Amico lives at 32 Harvard st. with his mother and his sister. His mother is rather small, stoutish, a genial, affable, kindly Italian immigrant, formerly of Hinchman st., in the North End, where her four children were born, and where her husband died 20 years ago.

Greeks Smash
Italian Effort to Rally Forces

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Nov. 12 (UP)—Italian efforts to rally invading forces in Greece have been "completely smashed," frontier dispatches from Ohrid reported today.
It was asserted that an Italian counter-offensive, launched yesterday on the extreme right wing of the Koritza front, had failed.
Ohrid dispatches said that in one sector Italian counter-attacking forces had lost 12 officers, about 630 men and huge quantities of war material.
(British military quarters in London said that latest reports from Greece indicated an Italian failure in the Pindus Mountain district. It was said that Italian troops falling back from their ill-starred attempt to take Janina had lost 11 officers and 600 men.)
Dispatches from Ohrid said that Greeks had "badly defeated" an entire Italian division, which had been forced to retreat to the Albanian frontier.
The Italian counter-offensive, it was reported, was launched yesterday on the right wing of the Koritza sector. Koritza is the main Italian military base in southern Albania.

Peckinpugh
New Manager of Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12 (AP)— Roger Peckinpugh is the new manager of the Cleveland Indians.
In taking the job Peckinpugh becomes a baseball rarity—twice manager of the same major league club.
His previous tenure, started in 1928, ended with his discharge in mid-season, 1933.
"Peck," who is 49 and was once a star shortstop, succeeds Oscar Vitt, who was released after he led the rebellious tribe into second place this year.
Alva Bradley, the club president who fired Peckinpugh seven years ago, announced Peckinpugh signed a two-year contract today.
Bradley had made the manager-ship a mystery for several weeks.
He presented "Peck" at the start of a sports writers' luncheon and said:
"Meet the new manager."

Two Suspects Seized
After Allston Holdup

Two men are being held by the Brighton police in connection with the armed holdup of a watchman of a restaurant at Harvard st. and Brighton av., Allston, early this morning, in which the cash register was looted of an undetermined amount of cash. The first arrest followed a wild chase by Metropolitan police, during which three shots were fired. The second suspect was arrested later.
Augmented by over 30 policemen from Watertown, Brighton, Cambridge and Boston the Metropolitan police were unable to locate the other three after an intense search of the neighborhood for over an hour with floodlights.

The captured men are being held at the Brighton Police Station as suspicious persons. One suspect suffered minor injuries sustained when he jumped from the fleeing car before it crashed into a pole.

Skunk Becomes a Hero

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—
The American Wildlife Institute today hailed the lowly and unpopular skunk as the new woodland hero of the land.
The much-avoided little animal has proven his right to recognition on the hushed slopes of the New York Conservation Department's Saratoga nursery, world's largest forest tree production plant.
It happened this way:
Zealously cultivating several million seedlings and transplants, the Saratoga scientists suddenly became alarmed when they discovered the nursery tract harbored almost as many grub worms as tree shoots.
A grub worm, if you don't know, feels the same way about a future tree as a cat does about a canary.
The worms began cutting into the young trees and there wasn't how the scientists could do about it.
Enter the skunk—just a lone skunk traveling unaccompanied.
Now grubs make a tasty morsel for skunks, so the one that arrived at Saratoga suddenly found himself overwhelmed with a delicious plenty of the things he holds best in life.

The seedling situation improved remarkably. Nurserymen, fearful lest the skunk disappear, did everything possible to make him happy.
They even built him what are described as the finest living quarters ever provided for a skunk.
In "protective custody" since early Autumn, the little tree saver has become docile and gentle as he goes about his conservation work.
The skunk has not been deodorized, hence he commands the greatest of consideration even from those who don't realize the value of his work. No unnecessary noise is encouraged near his pen.
Things have been so easy that there are ugly rumors the animal is getting fat and lazy of late.
His work has been done well, though, and in America's conservation program he's saved whole forests-to-be.
His name is Eric the Eradicator.

British Bomb
Naval Base at Taranto, Italy

ROME, Nov. 12 (AP)—Bombing planes, presumed to be British, attacked Italy's main naval base at Taranto early today, badly damaging one warship, the Italian high command reported.
The high command said six planes which took part in the early morning raid were shot down, and some of their crews were captured. In addition, three other planes were believed to have been downed.
The big Taranto base is in the large Gulf of Taranto, between the "heel" and the "toe" of the Italian
"boot."

Fortresses Go to Britain This Month

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (UP)— Thirteen of the improved type flying fortress bombers are scheduled for delivery to Great Britain this month, an informed source said today.
They will be the first of the flying fortress type plane made available to the British. They are Boeings B-17C, third in the series of the four-motored, long-range craft which Air Corps officials believe to be the most potent bombers existent.
First of the B-17C's ordered by the Army last Spring was delivered to the Air Corps last month.

By the Associated Press
Within a space of 50 minutes today two powder plants—one engaged in filling defense orders—and a factory manufacturing railway torpedo signals were torn by explosions which killed at least 11 persons.

An undetermined number were injured in the explosions, one in western Pennsylvania, and in eastern Pennsylvaia, and a third on the New York Harbor shoreline of New Jersey.

Federal Bureau of Investigation authorities at Washington immediately launched an investigation into the blasts, although whether they would take full charge of the inquiries depended on whether substantial Federal interests were found in each instance.

First of the blasts—at 8:10 a. m.—
killed three men, when 1000 pounds of dynamite exploded at the Burton powder works of the American Cyanamid Corporation in the western Pennsylvania village of Edinburg, three miles

Willkie's Speech Outlines Party's Role in Congress

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—
Wendell L. Willkie's postscript speech of the 1940 presidential election received careful study in the capital's political circles today as the first definite outline of the course of action mapped for the Republican Party during the coming third Roosevelt Administration.

While seeking to assess the full implications of everything in Willkie's New York speech last night, politicians manifested general agreement that this threefold Republican legislative program was indicated:
1. Full support of all defense efforts and aid of Britain, with some reservations as to method;
2. Equal approval for laws assistance to the farmer, and protection of the jobless, aged and physically infirm, but again with reservations as to method.
3. Unrelenting opposition to "unlimited spending of borrowed money—the piling up of bureaucracy—the concentration of enormous power in the hands of the executive—the discouragement of enterprise—and the continuance of economic dependence for millions of our citizens upon the Government," as Willkie phrased it.

It's a choice bit of news—one of those events that happens infrequently in the bargain world—a purchase that ranks high.

The HOCKANUM MILLS of ROCKVILLE, CONNECTICUT are famous mills. They have a reputation for producing some of America's finest fabrics. Yes, your father or grandfather probably prided themselves on owning a coat or suit of this famed fabric for they have been an important name in fabric making since 1809.

Note, of course you don't find these fabrics on the bargain counter very often—fine makers the country over use this fabric in their quality lines—we made a fortunate purchase of their this season's sample bolts, salesman's samples, showroom display pieces—in most cases there were only sufficient lengths to make one, two or three of a pattern.

We had these tailored by two New England makers in the styling and tailoring Boston men prefer—made during their dull season... we made additional savings because of this and because of the dull season their tailoring craftsmen could give these garments painstaking care—note the hand felled collars, the hand sewn button holes, hand sewn sleeve linings.

HOCKANUM $26.90

ALSO MEN'S SUITS of HOCKANUM FABRICS at $21.90

The HANDSOME 1940 fabrics are the kind you expected to pay many dollars more for—note the unusually large selection with so many sample one or few of a kind colors or patterns—overcoats or zip lined coats in covert cloth, rugged herringbones, popular diagonal weave fabric, plaid or overplaid fleeces, tweeds in distinctive patterns, fly front military collar styles—and in suits 1940 selection in worsted, flannel or tweed fabrics, ever so many patterns. Conservative style garments that appeal to progressive young business men as well as professional men of position.

Washington's Attention Focused on Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—State Department attention focused on the Berlin conference today of Soviet Premier Vyacheslav Molotov and Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer of the Third Reich.

Although department officials were silent, in diplomatic quarters here some believed that Russia was prepared to collaborate even more closely with the Axis powers and that the efforts of the United States and Great Britain to improve their relations with Moscow were doomed to failure.

Among conceivable results of Molotov's visit which aroused speculation was the possibility that Russia might be prevailed upon by Germany to enter into a closer relationship with Japan through a non-aggression pact or a partnership in the triple alliance of Japan, Germany and Italy.

American policy toward Russia changed last Summer from condemnation of Soviet absorption of Baltic states to an active effort to improve relations. One tangible manifestation of this effort was the release of some $7,000,000 in machine tools for export to Russia.

Molotov Arrives for Conferences

Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotov reviews a guard of honor on arrival at Berlin today. With him are German Field Marshal Von Keitel and German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

Molotov—

Otto Meisner, Hitler's executive secretary, and other prominent Nazi military men stood at attention, gravely saluted and led the Russian statesman into the massive building and to the grand gallery where the Fuehrer stood amidst the splendor he himself helped to design.

Molotov, making his first visit to Germany, arrived at 11:05 a. m. (4:05 a. m., E. S. T.), accompanied by 33 aids, Ribbentrop and other high Nazis greeted him at the station and he was driven to Bellevue Castle, where he will stay. Later he talked with the Foreign Minister at the Foreign Office.

Although fanfare was absent from the greeting which the Russian statesman received as he left his special train at Anhalter Station, Germans made no secret of the fact that they regarded Molotov's visit of great consequence.

Some informed Nazis indicated an invitation might be extended to Russia to become the partner of Germany, Italy and Japan in planning their "new world order."

Molotov was given a solemn, unemotional welcome by von Ribbentrop and a number of high Nazi Government and military officials as he stepped from his train.

After a formal greeting, Von Ribbentrop conducted Molotov downstairs to review an honor guard in a downpour, and then the party left by automobile for Bellevue Castle, where the Russian will stay while he is in Berlin.

It was announced that Hitler would receive Molotov this afternoon in the Chancellery. A gala reception was arranged for tonight.

Except for two big Russian and Nazi flags and a screen of green laurel trees, adorned with strips of gold, which partly walled off the platform, the station was almost bare of decoration.

Simply appeared to be the keynote in contrast to the welcome accorded Italian, Hungarian and Yugoslav statesmen on the occasion of their recent visits here.

Molotov's special train halted several hundred feet from the spot on the platform where it had been expected to stop, and a large assembly of German dignitaries, augmented by the Japanese, Turkish and Chinese Ambassadors, and the Italian charge d'affaires (Ambassador Dino Alfieri has been ill for some time), had to move hurriedly forward to greet the visitor.

Ten minutes later, Molotov and Von Ribbentrop, accompanied by a German interpreter, headed a procession which filed along the platform to the distinguished visitor's room.

Molotov, smiling and talking animatedly in Russian, gesticulated approvingly toward the flags hanging side by side in the room. He was dressed soberly in a black sack suit, a white shirt and black tie, a pepper-and-salt overcoat and a light-gray slouch hat.

As Molotov emerged into the square outside the station, where the honor guard flanked by S. S. men in field gray had taken up their positions, a military band played the "Present Arms" march.

Molotov took off his hat every time he passed an officer. Unlike other state receptions, when bands have played the national anthems of visiting diplomats, the band lapsed into silence as soon as Molotov had finished taking the salute.

There were no flags decorating the streets along which Molotov was driven to Bellevue Castle.

Men and women watched curiously from windows of buildings opposite the station, but there were no shouts.

A crowd was gathered in the square before the Reich's Chancellery, but no cardboard flags were distributed as was the case when the pact between Germany, Italy and Japan was signed here Sept. 27.

Informed sources said the ceremonies today were patterned closely upon those attending Von Ribbentrop's state visit to Moscow.

At Bellevue Castle Molotov was welcomed by Dr. Otto Meisner, chief of Hitler's presidential Chancellery.

The Russian spokesman was accompanied here from Moscow by a staff of 33 experts on foreign affairs, commerce, aviation and industry. Also with him was the German Ambassador to Moscow, Count Friedrich von der Schulenburg.

Molotov set foot for the first time on German territory last night, when his special train entered the border town of Malkinia, which little more than a year ago was part of Poland.

The possibility of far-reaching decisions affecting Russia's relations with the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo partners was indicated by the Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, frequently the mouthpiece of the German Foreign Office.

This commentary declared close ties between Germany and Russia have "promoted relations between the U. S. S. R. and the friends and Allies of Germany."

"All four major Eurasian powers," it said, "are ready today to respect each other's vital interests."

(The Tokyo newspaper Asahi, commenting upon Molotov's trip, said it was necessary for Germany and Italy to "obtain full Soviet support for the establishment of a new world order." Asahi suggested that "it would be most advisable for Germany and Italy to come to a full political developments were independent of the war.

Russian-German policy, it said, "is independent of the outward conditions of the present, and therefore of the hostilities which today claim the attention of one of the partners."

Therefore, the present conflict cannot hinder the absolute will of the two powers to create ordered conditions on their border spheres."

Sections of the German press already have said flatly the question of Turkey and the Dardanelles would be within the scope of the talks.

(The Turkish radio and press last night expressed belief a German military move in the Balkans to aid Italy in her conflict with Greece was imminent, and said this might be the essential reason for Molotov's visit to Berlin. Most foreign observers in Istanbul interpreted the visit as a diplomatic setback to Turkey.)

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt,

meanwhile, stressed German efforts to isolate Britain diplomatically and said Molotov's visit to Berlin could be viewed as "a heavy blow to the Anglo-Saxon nations."

It pointedly suggested that in view of developments the United States should ask herself "whether it isn't a historical necessity to recognize the changing times and act accordingly."

The press gave Molotov's visit equal prominence with news from the war fronts, and the Fremdenblatt ranked the "historical" events of the day in the following order:

First, the arrival of the Russian Premier; second, the intensified German sea warfare against Britain's supply lines, and third, air "reprisals" on England.

RUSSIAN "MOLOTOFF BREADBASKET" BOMB

Reports of the damage done to Rumanian oil wells by the earthquake must be viewed with a realization that the Germans now control news transmission out of Bucharest. It is claimed that the greater part of the petroleum supplies have been saved, although some of the reservoirs are cracked. Some refineries, it is said, will have to shut down for two or three weeks for repairs. Production may be impaired for several months. In Rumania it was said that Germany has been able to transport only about one-third of the Rumanian oil production up to the present time and that fraction would still be available. Rumania's top output in the last year has not exceeded 6,500,000 tons of oil. It is admitted that damage to important refineries has been widespread. For months foreign observers have been of the opinion that Hitler would run out of oil and they have not yet figured what is keeping his war machine lubricated. Germany would have it understood that synthetic production is the answer, but figures from German sources give the lie to that statement. It is still quite possible that the quake in Rumania may cause serious damage to the Hitler war machine.

"The new world order" became the topic of conversation today between Germany and Russia. Foreign Commissar Molotov on his first visit to Berlin went into conference with Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop for discussions in which it has been predicted Russia would be invited to join with Germany, Italy and Japan in the planning of this new world. No Italian dignitary was on hand to greet Molotov when he arrived in Berlin. The meeting with Von Ribbentrop, it was believed, precedes a session with Hitler. Molotov's welcome to Berlin was formal and stiff. The hammer and sickle flew at the railroad station, but the streets were not decorated with the red flag as is customary when other dignitaries arrive. The German band failed to play the Russian anthem. In spite of the lack of fanfare, observers were of the opinion that the visit might have far-reaching consequences. London expected new economic agreements, but no military alliance. The arrival of Molotov virtually cancels the diplomatic negotiations which have continued for some weeks between representatives of Britain and the Soviet, as well as between the United States and the Soviet. Moscow said nothing, as usual, about the Molotov visit.

Scattered pieces on the picture puzzle of war. Bombers, presumed to be British, struck at Italy's main naval base of Taranto today, damaging one warship, the Italian high command admitted. Britain admits the loss of 65,609 tons of shipping in the first week of November. Today the German air force struck at another British convoy off Scotland. London said the Germans, as usual, had exaggerated tonnage losses, more than doubling actual losses. Overlooking this squabble, Britain's marine losses are growing greater each week. Italian communiques discussed at length the bombing operations over Greece and Egypt, but were not communicative on land operations, where the Greeks maintain they are rolling up high scores. German raiders, turned back from London today, struck at north-east coastal towns. British bombers were reported over the German sub base at Lorient, France, and airdromes at Brest, St. Malo and St. Brieux. Storms restricted air operations of both sides in the battle of Britain and invasion was impossible under the conditions. An Athens communique said British bombers raided Albanian ports last night. An Italian broadcast said the Italian Navy had cut and removed 12 miles of the British cable between Malta and Gibraltar, thus severing all connections between London and the Mediterranean region. The Italians, so proud of Marconi, must have heard of the radio. Britain uses it, too. In land operations the British claimed to have inflicted heavy losses on Italians near Gallabat, frontier post of the eastern Anglo-Sudan, a post recaptured from the Italians. The Vichy Government wiped out the private organizations which controlled France's industrial life in the old regime, including the notorious Comite Des Forges (steel trust) and the General Confederation of Labor.

Japs to Name Friend of U. S. as New Envoy

TOKIO, Nov. 12 (UP)—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, 63, former Foreign Minister and a leading exponent of Japanese-American friendship, is to be appointed Ambassador to the United States, it was learned today.

Nomura's name had been mentioned for the post ever since the recall of Kenuke Horinouchi. He has been considered a friend of the United States and in Washington diplomatic circles is known as "a good sport."

Confirmation that Nomura has been chosen for the post came in the midst of conferences between United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka. Grew had a long talk with Matsuoka on Sunday. They reviewed the general situation, but concrete results of the conversation were not clarified.

Uruguay announced construction of naval and air bases on the Atlantic Coast for the use by Western Hemisphere nations in event the Argentine naval base to defend the Straits of Magellan will be built at Puerto Desado. The obsolete bases at Puerto Madryn and Puerto Belgrano will be enlarged and modernized.

Britons Take Gloomy View of Molotoff Berlin Visit

LONDON, Nov. 12 (UP)—Britons took a gloomy view today of Russian Premier-Molotov's visit in Berlin. It was believed generally that Turkey would figure prominently in his conversations with Adolf Hitler and that the outcome might be a renewed German drive southward, directed at the Iraq oil fields, Suez and the expulsion of British interests from the eastern Mediterranean. The News Chronicle foresaw Russia putting pressure on Turkey to remain neutral, saying, "If German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop can now buy or extort the Kremlin's benediction on a German drive to the southeast, he will indeed have won a resounding diplomatic triumph. On his side will be Russia's unshakable determination not to be involved in war with Germany at this stage of the Anglo-German struggle. An attractive bribe might clinch the deal. If Molotov's visit proves to have less significance than we suppose we shall be pleasantly surprised."

The Times said Hitler was making "another bold attempt to counteract the growing stagnation of German foreign policy." It predicted that "both sides will go to great lengths to avoid war with each other."
The fact that Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, was visiting in Berlin lent credence to the theory that Turkey figured in the discussions. The supposition was that Hitler is trying to get Russia's help in bridling the Turks, to prevent their siding the Greeks or possibly moving into Syria in conjunction with the British.

Soviet circles here believed Molotov's trip might have been inspired by what they considered Britain's unfriendliness with Russia. Russians pointed out that Britain had offered to send an expeditionary force to help Finland during the Finnish-Russian war; that Britain had refused to recognize Russian annexation of the Baltic states, and had blocked $16,000,000 worth of gold belonging to those states in London, which Russia claimed, and that Britain had requisitioned 23 ships of the Baltic states despite Russia's claims to them.
Germany on the other hand has permitted Russia to participate in the new Danubian Commission and had been active in promoting better relations between Russia and Japan.
While all men of Greece are obligated to perform military service, voluntary enlistment also is permitted.

British Bomb Italian Bases to Aid Greeks

By the Associated Press
ATHENS, Nov. 12—British air raids blasted Italian bases behind the Italian invaders, the high command announced today, while Greek troops pursued shattered Fascist forces reported retreating in disorder along the whole fighting front.
A communique said British bombers destroyed a depot of combustible stores and started a fire visible for 100 miles, last night, at Durazzo, chief port of Albania.
At Valona, to the south, it said the British raiders blew up a munitions dump. The high command earlier had reported renewed raids on Valona by Greece's own planes. Ships at anchor in the bay and land facilities in the port used for reinforcement of the invasion army were bombed, it said.

Rumanian Oil Field Damage "Widespread"

By the Associated Press
BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 12—The German Army's preparation of military bases in Rumania was abandoned temporarily today as Nazi troops did rescue work among the ruins of homes, shops and factories razed by Sunday's devastating earthquake.

Reports from the quake-wrenched oil fields indicated damage to refineries was widespread, but enough oil remained in undamaged reservoirs to assure undiminished shipments for the Reich war machine.
Some observers, however, pointed out another handicap to the German program in the earthquake's partial disruption of agriculture. Much fall plowing is not yet completed, and tens of thousands of peasants will be called from the land to aid in reconstruction, putting a drain on the nation's labor supply.

German Army tanks and trucks, as well as men, are participating in the rehabilitation and relief work. Even some Rumanians who are opposed to German military control of the country have expressed appreciation for the prompt aid.
German soldiers and Rumanian Iron Guardists have recovered 260 more bodies from wrecked cities, where the total death toll was estimated at 1000 to 2000, with untold others injured and homeless.
Once beautiful Bucharest was scarred with charred ruins where fire followed the building-cracking shocks.

Fires broke out, too, in the tinder-box oil fields, but most of the blazes were small and brought under control quickly.
Throughout the fields, which are one of Germany's major sources of supply, damage to refineries was great. Preliminary examination, however, disclosed that although some of the cracked, most of the petroleum supplies had been saved.

Most of the pipelines and railroad facilities with which the petroleum is removed for shipment to Germany were intact.
Some refineries will be shut down two or three weeks for repairs, it was said.

Experts predicted that if the damage to casings was as extensive as first feared, production would be impaired for several months.
Sources here did not expect that to affect Germany seriously since the Nazis up to now have been unable to transport more than one-third of Rumania's total oil production. They said that that fraction certainly still would be available.

Fires still were burning here today in the wrecked Carlton block where hundreds of apartment dwellers and an undetermined number of would-be rescuers were trapped and killed.
The government ordered 200 other large Bucharest buildings evacuated because of the hazard of collapse.

Many bodies still are entombed in Bucharest, Galati and Focsani. Scores of Bucharest's streets were roped off to protect pedestrians from falling masonry. Many other streets were jammed with families moving with their possessions.
An engineer of the construction firm which built the Carlton block ordered a close inspection of every building for which his firm contracted in the past 10 years.

Quake May Increase Rumanian Oil Flow

Rumania's oil may have increased in flow as a result of the earthquake, according to Harvard scientists familiar both with seismology and Rumania.
Dr. L. Don Leet, director of the Harvard seismological station, announced that the tremors that toppled buildings in Bucharest originated, according to recording instruments, from 50 to 100 miles below the earth's surface and would not materially affect, probably, oil deposits lying only two miles below the surface. In other cases, he said, earthquakes had even operated to increase the flow of oil wells.
Prof. Kirby F. Mather, Harvard geologist, familiar with the geology of Rumania, also doubted that the earthquake had materially affected oil flow. The scientists were commenting on the underground sources of oil, not referring to temporary damage to derrick or pipe-line installations above ground.

British Admit 13 Ships Lost in One Week

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Britain lost 13 merchant ships totaling 65,609 tons in the week ending Nov. 3-4, the Admiralty announced today. Other shipping losses that week were reported as four Allied ships totaling 5403 tons and one neutral ship of 1583 tons.

The total of 72,595 tons included the Empress of Britain, the Admiralty said, adding that excluding that large liner British losses amounted to 23,261 tons—whereas the enemy, with their usual exaggeration, claimed to have sunk in the week under review 134,900 tons of our merchant shipping.

Announcement of the shipping losses was followed by an Admiralty statement denying German claims that an entire convoy of 15 to 20 ships totaling 86,000 tons had been sunk by German surface raiders in the Atlantic.

"It can now be stated," the Admiralty said, "that a substantial majority of the ships forming the convoy attacked by an enemy surface raider last week eluded the raider. No details were given concerning the number of ships safe, and the identity of the raider was not mentioned.

(Reports at the time of the attack indicated the raider might have been either of the German pocket battleships Admiral Scheer or Luetzow.)

Recalling the recent arrival of Italian submarine crew members as prisoners taken by British forces in the Atlantic naval circles said it was impossible to prevent some undersea craft from slipping past Gibraltar, because the strait is 10 miles wide and more than 300 fathoms deep in its deepest part.

Mines cannot be laid deep enough to block the passage completely, it was pointed out.

Naval circles recalled that in the last war British submarines got through the strongly guarded Dardanelles and into the Sea of Marmara—through a passage only a mile wide.

Nazis Say Seven Ships in Convoy Sunk

BERLIN, Nov. 12 (AP)—Sinking of seven ships totaling 44,000 tons in an aerial attack on a British convoy southeast of Harwich, England, yesterday was announced by the German High Command today. Five other ships in the convoy were "severely" damaged, the communiqué said.

The high command also stated a long-distance scouting plane had sunk a 2500-ton steamer in the Atlantic, while German sea planes "successfully bombed" two British merchantmen totaling 14,000 tons.

Change in Chinese Immigration Rules Expected Here

Possibility of a change in Federal regulations governing the route over which Chinese enter New England from China is seen here as the result of the Eastern Steamship Lines proposal to suspend passenger operations on their Boston-Yarmouth, N. S., service this winter.

Since the Federal law requiring Chinese to approach United States by water was put into effect some years ago to bring an end to the great influx over the Canadian border, including many who made their way here illegally, the Eastern Steamship Lines Yarmouth boat has been designated as the legal method of entry for those coming to New England territory.

Influential Chinese are concerned over the proposed suspension of the eastern service because it would automatically close the route of entry.

Wong Jane and Lee Foo, business men in Boston's Chinatown, through Ex-Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, and John F. Mulcahey, district director of immigration here, James E. Fitzgerald, inspector-in-charge of the Chinese division, and Harold R. Kingsley of the Canadian Pacific are cooperating in a move to work out a solution of the problem.

Officials of the Canadian Pacific, which moves the Chinese from Vancouver, B. C., British port of entry in Canada, across the continent to Yarmouth, are endeavoring to arrange with the Canadian National Steamships to handle the movement out of Halifax for Boston. If this move is unsuccessful, authorities will appeal to the United States Department of Justice to suspend the requirement that Chinese enter Boston by water and permit their entry by rail.

Yesterday's communique, denying Italian claims of its recapture, said Gallabat still was in British hands.

New Soviet-Nazi Pact Coming, Says Pertinax

By PERTINAX
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, is expected soon to sign a German-Russian agreement which will bring up to date the arrangements arrived at in the Soviet capital on Sept. 29, 1939, when Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, visited it for the second time.

It will be remembered that, more than once toward the end of 1939, and in the first week of 1940, it was announced from Berlin that M. Molotov would soon return the calls paid by the German Foreign Minister. On every occasion, stern denials were issued on the Russian side. Obviously, the Soviet rulers did not wish to commit themselves more deeply than they had done on the eve and at the beginning of the European war.

Have M. Stalin and his advisers, by now, made up their minds to take an additional step forward? Here is at any rate, a partial answer to that question.

To understand what is at stake today between Germany and Soviet Russia, it is necessary to go back to the middle of October. About 10 days before, German troops had been rushed into Rumania and Soviet diplomacy kept on bitterly complaining that such a move overstepped the limits of the German-Russian understanding of Sept. 29, 1939, and, moreover, that Germany had failed to give previous notice to Moscow of what she intended to do. In fact, Russia was confronted with an accomplished fact.

The German Ambassador, Count

Silence Engulfs Bombed Freighter

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Silence engulfed the bombed British freighter Balmore today on the heels of a desperate distress signal which indicated the vessel's crew of 17 was going down without benefit of lifeboats.

Her last reported position roughly was 300 miles west of Ireland and it was from there that she first signaled an attack by German warplanes. The call was heard by the Japanese liner Fushimi Maru yesterday morning.

Later, the British relay station GCK reported receiving a second message from the Balmore which said the 1925-ton ship's port lifeboats were swamped, and help was "urgently desired."

Finally, at 10:16 p. m. (E. S. T.), last night, Mackay radio reported intercepting this terse, grim message: "Almost gone, 17 men on board, no boats, do your best."

There was no further word from the stricken vessel.

From the above it is clear that the present German-Russian negotiation has been initiated on Germany's demand. Before long we shall know to what extent she has won her point. If, from the Molotov-Ribbentrop-Hitler meeting, nothing comes forth but fresh economic agreements after the barter pattern and assurances of mutual good will or general cooperation, the relations of the Nazi and of the Soviet empires will bid fair to continue practically on the same lines as formerly.

On the contrary, were territorial arrangements to be concluded and, above all, published, it ought to be feared lest the Russian power, impressed by Germany's military might, has not shown itself unwilling to dishearten and hold back the Turks.

Naval Base

Italians Claim
Advance in Egypt

The Italian communique reported Italian submarines attacked large British naval forces, including warships and convoys, in the central Mediterranean in the past few days.

In these attacks, it was said, one large warship was damaged by torpedoes, and two steamers were sunk. British mechanized forces were reported put to flight by Italian "fast columns" in the region of Alam El Hatt, southeast of the Italian base at Sidi Barrani in northern Africa. The Italians also reported bombing railroad stations southwest of Alexandria, Egypt, British defense works at Matruh, and British air fields in Egypt.

The communique said the British bombed Derna, hitting houses and causing civilian casualties, and Bengasi, causing casualties in a prison colony which was hit. Bardia and Sidi Barrani also were reported attacked by British planes.

Nazi Submarine Base at Lorient Bombed

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP)—British bombers were reported today to have attacked the German submarine base at Lorient, France, and airdromes at Brest, St. Malo and St. Brieux in daylight raids yesterday.

An Air Ministry communique said bad weather kept the British flyers from making any flights over German territory last night.

Strive to Save Lives of 43 Men Food Poisoned

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12 (AP)—Doctors and chemists at three hospitals today strove to save the lives of 43 men stricken by food poisoning—believed to be roach powder baked in pancakes—which killed 12 way-farers at a Salvation Army Home yesterday.

The stricken men were among 70 partaking of an Armistice Day breakfast at the "Army's" quarters in the Lawrenceville district of the city.

The home's cook, Arthur Wilson, 30, who Corner P. J. Henney said mixed the pancake batter, was among those ill. He told authorities he had no idea how the roach powder came to be mixed into the batter.

Adjt. Roy Barber told detectives there was a supply of the insect powder in the kitchen supply room when he took over management of the Salvation Army Home in September.

Barber said that when he took over the management he asked a former cook, in charge at that time if he had any of the powder used to exterminate insects, he said the former cook showed him a package of it in the supply cupboard adjoining the kitchen.

The former cook, who was discharged three weeks ago, was held by Philadelphia police for questioning. Police said that after going to Philadelphia he corresponded with acquaintances here.

A breakfast of pancakes, bacon coffee and sweet cake was served to 70 lodgers about 7:15 a. m. A few minutes later a half-dozen men began to moan with stomach cramps. Then a dozen men writhed in agony on their beds. When Deputy Coroners arrived beds in the home were virtually filled with men in agony.

Deputy Coroner Fred Wiehagen said:

"There were men even lying on floor. You'd be talking to a fellow and he'd fall down right before your eyes. They were holding their stomachs and their throats. They said they were cold and numb, that their stomachs were killing them."

As ambulances arrived, more men died. Others limped painfully to the ambulances.

All breakfast scraps, including samples of pancakes and uncooked batter were taken to the city morgue for chemical analysis.

The few men who partook only of bacon and coffee were the only ones who escaped the poison.

Sam Fowler, 71, a coal miner who was taken to a hospital, gave the following story:

"This is terrible. The Army has always fed us well. We know it's just a mistake. But it was awful. I don't remember much about the thing except that suddenly I was in such pain I just threw myself down on the concrete floor and rolled over and over."

Dr. Robert Kooser, resident physician at St. Francis Hospital, said the roach powder—sodium fluoride—is "a terrible poison."

"It destroys the blood cells," he said. Officials said sodium fluoride is a quick-acting white substance that might easily be mistaken for flour of baking powder. As soon as the poison was determined, hospitals swiftly treated the victims with its antidote—calcium chloride.

Wilson, the new cook, said: "When I heard the men were getting sick, I didn't know what to do. I had eaten a couple of cakes myself, so I mixed myself a shot of baking soda to make me vomit."

"I also gave soda to the other boys as they got sick."

100 Air Base Men Poisoned by Food

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Nov. 12 (AP)—Army, territorial and city medical authorities sought today to determine the source of food poisoning which struck approximately 100 workers at the Army Air Base construction project last Friday.

Capt. Donald Neil, constructing quartermaster, said food in the men's lunches was suspected, but they could find no one item that all the men ate. None of the stricken men was seriously affected.

Holdup

Car Hits Pole on Palfrey St.

Shortly after 5 o'clock this morning four men entered the restaurant by a side door and confronted James Pappas, 61, of 98 Waltham st., South End, the watchman. They ordered him into the cellar and while one of them held him captive the other three smashed open the cash register with a meat hatchet they picked up in the back room of the establishment.

After ordering the elderly watchman to remain in the store the quartet ran across the street to the Brighton Garage, jumped into a car that was parked in the rear and sped up Brighton st., in the direction of Watertown.

As the car raced through Watertown sq., it was noticed by Metropolitan policemen Charles K. Williams and Harold E. Cooke of the Speedway Station who had been advised by police radio to be on the lookout.

Picking up the chase on North Beacon st., the policemen sped after the car which swung into Mt. Auburn st. When the policemen fired three shots at the fleeing car it took a sharp turn into Palfrey st., where the operator evidently lost control and the car began careening from one side of the road to the other, until it crashed into a telegraph pole.

Just before it hit the pole the Brighton youth jumped from the vehicle and was captured by Williams and Cooke, who brought their car to a halt. The remaining three fled into back yards and disappeared.

Pappas, who was unharmed by the holdup men, described them as "somewhere between 19 and 26 years old and pretty wild looking."

Boy Rescues Woman After Auto Rolls Into Water at Quincy

QUINCY, Nov. 11—Quincy High School's varsity football co-captain, Harold Beston of 1245 Sea st., this afternoon waded out into several feet of water over a Hough's Neck mud flat to rescue 70-year-old Mrs. Ida Rupp, a passenger in an auto that had rolled down an incline from a parking space near the Quincy Yacht Club.

According to police, Ferdinand Rupp, 68, of 67 Lenox st., Hough's Neck, parked his car near the yacht club, leaving Mrs. Rupp in it while he went into a nearby store. The auto rolled down a hill onto mud flats exposed by the low tide. Mrs. Rupp screamed for help, and a boat put out from the yacht clubs float, but sank near the car before the rower could rescue the frightened woman. Beston waded out a few minutes later and carried Mrs. Rupp ashore.

Stand by Invalid at Two-Alarm Brookline Fire

One fireman was badly hurt, seven persons were forced to make a hasty exit to safety and an invalid, whose removal might cause serious consequences, was guarded while a two-alarm fire raged through the upper floor of the three-story apartment building at 12-14 Riverway road, Brookline, just before noon today. The cause of the fire was not immediately determined. A damage of $6000 resulted.

The fire started between the upper floor apartments. Sheets of flame were seen from the street and a passerby sounded the first alarm. On the arrival of Chief Selden R. Allen he immediately ordered a second alarm.

Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Skinner occupy an apartment on the first floor, with their son Martin, 9 months old. Mrs. Skinner, when warned of the fire, carried her son to the street. Mrs. W. J. Pinard, who lives on the first floor, opposite Dr. Skinner's apartment, carried her son Alward, 1 year, out of the building. Mrs. Philip J. Johnson, the invalid, lives on the second floor and her nurse, Miss Laura Murray, and a maid, Miss Catherine Healy, remained with her to move her if it became necessary. A fireman and policeman were also detailed to remain close by the apartment.

Mrs. Frances Feehan and Raymond Daggett were forced from another of the second-floor apartments. The upper-floor apartments where the fire started, are unoccupied. These apartments were gutted, but firemen confined the blaze to them.

Hoseman Edward Donahay sustained a severe laceration on his right hand. He was taken to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

DEDHAM, Nov. 11—Michael Flaherty, 9 Buckingham st., Hyde Park, and Mrs. Mary E. Walsh, 147 Milton st., Dedham, were seriously injured at 11:30 tonight when they were crossing the street at Four Corners, behind a bus from which they had alighted. The operator of the car was Norman C. Marler, 31, of 221 High st., Dedham.

Byrnes Likely New Pro Tempore Head of Senate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Senator James F. Byrnes one of President Roosevelt's chief legislative advisers, was advanced today as a likely candidate for Senate president pro tempore in a projected reorganization of the chamber's democratic machinery.

An active supporter of Mr. Roosevelt for a third term, Byrnes was expected to receive strong administration support for the post if a contest materialized.

Besides Byrnes, Senator Clark also was mentioned as a possible contender for the temporary presiding officer's post left vacant by the death of Senator Pittman Sunday. Pittman had been serving during the extended absence of Vice Pres. Garner from the capital.

Clark, who has opposed the administration's foreign policies, might draw some support from Democratic ranks and also from the Republican camp, providing the Republicans themselves do not enter a candidate. The entire Senate elects the President pro tempore, but also invariably the man is a member of the majority party.

SENATOR JAMES F. BYRNES

Another question confront Senate Democrats was the choice of a successor to Senator Minton, majority whip who was defeated for reelection. Minton goes out of office in January. Senator Hill, assistant whip, appeared to have the edge here.

Extensive changes in Senate standing committees also are in sight when the new Congress meets. Senator George was considered the probable successor to Pittman as head of the powerful Foreign Relations Committee. Since no Senator may serve as chairman of two committees, George's elevation to the foreign relations post automatically would terminate his chairmanship of the privileges and elections committee.

Chairmanship of the Judiciary committee, left vacant by the primary defeat of Senator Ashurst, appeared to lie either with Senator McCarran or Senator Van Nuys, both opponents of President Roosevelt's 1937 Supreme Court reorganization bill. Chairmanships ordinarily are awarded on the basis of seniority of service with a committee.

New Vitamin "K" May Decrease Birth Fatalities

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 12.—Predictions were made here today that the lives of thousands of persons, particularly mothers and their new-born babies, will be saved in future years by using a vitamin liquid which looks like cod liver oil.

It is vitamin K, one of the newest of the vitamin family, originally found in putrid fish and alfalfa meal, but now made synthetically, which stimulates clotting of the blood.

In a report today before the opening meeting of the Southern Medical Association, Dr. Walter Hume of Louisville declared that protracted bleeding during and following an operation or during childbirth is due in large part to a lack of prothrombin—the substance in the blood which causes it to clot.

Prothrombin deficiency is due to a lack of vitamin K, and bile salts which fail to combine properly to manufacture this important blood factor. "It seems now well established that deficiency of vitamin K results in prothrombin deficiency, and when this deficiency is of sufficient degree a failure of the clotting must ensue," the Louisville physician declared.

"Until there is a decision, so clear cut that the war cannot be begun again for at least a generation, there can be no peace."

He added that he has used it principally in the preventive treatment of patients with jaundice prior to and after operation. Other physicians added that they are using it extensively with mothers prior to childbirth as a preventive measure, and one declared "It will not be long until administration of vitamin K will be just as routine a method of life-saving before, during and after delivery as the administration of calcium to build a baby's bones and teeth."

The lives of more than 300 babies have been saved in one maternity hospital alone and it has been found particularly valuable in the immediate checking of hemorrhagic disease of the newborn, a type of spontaneous bleeding resembling hemophilia. It is not useful in the treatment of true hemophilia, however.

In many hospitals the number of cases of hemorrhage following operation for jaundice has been cut from 20 percent to zero, Dr. Hume declared. If the vitamin is not given hemorrhages result "and, further, in case of bleeding from this cause, vitamin K therapy is specific."

Smoking may cause many cases of "breaking out" on the skin, Dr. E. E. Barksdale of Danville, Va., told members of the association. It

The arsenic in itself is not harmful because it is present in such small amounts, and would not show up as a factor in causing skin outbreaks, he declared. However, when it is burned along with tobacco some persons prove allergic to it.

Claims Campaign Cost Both Sides Over $3,000,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic national committee, said today that Republican and Democratic partisans both had spent more than $3,000,000 in the Presidential campaign, but that the Republicans spent much more than we did.

He said it was for Congressional committees to decide whether either party violated the Hatch act limiting Presidential campaign expenditures to $3,000,000.

Receiving reporters at national committee headquarters after an overnight visit to the White House, Flynn said:

"I said before the election that tremendous sums were spent by the Republican party and I now repeat that tremendous sums were spent by the Republicans in every state in the Union."

Asked how much the Democrats spent, he said he was certain that the National Committee "kept within $3,000,000."

Later, in replying to questions, he conceded that this was extended when expenditures by all committees were taken into account.

The newly wed salesman, accompanied by his wife, entered the dining room of the hotel which he was to frequent. His order included roast chicken, but there was some delay.

Grandson of President of Portugal Stabbed

LISBON, Nov. 12 (AP)—President Antonio Carmona watched anxiously today the condition of his 21-year-old grandson, Oscar Carmona Da Silva Costa, who was stabbed twice in the abdomen last night when he attempted to defend the bishop of Aviero from an East Indian wielding a long knife.

Bishop Domnuel Da Lima Vidal was stabbed superficially in the chest. Police identified the assailant as Alfredo Ferreira Piedade, a native of Portuguese East India. Before he was subdued, he cut off two fingers of a policeman who intervened and severely bit Julio Cayolla, a colonial agent. The attack occurred at the entrance of a hall where President Carmona was opening the Colonial Congress.

Gov. Saltonstall Launches Red Cross Roll Call Here

Robert H. Hallowell (right), chairman of the Greater Boston Red Cross Roll Call, pins first button on Philip Maloof, No. 158 in draft, as Gov. Saltonstall and Miss Katherine Lovejoy, Red Cross nurse inducted into Army service, look on.

The American Red Cross Roll Call this year is more important than ever, not only to help people in the devastated countries of Europe but to prepare this nation for national defense. Gov. Leverett Saltonstall declared today as he officially launched the 24th annual drive in this area.

A crowd of 1000 braved the rain and high winds to witness the colorful ceremony of the raising of the American and Red Cross flags to the top of the flagpole in Postoffice Square at 12.30. A Marine Corps color guard from the Navy Yard, 100 Red Cross nurses in attractive uniforms and the Angel Guardian Band lent a brilliant setting to the ceremonies.

Robert H. Hallowell, chairman of the Greater Boston Red Cross Roll Call, made the first official enrollment in the drive by presenting Philip Maloof, No. 158 in the selective service draft, with a Red Cross button. Mr. Hallowell handed the membership card to Pilot Scott of the American Airways, who left immediately for Washington to carry the enrollment to Norman H. Davis, national chairman of the Red Cross. Miss Katherine Lovejoy, Red Cross nurse recently inducted into service and now stationed at Fort Banks as one of the first Red Cross nurses called by the Army, received a lovely bouquet of American Beauty roses tied with red, white and blue ribbon from Mr. Maloof. It represented a tribute from the new recruits in the Army to the Red Cross, "still the greatest mother" to the man in the service.

In the absence of Mayor Tobin, Louis Brems read the official proclamation, which asked for a stronger response to the rollcall than ever before because of the greater emergencies confronting the nation and the world. Gov. Saltonstall expressed confidence in the splendid support Massachusetts would give in memberships this year.

The chairman of the flag ceremony was William E. Chamberlain, executive director of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter. In the reviewing stand and introduced by Mr. Hallowell were the distinguished guests from the military and naval forces, state, Federal and city officials and Red Cross volunteers. Maj. Gen. James A. Woodruff, U. S. A., commanding General, 1st Corps Area; Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, U. S. N., commandant, 1st Naval District, Boston Navy Yard; Brig. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, adjutant general Massachusetts National Guard; U. S. Coast Guard Capt. T. A. Shanley; Col. H. C. Pierce, U. S. Marine Corps; Maj. Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt, commander of the 26th Division, N. C.; Brig. Gen. John H. Sherburne, Reserve officer; Joseph R. Hamlen, chairman of Boston Metropolitan Chapter; James Jackson, vice chairman, Boston Metropolitan Chapter; Miss Elizabeth McMahon, chairman of Massachusetts Red Cross nurses enrollment; Hon. Peter F. Tague, postmaster; Joseph F. Timilty, Police Commissioner; Mrs. R. M. Saltonstall and Major Philip Sherwood, chairman of branches and districts, Boston Metropolitan Chapter.

Past Explosions Have Killed Hundreds and Lost Millions

By the Associated Press

Major disasters resulting from explosions have taken hundreds of lives and destroyed millions of dollars in property in the nation during the last quarter-century.

One of the worst recent explosions was at the Hercules powder plant, Kenil, N. J., last Sept. 12, in which more than 50 persons were killed and the plant was leveled to a shambles. More than 100 were injured.

Other major explosions in New Jersey included:

July 31, 1916—Two killed, $22,000,000 property loss in Black Tom explosion at Jersey City Terminal, for which German sabotage was blamed.

Oct. 5, 1918—Nearly 100 killed in an explosion of the Gillespie Lumber Company's Morgan, N. J., plant.

Dec. 6, 1918—Twelve killed, 21 injured in a blast at the du Pont Cap works, Pompton Lakes, N. J.

Sept. 7, 1923—Five killed, 30 injured in explosion of powder train at South Amboy, N. J.

Explosions

Blasts Occurred 28 Minutes Apart

Twenty-eight minutes after the Woodbridge blast, an explosion wrecked a small building of the Trojan Powder Company plant, six miles northwest of Allentown, Penn., killing three men.

An official of the firm described the blast as "an unfortunate accident." The company held defense contracts totaling at least $202,150. The victims were in the building used in manufacturing detonators for commercial work, when the explosion came.

14 Buildings Flattened in New Jersey Blast

WOODBIDGE, N. J., Nov. 12 (AP)—At least seven persons were killed today in a terrific explosion which razed the plant of the United Railway and Signal Corporation near here.

More than a score were injured. After hours of searching, Woodbridge police expressed belief that all bodies had been recovered. They denied a report from State Police Headquarters at Trenton that 15 were dead and 10 missing. An independent check disclosed only the five bodies at morgues in the vicinity.

First of the identified dead was Dominic La Penna of Woodbridge, father of 14 children, and for 50 years and employee of a water company, whose repair shop was also destroyed.

Michael J. Angel, investigator for the State Bureau of Explosives, said the blast occurred in the priming room, where the powder in use was not explosive under normal conditions unless given a heavy blow. He discounted any possibility of sabotage.

Preliminary estimates of the death toll varied from six to 25, but Police Capt. John Egan of Woodbridge Township, in which the plant was situated, expressed belief that no more than 20 persons were employed there. It manufactured railway track torpedoes, flares and similar equipment.

(In Washington Army and Navy officials said a preliminary check of their records of defense orders did not show that any contracts had been awarded to the company.)

Police said there were 15 buildings at the plant, but only half a one remained standing after the blast.

Those destroyed varied from 100 by 200 feet in size, the main plant, to sheds.

Also demolished was the repair shop of the Midsex Water Company, adjoining the signal plant.

Injured included persons in their homes nearby and on the street.

Windows were shattered over a radius of a quarter-mile almost without exception, while many were broken in Bayonne, 11 miles away.

The plant is situated in Middlesex County, about 15 miles south of Newark and a similar distance from Manhattan.

Buildings shook in much of central and northern New Jersey and throughout Staten Island, N. Y., which is just across a sound from Woodbridge.

John Costello, undertaker to whose morgue the first five dead were taken, said the bodies were horribly mutilated. He expressed belief that one of a woman. Some were decapitated; others lost legs.

Coroner J. J. Flynn of Middlesex County and Police Chief George E. Keating of Woodbridge started in an effort to learn the cause of the blast.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Newark declined to confirm departure of special agents for the scene.

The explosion gouged two craters in the ground, one about six feet deep and the other, three.

It made a shambles of the plant, which sprawled over an area of about 100 yards square, and rained lead pipe from the water company's shop.

On the opposite side of Woodbridge av., which runs between the heart of Woodbridge and Port Reading, was a three-family home where 14 children were getting ready for school.

Fred Vanderhof, one of the tenants, said he was sitting in his kitchen when he heard a terrific explosion, he was cut by flying glass, but rushed to make sure his baby was safe, then hurried to the street. There he found his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia Gulics, bleeding profusely from a scalp cut. She was one of those taken to the Perth Amboy General Hospital.

German Planes Bomb Northeast English Towns

LONDON, Nov. 12 (AP)—The German air force, turned back from London in a brief morning raid, smashed at northeast coast towns early this afternoon.

The daylight attacks which seemed widespread over England, followed a night of comparative calm in which the British capital was undisturbed after 9 p. m.

Stormy weather restricted air operations on both sides. A wild southwesterly gale howled, and through the Strait of Dover without abatement today, with heavy seas, intermittent showers and visibility almost zero. The weather prevented any British bomber raids against Germany last night.

Rescue squads, meanwhile, still were digging in ruins of buildings wrecked by bombs in yesterday's raids, notably in the debris of a blue print shop which housed a public shelter in which an undetermined number of persons had taken refuge.

A Channel gale kept Axis warplanes grounded most of last night and early today, giving Britons a night of rest unbroken by air-raid alarms.

The last of a few lone raiders headed homeward at 9 p. m. last night, a joint communique issued by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security reported, and through storm-swept sky over England still was clear of invading planes when daylight came.

Such attacks as were made up to 9 p. m., the communique said, caused "very small" number of casualties and "slight" damage.

Places raided included the London area, southeastern and eastern England and the southwest.

plyce, 100 feet from the signal plant, was knocked down, stunned and cut in several places.

Electric service to a large part of Woodbridge was disrupted when the explosion knocked down a line from the Carteret substation to Woodbridge.

Three Die in Accidental Blast in Allentown

ALLENTOWN, Penn., Nov. 12 (AP)—Three men were killed at 9 a. m. today when an explosion officially described as accidental wrecked a small building of the Trojan Powder Company plant six miles northwest of Allentown.

The victims were in the building, used in the manufacture of detonators for commercial blasting work. An independent concern, the company held government defense contracts totaling at least $202,150. The Army had placed orders amounting to $159,400 for explosives and the Navy ordered $42,750 worth of TNT.

John Bronstein, company treasurer, estimated property damage at between $300 and $400. The company "feels certain," he said, that not more than three men were killed.

After an investigation, Coroner Alexander M. Peters reported that the blast was "just an unfortunate accident."

The plant covers an area of about 500 acres on which are located many buildings, widely separated to keep down the toll in case of fire or explosion.

There were no injured. In the wrecked building were manufactured detonators for commercial blasting work, the company announced.

The concussion smashed windows in homes over a wide area in the surrounding countryside. A consolidated school in the vicinity escaped damage.

No Clews Remain to Solve New Castle Blast

NEWCASTLE, Penn., Nov. 12 (AP)—An explosion of 1000 pounds of dynamite today blasted to bits three men and a packing house in which they were working at the American Cyanamid and Chemical Corporation plant three miles from this western Pennsylvania city.

The blast occurred at 8:10 a. m., a few seconds after a small plant locomotive had brought the explosive to the small packing house and had chugged away with 1000 pounds of dynamite that had been packed and wrapped in stick form.

State motor patrolman Robert McCullough said there was "nothing left to provide any clews" to the cause of the explosion, adding that as far as he could determine there was no reason to suspect sabotage.

Only "a hole in the ground" remained at the spot where the packing house stood, McCullough said. It was located in a ravine where several other plant buildings were scattered.

Windows in a laboratory were shattered by the explosion but other buildings and the remainder of the plant's 150 employees escaped unscathed. The plant was formerly operated by the Burton Explosive Company and was known here as the Burton Powder Works.

The blast shook this industrial community, rattling windows and springing doors in many buildings.

Sales offices of the American Cyanamid and Chemical Corporation in Pittsburgh reported the Edinburg plant's production was devoted solely to commercial materials, and that no government orders were in production there.

A spokesman for the company at Edinburg declined to give any information on the blast.

The blast was the second in the corporation's plants within three days. An explosion at its Calco chemical division acid plant at Bound Brook, N. J., killed a plant superintendent and injured three workmen Sunday.

Coroner T. F. Nugent left immediately for Edinburg. He said he had been unable to learn details of a warning.

Corporal Leo Doolan of the State Motor Police, said he had received a report a powder factory had "blown up" and that three men were "supposed to be killed."

The blast, Doolan added, "barred all the buildings in New Castle."

One report said a small building at the Burton Powder Company plant was shattered by the blast. The plant was described by police as comprising several widely separated small structures. There were no reports any workmen, other than those reported killed, were injured.

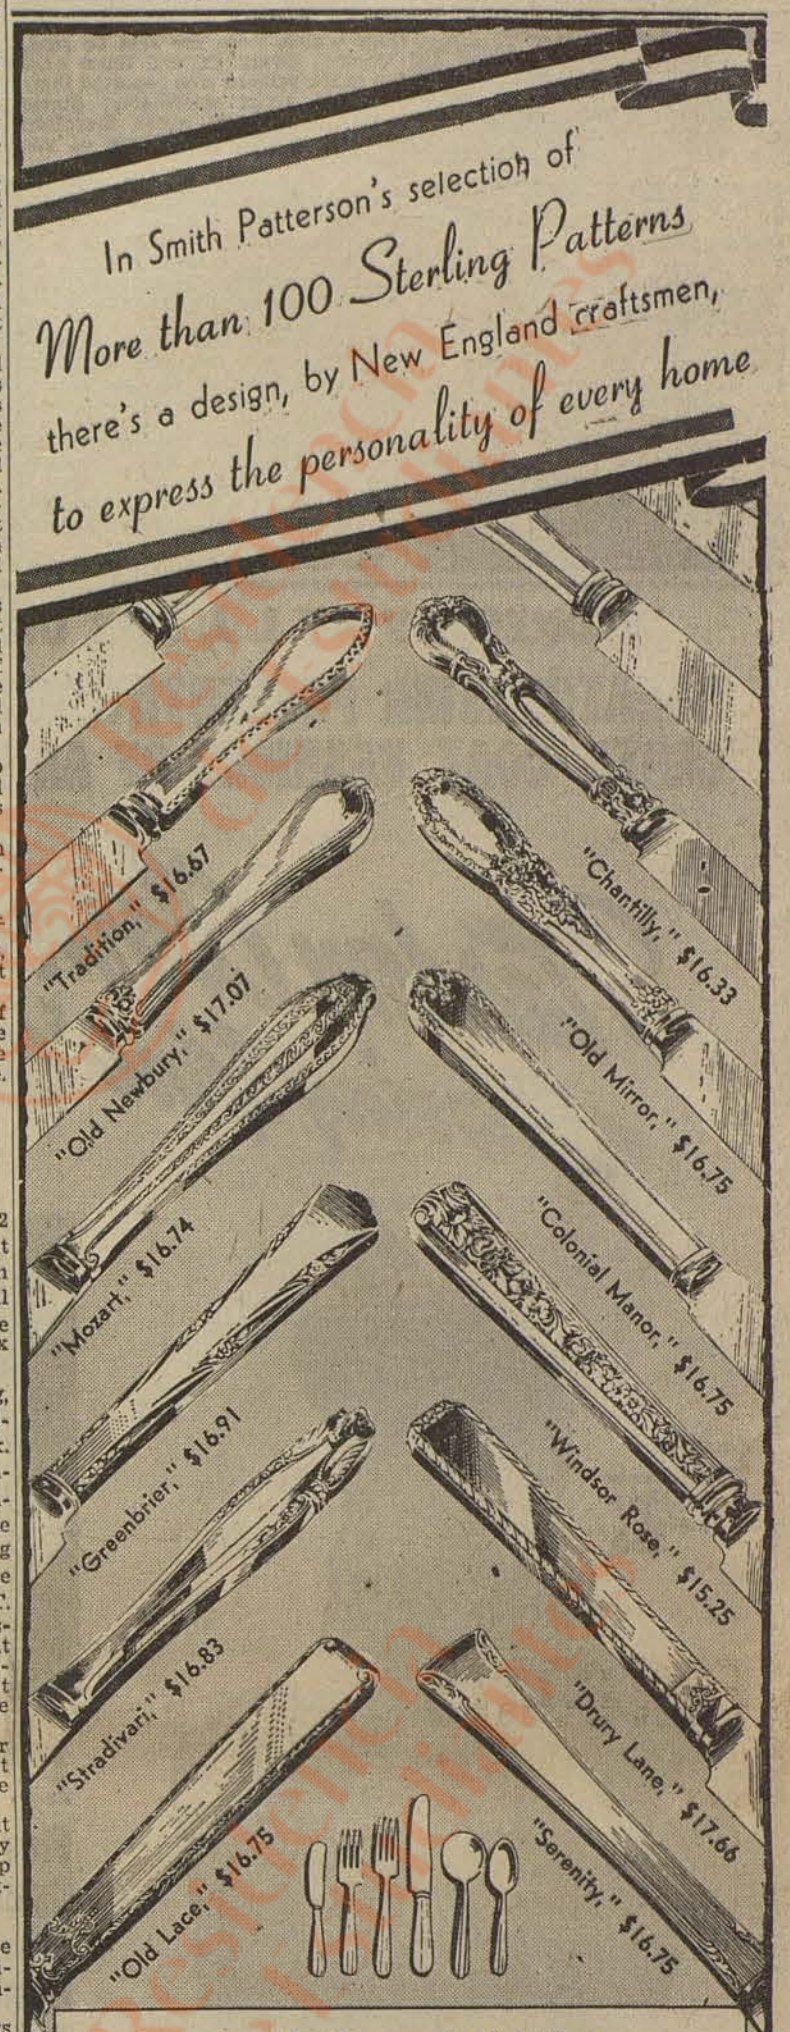

3 Bulgarian Divisions Called Up for Military Service

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 12 (UP)—A considerable number of Bulgarians, possibly as many as three divisions, were reported today to have been called up for military service in the last few days.

Three divisions would total 45,000 to 50,000 men. There has been no official announcement of the calling of Bulgarians to military duty. However, it was known that many shopkeepers, tradesmen, servants and others had received orders to join their army units.

Willkie

Republicans Await
F. D.'s 1941 Message

The titular head of the Republican Party did not mention foreign policy specifically, but said he and his followers did not "believe in verbal provocation to war"—a reference recalling his campaign charges that Mr. Roosevelt had indulged in such practices.

In view of the program Willkie outlined, the expectation was here that the big conflicts of the coming Congress probably would center on exclusively domestic issues, none of them particularly new, but perennially controversial.

The tactics, however, may be different, it was noted, for Willkie placed insistence on a united, constructive opposition which would not fight "things just for the sake of opposition." He enunciated the program's objective as a "strong, productive America"—the recurrent theme of his campaign speeches—but he did not detail proposals, beyond enumerating five recommendations for counteracting "the threat of inflation and to correct some of our economic errors."

Some capital circles were inclined to read into the Willkie speech advance notice that he intended to continue an active figure in Republican party affairs—perhaps even more so than Herbert Hoover did after his 1932 defeat, or Alf M. Landon after the 1936 rout.

"I shall not be silent," Willkie promised his supporters, "and I hope you will not be."

Whether such an interpretation be correct, the belief was that the Republican party would marshal the type of opposition for which Willkie called. Capital politicians pointed out that Willkie had polled the greatest total of votes ever given a Republican Presidential nominee, victor or vanquished, and they called attention to the fact that unlike 1932 and 1936, the 1940 election postmortems had not been concerned about whether the Republican party had any future, or whether it could survive.

The expectation in some quarters was that formulation of a more definite Republican program for 1941 and thereafter was waiting on the disclosure of what recommendations Mr. Roosevelt intended to place before the new Congress in January. During the campaign, the Chief Executive did not say whether he had any new legislative proposals in mind, but on the contrary conveyed the idea to many that he was interested solely in advancing the Administration program already under way and in helping the nation weather a world "storm."

Gale Topples Michigan Tower

733-foot steel antenna tower of radio station WJR, the tallest structure in Michigan, was toppled by gale winds. Damage to the tower was estimated at $60,000.

Strong Wind,
Rain Squalls
Sweep Coast

A strong, gusty wind and a pelting rain swept over New England and the Atlantic Coast this afternoon, while the Boston Weather Bureau issued warnings that the temperature in this vicinity is expected to drop between 25 and 30 degrees within the next 24 hours.

While the rain and the wind set in this afternoon, causing some damage, disrupting air traffic and driving small vessels to port, the nose dive in temperature is not expected to start before nightfall. Both the rain and the cold are the aftermath of the severe snow and wind which have crippled large sections of the Middle and Northwest during the past two days.

Among the first results of today's rain was the cessation of activity along the Boston waterfront. Longshoremen were ordered to stop working this afternoon for fear the heavy rainfall would damage cargoes they were moving.

The maximum temperature for Boston on this date is 76 degrees, recorded in 1949, while the record low is 25, recorded in 1926.

Listless, dull-eyed—Skipper perked up in no time on nutritionally balanced diet!

● "When we got Skipper, our wire-haired fox terrier," says Mrs. F. M. Masterson of Chicago, "he was a pretty sad-looking pup. He was listless, dull-eyed... wouldn't play and had no interest in anything. And he hardly ate. Then, someone told us about Pard, and we tried a Pard diet. Almost immediately Skipper started perking up. Soon he was the liveliest, healthiest puppy you ever saw. Since then, his only food has been Pard—and he hasn't had a single sick day."

Willkie Feels Sure F. D.
Will Keep Peace Pledge

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie has rejected as a "totalitarian idea" any suggestion that the minority "surrender its conviction" and join the majority for the sake of a united front.

The defeated Republican Presidential candidate counseled his followers in a radio address last night to constitute themselves a "loyal opposition" during the next four years, but cautioned against "opposing things just for the sake of opposition."

Concluding his remarks by quoting Lincoln's famous "with malice toward none" address, Willkie predicted this with a departure from his prepared text affirming his belief that President Roosevelt would keep the nation out of war unless attacked.

"Mr. Roosevelt and I both promised the people in the course of the campaign that if we were elected we would keep this country out of war unless attacked," Willkie said. "Mr. Roosevelt was reelected and this solemn pledge for him I know will be fulfilled and I know the American people desire him to keep it sacred."

Taking cognizance of post-election speculation that he might be offered a Federal post in the interest of national unity, Willkie made it plain that the American form of government was not designed to embrace such a conception.

"This would mean," he said, "that in the United States of America, there would be only one dominant party—only one economic philosophy—only one political philosophy of life. This is a totalitarian idea—it is a slave idea—it must be rejected utterly."

"A vital element in the balanced operation of democracy is a strong, alert and watchful opposition. That is our task for the next four years. We must constitute ourselves a vigorous, loyal and public-spirited opposition party."

To those who had written him since the election urging that the "cause we have been fighting for be carried on," Willkie expressed hope that they would continue the "thousands of organizations" founded during the campaign in his behalf. But, he added, it was not appropriate that they be continued "in my name."

"I do not want this great cause to be weakened by even a semblance of any personal advantage to any individual. I feel too deeply about it for that. Nineteen hundred and forty-four will take care of itself."

Chief among dangers facing the nation, Willkie said, was that of inflation. To counteract this and "to correct some economic errors," he proposed five steps:

1. Cut to the bone Federal expenditures except for national defense and necessary relief.

2. Allow private capital "as far as possible" to build the plants and machinery for defense.

3. Levy taxes approaching "as nearly as possible" the pay-as-you-go plan.

4. Take the brakes off private enterprise by adjusting taxes and government restrictions to give freedom "under wise regulation" to release new investments and new energies, thus increasing national income.

5. A change by the government of its "punitive attitude toward both little and big businessmen."

Storm Deaths
Mount in Midwest

By the United Press

Snow and freezing temperatures held much of the nation in a wintry grip today as destructive gales which left at least 52 persons dead in the Mid-West battered furiously at the eastern seaboard.

Winter's early invasion was the most severe in years, causing uncounted millions of dollars' property damage across a broad belt of the central and southern sectors in addition to the heavy toll of human lives.

And the force of the storm—a compound of wind, snow and cold—was not spent. Fifty-mile-an-hour winds tore at property in New England and the Middle Atlantic states as temperatures dropped to freezing levels. Icy squalls and snow pounded at the Rocky Mountain region for the fourth day with a reckless regard for shelterless humanity, transportation and communication.

Only the southern Pacific coastal area escaped the storm's wrath, which swept in from the extreme northwest five days ago and hewed to a costly course southeasterly, then northeasterly across the nation—sparing only isolated points.

The United States Weather Bureau at Chicago forecast continued cold, with snow flurries and frosty winds in the North Central States. The outlook along the eastern seaboard north of the Mason-Dixon line was for severe cold and snow-laden clouds. Flurries had started today in northern sections of New York.

But the cold did not match the tornado winds in destruction. In Illinois alone, 11 persons were killed by falling trees, overturned boats and flying debris.

New York had four dead from wind and automobile accidents attributable to icy highways.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 12 (AP)—The United States cruiser Louisville, on a tour of Latin American ports, sailed today for Santos, Brazil, where she is scheduled to arrive Friday.

Parts of Gale Wrecked Ship
Washed Ashore

MUSKOGON, Mich., Nov. 12 (AP)

Wreckage from the 253-foot pulpwood carrier Novadoc, last sighted off Little Point Sauble during yesterday's Lake Michigan gale, washed ashore today at Juniper Beach near Pentwater, Mich. Shipping circles here said the vessel ordinarily would carry a crew of 16 to 20 men.

The Little Point Sauble lighthouse keeper reported he saw the Novadoc's lights at 7:30 p. m. Monday, but that soon the ship disappeared.

The wreckage washed ashore today included a life belt bearing the Novadoc's name.

The vessel, built in 1928, had a gross tonnage of 1834. It was en route from South Chicago to Fort William, Ont., its home port.

Ashland Man Quit Navy for Army Life in 211th C. A.

By NAT A. BARROWS

CAMP HULEN, Tex., Nov. 12—A tent under the Texas stars instead of a heaving bunk aboard a China Seas gunboat was the exchange made by Edward N. White of Ashland when he volunteered for service with the 211th Coast Artillery.

A year ago Corp. White was a first-class seaman aboard the Navy's famous "Galloping Ghost" of the China coast, the ancient, coal-burning U. S. S. Sacramento. He wore blue dungarees and all the while he did was from the bridge of the Sacramento to the after deck today. He wears lightweight chinos and every week he hikes 14 miles in one stretch.

While put in three years with the Asiatic squadron at the China station. The gumbo mud of Hulen is child's play to him, after the muddy shore patrols there. Texas rain is a sprinkle after the endless Chinese downpours. If he has any complaints about the miserable weather here in South Texas, he remembers those three years out East and he smiles at the rookies. Corp. White helped Commander Jerome Allen bring home the old Galloping Ghost home from China last year, on her last long journey. Slowly the gunboat nosed from one coaling port to another, wheezing along at eight knots through the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean.

She could not carry the coal to make the Pacific trip. It was a tedious trip, even with the Chinese junk sail that added two knots to her speed if the wind was right.

The Sacramento had barely reached New York when the Navy ordered her to Portsmouth, N. H., as a stand-by ship for the Squalus salvage unit. There, without shore leave, the men of the Sacramento waited three months for the Navy to raise the Squalus. It was a great and historic engineering and deep diving job, but the veterans of the China seas—including White—found it irksome and wearing day after day without shore leave.

White ended his four-year cruise with a determination to join the Army. He promptly walked through the portals of the stone amory of the 1st Corps of Cadets and signed up. He is a member of Battery E, commanded by Lieut. Lehigh Perry of Framingham. His younger brother, Earl, is a battery mate here in Texas.

Put the proper battery designation on your letters when you write to Hulen. It saved a lot of time in sorting the mail. Remember, there are nearly 1430 men in the 211th.

Maj. William H. Papenfoth, formerly Regular Army instructor of the 19th Coast Artillery of New Hampshire and now the executive officer of the 211th, drove his car down from Concord, N. H. "And to think I paid extra for white sidewall tires," he mourned as he surveyed the gumbo mud.

As yet, Camp Hulen has no fire apparatus. The camp depends upon the one engine at Palacios, nearly two miles away. The boys of the Palacios Volunteer Fire Department are joyful over the influx of concessions that now cluster about the town like a Texan Coney Island. Three-fourths of the license fees go to the Volunteer Department.

"We'll get another engine if this keeps up," said Zeke Noble, the deputy sheriff who totes a six-gun and looks like something right out of a cowboy yarn.

Col. Stuart G. Hall, regimental commander of the 211th, has a marvelous plan for a Christmas broadcast from Hulen to Boston. Details at a later date.

Annual output of shrimp at Palacios, about 4,000,000 pounds; output of oysters, 150,000 gallons. Canned shipments of shrimp go as far as Australia, Japan and Hawaii. Local consumption figures will show a change this year. The New Englanders have found the products astonishingly cheap and good.

Georgia's Missing Child Found Dead Near Home

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Nov. 12 (AP)—The body of Murray Upshaw Jr., 2-year-old child missing since Friday, was found in the woods near his north Georgia mountain home today. Safety Commissioner Lon Sullivan said a state highway patrolman reported finding the child dead "in the woods back of the Upshaw place." Troopers hurried to the scene to continue the investigation, and Maj. Sullivan said he had no further information and did not know the cause of the child's death.

Proparvulus Club to Hold Book Fair for Juniors

Hilda Van Stockum of Washington, who will appear at the Junior Book Fair of the Proparvulus Club in the Hotel Bradford with her children. They are Olga, 6, seated on the arm of the chair; Brigid, 5, holding book; Randal, 3, and Sheila, 4 months. The baby is wearing a dress made from her mother's wedding gown. Mrs. Van Stockum has written and illustrated such best-sellers as "The Cottage at Bantay Bay," "France on the Run," and "Kersti," among others.

The first cooperative junior book fair ever held will open at the Hotel Bradford Saturday, Dec. 7, sponsored by the Proparvulus Book Club. Children's plays, staged by the Blackfriars, parades and pageants, famous authors of children's books, college coaches and stars and exhibits associated with books of interest to boys and girls of school age will be featured.

The fair is the only large exhibit completely for children being held, and its purpose is to make parents and children book conscious and to help them realize the worth and wealth of stories being published today for young folks. Among the many cooperating agencies are the Teachers' College, Massachusetts School of Art, Emerson College and other collegiate groups. Delegations from Teachers' Colleges throughout the state will attend. Fascinating exhibits relating to books, wearing apparel, games and food will encircle the ballroom.

William Heyliger, dean of American boys' authors, will tie up the speeches of college coaches and stars with athletic heroes at the opening afternoon in a special program entitled "American Heroes in Life and Books." This program, under the chairmanship of Jerome Shanahan, is sponsored by the Boston Park Department and the Boston Garden.

Cash prizes and autographed copies of books will be awarded winners of an essay contest at one of the sessions. Subjects for the contest are "The Effect of a Good Book on Me," and "Why Not Read the Best Books?" Contestant essays on one of two subjects should not exceed 1200 words and should be sent to the Proparvulus Club, Steiner Hall, 162 Boylston St., Boston, on or before Nov. 21. "Damn it!" he said, "I'm here because I want to be here." But students and faculty members weren't convinced. They stayed on their good behavior, figuring they'd pop out of the pages of a new Lewis novel one of these days. "Remember 'Main Street' and the small town?" a faculty member asked. "Remember 'Babbitt' and the small business man? Well..." "I'm not going to write a novel with a university background," Lewis insisted. "I know exactly what my next novel is going to be about, and it's not going to be about college life."

The lanky, red-haired Nobel Prize winner smiled. "O, it might have a scene or two from a campus," he conceded, then added hastily, "Not this one." "Now if I went to live in Hartford, Conn., everybody there would say, 'Fine. He came here to Hartford because it is a beautiful city and a good place to live.' And they would let it go at that. "But out here in the Middle West you must see something mysterious about it. "I have to live somewhere. And I like Madison. Isn't that reason enough?"

Motion Picture Wives Reveal "He Man" Secrets

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
... dreads waistline

JAMES CAGNEY
... den guardian

HUMPHREY BOGART
... golf grouch

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12 (AP)—Motion picture wives—the ones who stay home in the kitchens—are the ones who know the truth about these he-men stars.

Sometimes they'll talk. You know how wives are. And from those who get around where talk often is femininely intimate, has come some enlightening information concerning the more or less private side of some of these men's lives.

Edward G. Robinson's one great dread, for instance, is that he will lose what control he has over his mid-section and bulge forth with an expansive waistline. Yet Robinson dreads the thought of physical exercise even more than the thought of fleshy ballooning and consequently is in a constant state of indecision.

Sometimes he compromises by sporadic attempts at dieting. But if he loses two pounds, he's afraid he's losing his health, and goes right after the steak and potatoes again.

That particular period between getting up and the first cup of coffee in the morning is a time of frequent stress in the Humphrey Bogart domicile. Wife Mayo leaves husband Bogey strictly alone during what she describes as "that dangerous half hour or so," and is doubly careful to avoid any mention of golf.

Showy after they were married, Mrs. Bogart made cheerful Monday morning inquiry into Humphrey's golfing fortunes of the day before—not aware that he'd spent most of the morning in sand traps, his afternoon in the rough. Now golf never is mentioned in the Bogart household, either before or after breakfast—unless Humphrey himself brings up the subject.

Mrs. James Cagney's life would be made much happier, she confides, if she could gain Jimmy's consent to have either the maid or herself give a thorough cleaning to the book-lined den that is his own private sanctuary—territory forbidden to all women, but a haven of rest and comfort to Jimmy's close men friends.

Thursday generally is the evening for Cagney's clan to gather, when a glass of beer, a poker deck and a lot of conversation last them for most of the night. But as for a few choice snappy stories—well, you'll have to ask someone other than Mrs. Cagney about that. She won't talk.

Senator George Predicts
U. S. Debt of $75,000,000,000Backs Plan to Increase Taxes and Expand Borrowing Power

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Congressional support developed today for a proposal by Secretary Morgenthau to increase taxes and expand the government's borrowing authority to facilitate financing of the defense program.

Senator George of the Senate Finance committee, said he believed that an increase in both taxes and the present $49,000,000 debt limitation was "inevitable."

He predicted that the national debt would climb to about $75,000,000,000 before the rearmament program is completed.

The Treasury Secretary has said that he might ask Congress to relax immediately the restrictions that permit $4,000,000,000 of the present borrowing power to be used only for defense financing. He said the old $45,000,000 limitation was "practically reached" and the Treasury might face an embarrassing position later unless the next Congress boosted the authority to $60,000,000,000 or more.

Coupled with discussions of the tax situation were renewed demands that Congress remain in session instead of adjourning until January as the Democratic leadership planned.

Representative Martin, the Republican leader, said that he believed "in this great crisis it would be most unfortunate" for Congress to go home.

Martin, who indicated yesterday that he would retire from the chairmanship of the Republican national committee within a few months, said that he believed the House Ways and Means committee should begin studying the tax problem now rather than waiting until next Spring to work on a revenue bill.

Speaker Rayburn, on the other hand, said he believed the problem of new tax legislation could be deferred until the new year.

George said the next Congress would have to consider the question of widening the tax base and eliminating tax exemption on securities, asserting that to depend entirely on borrowing would lead only to inflation.

"The raising of the debt limit is inevitable," George told reporters.

"Also additional revenue must be raised in order to safeguard against inflation, with some changes made in the tax laws to bring about a sound national economy."

Globe Man's Daily Story

A Boston newspaperman known for his explosive qualities under stress was opening a can of sardines preparatory to making a sandwich. His wife heard him and asked casually: "What are you opening that can with anyway?" The newspaperman in question retorted testily: "With a can opener, naturally. What did you think?"

His wife replied a trifle too sweetly: "I thought from your remarks you were opening it with a prayer."

AXIS NIGHTMARE

As he welcomes Stalin's plenipotentiary, V. M. Molotov, Adolf Hitler finds himself in the position of the committee chairman who spent weeks getting things ready for a great open-air picnic and parade only to awaken on the holiday morning to find rain sluicing over the earth.

Ever since frustration of his plan for invasion of Britain compelled a major shift in his war plans, the Nazi dictator has been striving to bring about that readjustment of his relations with Russia without which the new scheme for a smashing blow at the British Empire in the Mediterranean by way of Turkey and the Near East could not be undertaken in safety. For weeks Stalin evaded decision in a devious diplomatic struggle.

Now at last all preparations had been completed. A powerful German Army has been mustered on the Polish-Russian frontier. An expeditionary force has been established in Northern Norway, facing east. A new flanking position has been set up on the coast of Finland. About 1,200,000 German troops have been concentrated in and about Rumania. Moscow has read the threat and understood it. Mr. Molotov has undertaken a historic journey into Germany, to yield as little as possible, since all the trumps at the moment appeared to be in Hitler's hands—but nevertheless to yield. The desiderated ad-interim agreement between the boss of Berchtesgaden and the crafty strategist at the Kremlin appeared as good as made when—presto! Along came an earthquake in Rumania which shuffled a fistful of the trumps back into the close hand of Josef Stalin!

The plain truth is that this war has not been going well lately for the Axis, despite intensification of the sea raids against Britain's communications in the Atlantic. Upon the heels of the failure of invasion plans—a turn which has already produced serious consequences to German morale—other reverses have tended to multiply.

The reelection of President Roosevelt was the first of these. That event was greeted with dismay from Tokio to Rome. It signified continuity of our present firm policy, East and West, new efforts to speed hemisphere solidarity, and (more important to the Axis) redoubled support for the British in the form of war supplies.

Italy's military adventure into Greece, meanwhile, was heading slowly into the disaster which has now overtaken it, with consequent impairment of Italian prestige, particularly in the Balkans, and adverse results on Italian morale. Whatever the ultimate story of the Italo-Greek war, to date it has redounded neither to the political nor the military prestige of the Italian dictatorship. To that story, also, there is now added the reverses suffered by the Italians in East Africa, where the Ethiopian Army has been routed by British colonials on the Sudan border. In addition, the attack on Greece has provided the British Mediterranean fleet opportunity to set up air bases on several islands close to the Italian peninsula, with the result that the whole country, from Sicily to the Alps, is now being flailed daily by British bombers.

The setbacks experienced by the "invincible legions" of Italian Fascism, Hitler's Axis partner, are being paralleled for the Men of Vichy in France, who aspire to tie their nation to Hitler's chariot. Their fighting opponent, General de Gaulle, leader of the "Free France" movement in Africa, has made conquest of French Equatorial Africa, and the repercussions of his victory are already traveling through Tunis, Morocco and Algeria. In faraway French Indo-China, this movement yesterday unseated the Vichy-dominated Governor General, and captured Saigon.

Against this background, the Rumanian earthquake looms as a direct blow at Hitler's war machine. His oil supply sources are badly broken up, his oil stocks ruined, his transport and communications wrecked, and devastation has spread over 5000 square miles where his Army stood in position. This, then, is the picture contemplated today, as he sits down to diplomatic poker, by proxy, with Stalin.

UNCLE DUDLEY.

Mr. Willkie Speaks

The speech of Wendell Willkie last night was unique in American history. Never before since the nation began has a defeated candidate for the Presidency addressed his fellow countrymen at any length. The utterance itself sounded much more like an inaugural than a swan song. That was precisely what Mr. Willkie intended. The call he sounded was for an opposition by a very powerful minority.

In issuing this summons he did a considerable service by explaining to listeners and to readers the difference between the English system, which makes possible a coalition Cabinet, and the American system in which the presence of members of a minority party among the secretaries of the President cannot have the same significance as would be the case in England. Much muddy thinking and futile talk has been occasioned here by lack of understanding of the wide difference between the two systems of government.

While Mr. Willkie subscribes fully, as he did in the campaign, to the need for adequate defense and for aid to those who are struggling against totalitarian Powers, he does not budge from the position he has taken in regard to domestic matters. In doing so he restates his primary contentions and he urges his followers to continue the organizations they have formed, thoroughly depersonalized, in a lasting effort to present an opposition that may be of national service.

A Modern Army

Democratism and militarism are not usually supposed to belong together. However, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army in territory stretching from Maine to South Carolina, is not discouraged by the theory that a modern army must be like the military establishments in countries ruled by the sword.

In the general order to the Regulars, National Guardsmen, Organized Reserves and Trainees under his command, Gen. Drum sets forth his concept of a modernized fighting force. He believes that a domineering or paternalistic type of leadership will fail. He would have leadership based upon superior personal qualities that inspire respect and confidence.

For that reason the door of opportunity and advancement should be open to all. In speaking of discipline he does not confound the term with punishment. By it he means "thorough mental, moral and physical training combined with an intelligent understanding of the reasons for standards and conduct and the objectives in view."

A modern army mechanized must have a personnel with ability to reason and a willingness to use all the resources of those composing it.

The Basin

Four husky oarsmen sculling in a Sunday race on the Charles River Basin have attracted public attention to the finest water playground in the world. The three Caseys, Tom, Jim and Steve, and Russell Codman, vainly striving against the brothers, have combined in a great community service. In the popularity of spectator sports the need of vigorous exercise for the body of the average human being is forgotten. In the cheering section he can exercise his lungs, but his arms, back and legs are little used.

The findings of Army physicians in examining men called up by the draft are awaited with anxiety. Few experienced observers doubt that the reports will give a warning to the nation. Some young men will be given military training, but the rest will go on as before. And the average of physical fitness will continue low. The Charles River Basin might be used a thousand times more than it is—benefiting millions.

EDITORIAL POINTS

Next time they end a war, let's hope they'll call it a peace, not an armistice.

To be fair, we mustn't blame the Rumanian earthquake on Hitler.

We ought to be grateful to the citizens of Hawaii who voted their wish for statehood. They're the first ones to offer to share our troubles.

It is rumored that France may have a King again, in spite of what happened to that King who was so brainless that he ultimately became headless.

Soldiers in training at Fort Devens are going to be drilled in the use of skis. As an alternative, in this climate, they should also be given roller-skate practice.

Both winners and losers in the recent election are asking, very nobly, for national unity. Very humanly, they are muttering under the breath.

If the Commonwealth goes into the business of running a state lottery, its purpose, of course, will be to improve the breed of number pool tickets.

No matter what more he does in this world, Commissar Molotov has achieved a peak of 20th-century glory. He has had a bomb named after him.

People who have to travel on holidays are always unhappily surprised to find that train schedules are changed for the occasion.

Only Massachusetts and Connecticut, we learn, have failed to adopt state birds. New Jersey's bird, of course, is the mosquito.

Rhode Islanders are odd people. They turned out a state administration just on account of a little tapping of a few teeny-weeny wires.

On the basis of their improving record, the Harvards will be able to look the Yales in the eye, and even leer a bit.

The demonstrated prowess of the Greeks explains for the first time the vigor of the coffee in some local restaurants.

When John L. Lewis writes his memoirs, the interesting part will come right around where he says: "So I went on the radio. . . ."

Now the election is over and we turn again to look at the war which, alas, didn't seize the opportunity to vanish.

Maybe, with the present boom in business, this is the generation which will get out of shirtsleeves.

Already the Postoffice Department is publishing the last overseas sailings which can carry Christmas mail.

Maybe the Greeks will give us a word for a blitzkrieg in which the blitzers hurry to the rear.

Mercury moved across the face of the sun yesterday, with immediate results on earth negligible.

The Red Cross is not an exclusive organization. Nobody can join any time this month.

A War Decided by Earthquake?

May Be a Body Blow to Hitler

OIL FIELDS OF TRANSYLVANIA

By CARLYLE HOLT
To the statesmen of Europe the news of the devastating earthquake in Rumania comes like the explosion of a super bomb. For the first time in history a major war may be decided by an earthquake—one way or the other.

Reports indicate that the Rumanian oil fields are in the area most severely damaged; wells are on fire, machinery wrecked. Months will be required to restore the fields to production, and even then the possibility exists that the quake may have altered the geological formations of the fields themselves. Furthermore, transportation systems in the region, railroad and road, are seriously impaired; tracks twisted, bridges down, road beds upheaved.

To Hitler, awaiting the arrival in Berlin today of the cold-eyed, suspicious Russian Foreign Minister, Molotov, the earthquake is a blow more severe than any his enemies could deliver. The Nazi dictator built his mechanized military machine on petroleum. For that precious material he sent his armed forces into Rumania and risked collision with Moscow. He had to take the risk to get Rumanian oil for no matter how great his petroleum reserves may be, they are not inexhaustible unless replenished by new supplies.

Yesterday in a few minutes of trembling terror Nature itself nullified the advantages that Hitler's astute use of diplomatic and military pressure had gained. As Molotov reaches Berlin, as Stalin reads dispatches in the Kremlin, as Hitler greets his "friend" from Russia, each of them knows that the club in these negotiations has been placed in the hands of Russia by completely fortuitous circumstances. No imagination is needed to realize that Russia will use the club for her own benefit.

Russia has oil. Turkey has access to oil. Turkey is the friend of Russia and the "non-belligerent ally" of Great Britain. The problem of Turkey was specifically mentioned as one of the subjects for the Hitler-Molotov discussions. More than ever will it be discussed now. But the difference now is that the German need for a dependable supply of oil is more urgent than ever.

For Hitler the earthquake poses a dilemma of desperation. He must either make a bargain with Russia—on Russian terms—or face the difficult task of striking through the Balkans toward the oil supplies of the Near East. Whatever he does must be done at once. His Axis partner is stalled in the mountains of Greece. His Oriental partners in Tokio are not marching triumphantly to the New Order in Asia. His own offensive against the British Isles does not promise a quick success. There are discontent and sabotage on the Continent.

Russia, holding old grievances against both sides, is in a position to play Britain and Germany against each other. Russia was deeply disturbed by the Berlin-Rome-Tokio agreement, dividing Europe and Asia among the three partners. Russia was earlier offended by British endeavors to turn Hitler's ambitions eastward. But this is another hour.

The earthquake that staggers the German military machine also gives British diplomacy its best opportunity since the war began to win Russian support, but an opportunity that must be promptly accepted or forever lost.

The need of Germany for oil is urgent. The need of Britain for winning new support is equally urgent. A few minutes' earth shaking will change the course of the war, but the answer as to which way it has changed will be rendered by the cunning, inscrutable opportunism in the Kremlin. Rapid developments are forced by the circumstances.

My First American Election

By a NON-CITIZEN

I was neither elected President nor Governor, Senator nor to any other public office. I was elected to a clearer understanding of a nation which, I hope, will elect me citizen some day.

But after having seen the campaign, the election and its epilogue, I think I understand now the difference between the American and the European way of playing football. For there is about the same difference between European and American football as there is between an election here and over there. Football in the old countries has been made a science by a steadily increasing number of rules. One of them is that you must not push your opponent with any part of your body save the shoulder and that only if he is after the ball. Therefore, in order to separate him from the ball, people resort to all kinds of future tricks and acts of brutality which are very much resented by victim and fans. This "foul" cause hatred and revenge, trickery and meanness. The American football player is allowed to use his physical strength and to attack his opponent openly and personally. A good blow must not be hidden, and it is taken this way.

European elections, and I have watched many of them in different countries, show far less brutality of speech, in invectives and personal attack. Therefore, when I first heard American candidates rap at one another without restraint, I was terribly shocked. I thought that would have to bring about an irreparable breach between the two great groups of people in this country. But then, once everybody had presented his point of view and every "man" praised his political merchandise, the people decided to buy or not to buy what they were offered and despite all efforts during the campaign, everybody accepted the decision of the people as the last word. More than that, the former opponents shook hands just as two fair players shake hands when the game is over. Everybody had done his best to win; he knew it was not up to him to do more than that. And he accepted the decision of the people. Something like that would be impossible in any European country except perhaps in Switzerland, England and the Scandinavian countries.

While in Europe election day and the days afterwards are most critical and often rather bloody, here election day already is the day of peace and immediately after leaving the polling place both parties submit to the will of the people. This certainly was the most impressive, most gratifying experience to somebody who had seen the European disrespect of personal freedom and the basic rights of the individual. The experience of the past few weeks has convinced me more than anything that democracy still lives and that, as a citizen, I shall be able to carry my vote at the next election in 1944. It also proved to me that there, regardless of the names of the candidates in four years from now, with 50,000,000 other Americans, I shall have a chance to vote for the "champion" America.

The great reality which Mr. Chamberlain did not understand until he saw Hitler face to face in his three visits to Germany was that a totalitarian regime, and particularly the Nazi, is the total organization of a nation for the making of total war. All the social problems of a totalitarian state are soluble only by preparing for war and by waging successful war; it was by preparation for war that Hitler re-employed the German workers and suppressed the struggle between capital and labor; it was only by an endless series of conquests that Hitler could operate an economy which was totally converted to war.

This was a phenomenon which Mr. Chamberlain, raised among the business men of Birmingham, was entirely unable to comprehend. He had never known, and he knew too little of the history of mankind to remember, that rarely for long, only for two or three generations around the end of the 19th century, have business men made the policy of states. Mr. Churchill understood Hitler because Mr. Churchill is an historian. But Mr. Chamberlain did

WALTER Lippmann

Mr. Chamberlain and the Philosophy of Appeasement

THE name of Neville Chamberlain is forever associated with the word appeasement. Yet this word, though it is in everyone's mouth, is so seldom defined and is so frequently misunderstood that it causes much confusion. Some use it to mean a policy of retreat and surrender in the face of aggression. Others use it, or did until the word became discredited, to mean a persistent effort to reach agreement which would prevent war, or, failing that, to end war before the devastation becomes too general. But as a matter of fact Mr. Chamberlain's conduct of British policy is not defined by either of these grossly oversimplified meanings of the word appeasement. He did retreat and he did surrender at Munich in September, 1938. But when some months later Hitler violated the Munich pact by occupying Prague, Mr. Chamberlain ended the retreat; he offered Poland a guaranty and in September, 1939, he honored the guaranty. From that time forward he prosecuted the war, and there have been no indications that he thought the struggle with Hitler could be compromised and a peace negotiated without a military decision.

So if Mr. Chamberlain is to be regarded as the apostle of appeasement, we shall mislead ourselves if we imagine that an appeaser is a man who wants peace at any price and a non-appeaser is a warmonger who wants to go to war crusading.

It was under the policy of appeasement that Britain drifted, beginning in 1931, into the most dangerous war that Britain has ever had to fight. If that policy is now discredited, it is not because its aim was peace but because its consequence was a disastrous war. This policy, which embodied the views of finance, industry, and of the bulk of the British middle class, was inspired by the best intentions but, unfortunately, it rested upon a total failure to understand the realities of the post-war world. When men speak of the tragedy of Neville Chamberlain and the catastrophe of appeasement they are speaking of the fact that the rulers of England did not understand what was happening to them, and would not listen to those who, like Mr. Winston Churchill, did understand.

The great reality which Mr. Chamberlain did not understand until he saw Hitler face to face in his three visits to Germany was that a totalitarian regime, and particularly the Nazi, is the total organization of a nation for the making of total war. All the social problems of a totalitarian state are soluble only by preparing for war and by waging successful war; it was by preparation for war that Hitler re-employed the German workers and suppressed the struggle between capital and labor; it was only by an endless series of conquests that Hitler could operate an economy which was totally converted to war.

This was a phenomenon which Mr. Chamberlain, raised among the business men of Birmingham, was entirely unable to comprehend. He had never known, and he knew too little of the history of mankind to remember, that rarely for long, only for two or three generations around the end of the 19th century, have business men made the policy of states. Mr. Churchill understood Hitler because Mr. Churchill is an historian. But Mr. Chamberlain did not understand him because he had never met Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon or any of the other conquerors. In dealing with Hitler, and Hitler needed dealing with when he rose to power in 1933, Mr. Chamberlain and those whose views he so faithfully reflected were completely at a loss. They did not know there were such people as Hitler and they could and would not believe that there were such people.

They insisted on believing that in the end they could make a deal with Hitler and buy him off. For they thought in terms of business, of profit and loss. But Hitler, who despises business, thought in terms of power and of mastery and of conquest.

This is the root of appeasement—the belief of business men that in the end they will be able to settle everything by doing business with business men. The world seemed to be such a world when Mr. Chamberlain was young. But beneath the appearances it has never been such a world, and the economic man seems to be the real man only in those rare intervals when for a while statesmen and soldiers have forgotten the facts of life.

It was the illusion of the economic man—the illusion that man's motives are economic and that the great problems of mankind can be settled by economic bargains—it was this illusion which caused the Britain of Baldwin and Chamberlain to disregard the warnings of the soldiers, the sailors, the airmen and the diplomats. Britain did not prepare because until the last desperate hour it was led by men who believed in business as usual. These men did not prepare the armaments. They did not prepare the alliances. They did not prepare the people for the ordeal which they were destined to face. Therefore, they could never compel the Hitler, whom they did not understand, to negotiate effectively with an empire whose weakness he did understand.

Appeasement is the name for the state of mind which failed to grasp the intentions of Hitler, the name of a policy which, consequently, made no adequate preparation to deal with him. It is also the name, though here Mr. Chamberlain is no longer to be identified with it, of a failure to grasp the nature of the war which appeasement failed to prevent. It is a name for the state of mind of those who imagine that a war of this kind can, contrary to all historical experience, be somehow ended before it is decided.

What People Talk About

Letters From the Editor's Mail

For 1944, Perhaps?

To the Editor—In "How to Get Peace," Dorothy Thompson struck the keynote of the only way to get peace in this man-made world of war and misery. I thought after reading it that I wished I was to vote for her for President, and thus put on the throne of social well-being a woman with intellect and imagination to win international peace without spilling blood.

I do wish the women of the world would cease voting for masculine politicians and pseudo-statesmen who work for their own benefits next election day, and depend upon us to sop up the blood and metaphysical clean up their custodians. I shout, "Good Lord, deliver us from political windbags, with their trinity of war machinery—and gas—to be followed by fire."

To quote Dorothy Thompson, "Few people believe either in intellect or imagination these days. We have become a race—God help—of 'practical' people. So we will sit and shiver and ship guns into Britain and remain in our ideas in our heads. Or will we?" Hope.

Salute and Emotion

To the Editor—Why all this commotion about saluting the flag? Have we already become totalitarian?

A recent suggestion that every orchestra be required to close every program with "The Star Spangled Banner" is in harmony with what seems to be an emotional trend. Two elderly gentlemen, one seriously lame, sitting in the Public Garden, who failed to rise and stand when the national hymn was played, were nearly pushed off the seat by an enthusiastic patriot who could not witness unproved such unpatriotic behavior.

In this crucial period in our history seemingly so slight a thing as a flag salute may have serious consequences if it presages such exaggerated importance as to arouse antagonism and resentment. As a matter of fact it is a ceremony which becomes irksome if daily enforcement is required and pupils forget if they ever understood the meaning of it.

There is no indication that it fosters a spirit of patriotism. The democratic way would be to leave the matter of saluting the flag and the manner of performing it to the local schools to be decided by the teacher and the pupils. When adopted in this school it would have meaning which would be understood by all, and if any child had been so educated in any religious cult that he had scruples about observing it, there would be no compulsion and no disgrace attached to the object.

It is not only foolish, it is dangerous to press the matter into such importance as it is receiving.

MARY T. WHITNEY.

North Ware, N. H.

To the Editor—One does not have to be an anglophile to appreciate the English custom of playing the national anthem with the audience standing at attention) at the close of the performance in the theatre. I should like to see our American theatres introduce the custom of playing our national anthem at the end of the show.

C. R. D. MILLER.

Cambridge.

They are those who do not realize that when the struggle has been joined for the mastery of a large part of the world, no peace can be negotiated which is more than an armistice until one belligerent or the other is so decisively defeated that he could not renew the war. For without a military decision, no one can and no one will demobilize. No one can and no one will return to civilian life and peaceable commerce. No one will and no one can reemploy the soldiers in ordinary trade. No one will and no one can dismantle and reconstruct the vast industries devoted to armaments. And therefore until there is a decision, so clear cut that the war cannot be begun again for at least a generation, there can be no peace.

Finally, appeasement is the name for a kind of pessimism which says despairingly that all is lost anyway. The roots of this pessimism are also in the outlook of the economic man who identifies civilization with the property he cherishes and the commercial practices he is used to. The Britain of Churchill is the answer to this pessimism. For what this Britain has demonstrated to itself and to all mankind is that there is an everlasting nation of brave and believing men, over and above the nation at any particular period and of its superficial way of life.

This is the greatness of Churchill that he represents not merely the people who are living and fighting today but somehow all the generations that have preceded them. The England that there always be is not the England of a certain system of economic arrangements, but an England that existed centuries before these arrangements were devised, and will exist long after they have become obsolete. That is the England of Churchill and of the peoples of London, and it is this England which inspires Churchill to utterances which for beauty and grandeur have rarely been equalled and never surpassed.

The evocation of the eternal quality of a people—as Pericles evoked the everlasting quality of Athens and Lincoln at Gettysburg the everlasting quality of America—this, too, is a fact to be taken into account, along with all the strategy, paraphernalia, economics of war. It is a fact for which there is no place in the philosophy of the economic man, and for want of it he will soon despair and cry out that all is lost. But if the fact that a great people can rise to greatness is not in the philosophy of the economic man, it is there for all to behold in the shaping of the history of men.

She'd Skip 'em Both

To the Editor—I take pleasure in adding my small voice to the chorus of praise for the excellent reporting of the Globe during the late campaign, and especially for the intelligent and accurate announcing of the election returns by Mr. John Barry.

The one fly in the ointment, so far as I am concerned, was your prominent featuring of the Gallup Poll. For me, at least, the ubiquitous ghost of Dr. Gallup will fade no more. If you continue to print him, I should like to see him put alongside Boake Carter, thereby making it easier for me to skip them both at once!

The Godlike Daniel

To the Editor—I think the recent reference to Daniel Webster in Editorial Points a despicable slur upon one of our greatest characters of American history. The time has come to stop the lies and vilification of our great men of the past. I would suggest to the writer of the paragraph that he read Benson's or Feuss' "Life of Daniel Webster" and he will know that Webster was the great man of not only his own times, but of all times; great orator, great lawyer, great Senator and the great defender of our beloved Constitution. A man who in his own times could command the love and respect of all men in his own profession is too great a character to be slurred in this manner.

"The Godlike Daniel," he was called. He will live forever in the hearts and minds of all true Americans. Our youth need training in respect and admiration for the great men of America's past. If we are great today it is because these great men still live in the hearts of American people and if we are to continue to be a great country we must allow our men of this caliber to come forward and take over the reins of government.

Migrating Mechanics

To the Editor—In regard to the so-called shortage of skilled workers in this state, there are men who are out of work who have been machinists and tradesmen for years, who have been rejected by Civil Service examining boards for not having experience enough, though they have done practical shop work for 30 years. It would be in order to have the examiners themselves examine to see if they qualify for the work they do.

There has been a severe drain of Boston mechanics to other cities, where employers are glad to engage workers. Our men are considered close workers and precision men in their field. On a recent visit to Detroit and nearby states, I was not surprised to find a large number of our local men who were forced to migrate in order to be recognized as real mechanics.

Missionaries Sail for Home From China

Through the courtesy of the State Department at Washington, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at 14 Beacon st., has received a radio message from the American Embassy at Peking, North China, announcing the sailing from Chingwangtao today on the Mariposa of a large delegation of women workers and children of missionaries stationed at the North China Mission.

Included in the group is Mrs. Lewis Loder Gilbert Jr. of Waterbury Center, Vt., a sister-in-law of W. J. Gilbert of West Newton. She is bringing with her four children, Chandler, Alan Morse, Mariel Joy and Doris Jane Gilbert, the youngest only nine months old, the oldest 14. Mr. Gilbert is remaining at his post.

Another missionary who is returning, Rev. Carolyn T. Sewall of Tientsin, was the first foreign woman to be ordained to the ministry by the Chinese Congregational Church, and has a sister, Mrs. H. S. Whitbeck, in Northampton, and another sister, Mrs. Roswell M. Austin, in St. Albans, Vt. Miss Sewall has been seriously ill this past year and is still a convalescent. She plans to go to Santa Monica, Calif., while Mrs. Gilbert will come directly to the missionary home at Auburndale. It is expected that the Mariposa will reach Los Angeles about Dec. 2.

BOAKE CARTER

New Deal's Future
Two Sides of It

Several readers have expressed themselves as greatly disappointed that this column is not to continue opposing Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

One lady specifically asks: "How can things you said were wrong on Nov. 4 be right believe as we do now lead me to question the sincerity of your previous opposition to Mr. Roosevelt."

Let me tell of a luncheon I attended in New York yesterday, by way of answer. One luncheon meeting was called to found a "Face Savers Club." And since I had supported Mr. Willkie, I thought it proper to attend.

Present were some newspaper publishers, writers and newspapermen. Not all were "face-savers." Some had backed the successful political faction. I suppose they were there merely out of curiosity about what we on the other side of the fence might have to say. I will say this for them—they didn't gloat.

But when it came my turn to receive my "diploma" and speak my little piece, I said substantially this: "With us who believe as we do on events of our day, it isn't so much 'saving face' as it is trying to be broadminded enough to give Mr. Roosevelt another chance."

"There has gone up a great call for unity in America. Now what is unity? Isn't it an act of cooperation? Isn't it an act which requires compromise on both sides from previous positions taken? I think so. 'Unity' cannot be achieved in anything if one side is called upon to do all the surrendering, all the yielding."

"It must be remembered by the victorious New Deal and the 25,000,000 people who voted for it that 21,000,000 of their fellow citizens voted 'no confidence' in it. 'It must be remembered that this vote of 'no confidence' is slightly more than 45 percent of the nation."

"One cannot expect 45 percent of the United States suddenly to yield their convictions, just because 55 percent of the United States calls upon the lesser percentage to do so on the grounds of 'national unity.' I have not surrendered my convictions one whit."

"But I take the position that, under the rules, Mr. Roosevelt has been selected leader again for four more years. As one public writer who has opposed him, I am therefore prepared, not to submerge my convictions or beliefs, but rather to check them temporarily in the cloak room."

"And I think that there are a great many other Americans who voted for Mr. Willkie because of the philosophies he espoused, who feel the same way about it."

"But we would make it quite clear that it is we who make the initiative. It is we who make the first move, hold out the hand of friendship again. I think we do so primarily because we want unity, a happier spirit, a sense of family camaraderie in this great land in which we live and love."

"But we know of a certainty that that spirit of friendliness and cooperation can never be achieved unless the New Deal is prepared to yield, as we are trying to yield, to meet us on common ground. In other words, this business of 'unity' is a two-way proposition. Only when it works from both ends of the line, can unity have any real meaning."

"I think that Mr. Roosevelt has the opportunity of achieving a place in history that has come to no man of American history. By stretching forth his hand, and urging his own followers in lesser Government positions to do likewise, he can do more to make this nation a really great, strong, powerful, happier, worthwhile nation than any man in history."

THE $600 THAT BROKE GROUND FOR "A HUNDRED FORTUNES"

After years of hard work and experiment in developing the first practical typewriter, Christopher Latham Sholes found few to share the enthusiasm of a friend who prophesied, "You have a hundred fortunes there!"

Finally one of his typewritten appeals for financial assistance fell into the hands of James Densmore, who was so impressed that he immediately advanced $600 to help Sholes continue his work.

James Densmore saw the invention of the typewriter through all its struggles from Sholes' first crude model to an industry. It was that timely $600, however, received when the inventor was in the depths of discouragement, that paved the way for the success which finally crowned Sholes' efforts.

A LITTLE MONEY CAN SEE THEM THROUGH

Just as a comparatively small amount of money made such a material difference in the career of

Christopher Latham Sholes, so even a modest readjustment income can make a material difference in the future of a family.

During the period immediately following the death of husband and father, a family needs income to sustain them while they readjust their lives to new conditions. Even a little money at this time will go a long way. The John Hancock Readjustment Income Plan is especially designed to supply income for a year or more, either in equal monthly amounts or on a graduated scale. With its help many families have been encouraged to carry on bravely and make clear-headed plans for the future.

How a Readjustment Income Plan was applied to an average family in moderate circumstances is described in our booklet, "Two Lives". For your copy write Department M-11, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, 197 Clarendon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Difference of Opinion makes horseraces... AND newspapers!

Human nature being what it is, there will always be difference of opinion. On politics, religion, art, science and philosophy some minds work one way and others another.

The sexes don't agree either. Men and women have different likes and dislikes. So it is hardly surprising that some newspapers have been more successful in pleasing men than women and vice versa.

But The News appeals equally to both. Five surveys by L. M. Clark show that the average copy of The News is read by a total of three readers per copy, about equally divided between men and women.

★ ★ ★ ★

Because pictures have a universal appeal, The News spares no effort to get the best—and our masthead reads "The News, New York's Picture Newspaper." In a typical issue the general news picture pages attracted 81% to 91% of the men, and 93% to 98% of the women.

The main news pages of The News are so edited as to appeal to both men and women. These pages in a typical issue drew as high as 85% of the men and 90% of the women.

For fun, romance, and adventure, readers turn to News features. Column fans have the choice of three Broadway and Hollywood columnists. Men are partial to News sports columns, fishing and hunting news, and the financial page. Finance bores most women, but they love News fiction. Comic strips touch a universal chord in the hearts of all men, women, and children—so The News has spared no expense in securing comics which are among the most famous in the world.

News editorials are unique. They are written for the millions on topics which vitally affect everybody, in the language of the average man. They have a higher reading than any editorials in any other newspapers analyzed by a well-known research organization. L. M. Clark studies indicate that News editorials have greater reader interest than 7 out of 10 comic strips. Such popularity is phenomenal!

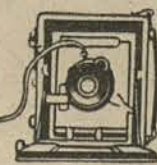

By pleasing more people, The News has become the most popular paper in the world. It gathers in one publication the largest audience for all types of advertised products. It sells more merchandise to men, and more merchandise to women. It covers more families, is read by more people of all classes and all ages, with all types of interests and all sizes of pocketbooks. In the aggregate The News millions comprise the greatest family market in the world. To sell more merchandise, make The News your first medium!

DINING AND DANCING—After the theatre comes many an exciting party. Among recent "after-curtain" parties were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hart, who entertained at the Balinese room of the Hotel Somerset in honor of Joe E. Brown and members of the "Elmer the Great" company.

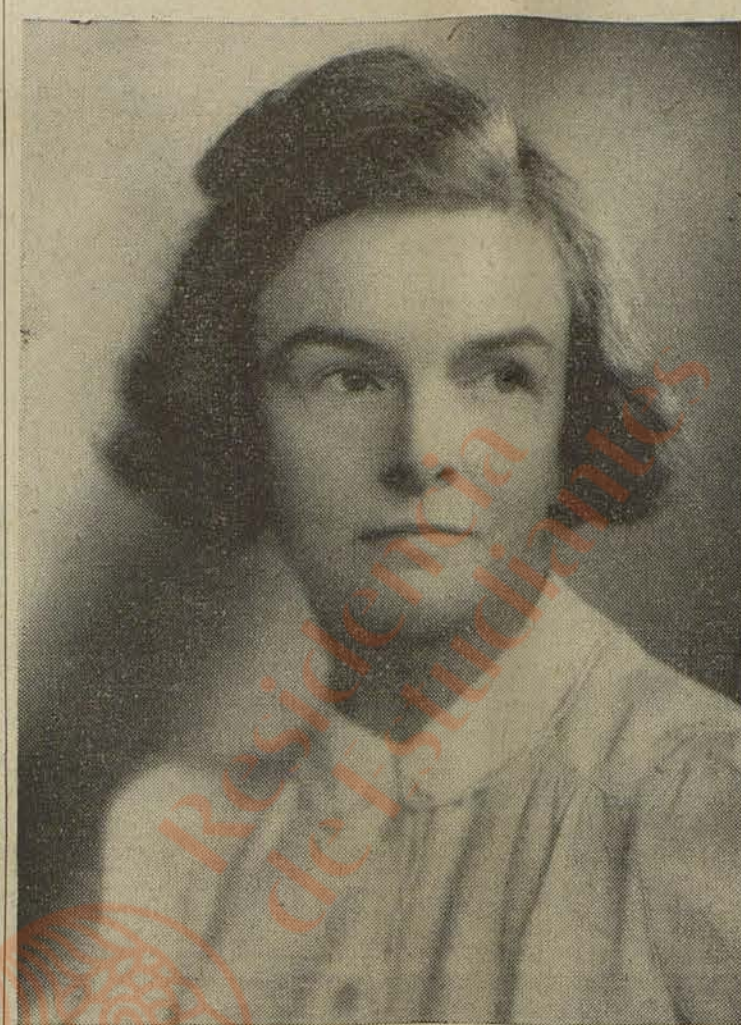

Others seen dining after the theatre included Mrs. Benjamin Halliwell in pale blue with Mr. Halliwell, chatting with the Keith Steeles. Miss Anne Soule danced with Benjamin Beale. Miss Patricia Phelan wore a frock of black and crimson as she came in with Douglas Harlow and sat near Miss Frances McElwain and Samuel Wakeman.

CHILDREN'S PLAYS—Saturday morning will mark the opening of another season of Clare Tree Parnis Children's Plays, with the performance of "Heidi" at Jordan Hall. The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is sponsoring these dramas for young people, one each month through April, at 10:30 on Saturday mornings.

Mrs. James Medbury MacKaye, as secretary of the children's play committee, is busy filling orders for reservations made last year. Many new subscribers also have shown their interest in the year's prospectus, which will include "The Secret Garden," "Seven Wishes," "Alice in Wonderland" and "Robin Hood."

John L. Lewis Mum on Promise to Quit as C. I. O. Head

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 12 (AP)—John L. Lewis, noncommittal on his promise to resign as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the event of President Roosevelt's reelection, prepared today to discuss new wage scales with the United Mine Workers' national policy committee.

Lewis arrived yesterday to participate in preliminary conferences before the opening of the national C. I. O. convention, next Monday, but said he had "nothing to say" about the resignation statement made during the campaign.

In an address supporting Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, Lewis said he would consider President Roosevelt's reelection tantamount to a "vote of no confidence" in his (Lewis') administration and would step down as C. I. O. president.

Conferences this week are expected to pave the way for negotiations for a two-year contract in the bituminous industry and also to consider anthracite workers' demands.

Consecrated as Episcopal Bishop

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 12 (AP)—Episcopal bishops from throughout the United States participated today in ceremonies consecrating Very Rev. Walter H. Gray, D.D., as suffragan bishop of the diocese of Connecticut—second youngest bishop of the Episcopal Church in America. The ceremonies were held in Christ Church Cathedral.

3 Millions for Expansion of Lynn Cog-Making Works

10 Months Needed to Build the Gears of Largest Naval Ships

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—One reason why the United States can't build a two-ocean Navy very quickly is that it takes 10 months to build merely the gears of the largest type naval ships.

The gears are the cog wheels which take the 10,000 revolutions per minute of a ship's turbines and reduce this rotation to perhaps 400 revolutions of the ship's propeller.

The length of time in manufacture is due to the fact that the cogs have to be machined to the precision of a watch, and the big cog weighs about 35 tons. This one is known to sailors as the bull gear. It is nearly 18 feet in diameter and may carry 600 "teeth."

Each tooth must be cut with a fineness much less than the thickness of a cigarette paper, with what the engineers call tolerances of three ten-thousandths of an inch.

How the great gears are made is described by A. A. Ross of the gear engineering department of the General Electric Company, which is spending $3,000,000 to expand its cogmaking works at Lynn, Mass.

After the big bull gear is built and ready to have its teeth cut, it is first warmed for several hours to a temperature of 72 Fahrenheit. The room for this warming also is fitted for cooling, in case the huge piece of metal happens to be even a fraction over 72.

After the temperature is right, the gear is moved into the room where the teeth are cut. This room is maintained at exactly 72. Even a slight variation in temperature, by the expansion or contraction it would cause in the metal might throw the teeth-cutting out of true.

The monster cog is laid flat on a slowly turning table, and a little device about the size of a bird-cage starts clawing out the grooves which will become teeth.

The bird-cage's exterior is made of tungsten, nearly as hard as diamonds. Its exterior is ribbed much like a screw and lies against the side of the big gear, turning at right angles to the gear's rotation and cutting as it turns.

With each revolution of the big gear, the little tungsten screw bits in, making what is called the "rough cut." After this process has shaped the gear teeth to proper depth and thickness, the little tungsten teeth set to work on the finish to the three ten-thousandths of an inch accuracy.

During all this time, the big gear must never cease turning. If the cutting job should stop, the slight change in position on restarting would ruin the gear. To make sure the motion never is interrupted, auxiliary engines are ready to take over the work of the main power plant if that fails.

Although the finishing is done by machine, the skill of the workmen also is indispensable. Mr. Ross points out. The gears can't be made without the skill of human hands to guide the robots. Furthermore, it is not enough for the workman to be merely a "skilled" cutter; he must be super-skilled to work within the three ten-thousandths of an inch margin of perfection.

Imperfections greater than that, when translated through a huge 35-ton cog wheel, would be magnified enough to endanger the power transmission of a battleship.

Fruit Cake, Light and Dark

Does anyone remember Polly of long ago and her fruit cakes which were so popular? Polly was the penname of my mother who passed away in 1938. Here are repeats for the cakes.

Light Fruit Cake—Cream 2 cups sugar, 1 cup butter, add 3 cups pastry flour, 1 pound English walnuts, broken fine, 2 slices candied pineapple, cut small, ½ cup candied cherries, ½ cup coconut, 1 cup milk, 1 cup seeded raisins (we use Sultana), 2 teaspoons baking powder. Last, beaten whites 6 eggs. Watch carefully while baking. Makes two loaves.

Dark Fruit Cake—One pound brown sugar, ¾ pound butter, cream well. Add 12 eggs, ½ cup jelly (tart) melted in ½ cup hot water, 1 pound flour browned in oven, 3 pounds seedless raisins, 2 pounds currants, 1 pound citron, 1 cup molasses, 2 teaspoons mace, 2 teaspoons cloves, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon black pepper, 1 nutmeg grated, 1 teaspoon soda, dissolved in ¼ cup water. We use currant jelly. Makes 4 loaves.

cake recipe? It hasn't failed me yet and makes a nice light cake. I've used fudge frosting on it and seven-minute frosting with coconut other times for a change. Hope you like it.

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
1-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) 25 to 30 minutes.

Whip Up a Batch of Corn Meal Muffins

Whip up a batch of these corn meal muffins for cozier suppers and start-the-day-right breakfasts. And if you want to go fancy with corn sticks for luncheon, you can use this same recipe—using 1½ cups corn meal and ½ cup flour, and baking them in the regular corn stick pans. Here are the ingredients needed:

Three tablespoons melted shortening, 1 cup sifted flour, 1 cup corn meal, 2 level teaspoons double acting baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 1 cup milk.

(If iron muffin pans are to be used, these should be heated before batter is put into them.) Melt shortening right in the muffin pans, sufficient for greasing pans and for adding to the batter, unless salted butter is used. Salt in the bottom of the muffin tin will make muffins stick in baking. Butter, therefore, should be melted in separate small pan. Set aside until needed.

Sift dry ingredients together (flour, baking powder, salt and sugar). Beat egg and add milk to it. Stir liquids into the dry ingredients and then add melting shortening. Stir only long enough to dampen flour. Do not try to beat out the lumps in the batter.

Long beating makes tunnels in muffins—and the lumps will disappear during baking.

Fill greased muffin tins about 2-3 full. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F. to 425 degrees F.) 20 to 30 minutes. Makes about one dozen muffins.

Housewife With Dust-Seeing Eyes

Dear Other Side of the Desk—

Nothing but eating your candy could give me more pleasure than baking you a cake. Could Fragrant Gentian share it with you, or am I to take quite literally that there's enough of her to go all around the column? In that case she's probably on a diet, and I'm afraid I wield a rather heavy hand when applying icing. But if she's not a fragile, gentle, lavenderish sort of person I'll never be able to trust those mind pictures of mine again!

Would you be interested in knowing that, thanks to you, the opening of doors is becoming less of a torturous procedure for me? Of late I've had many important decisions to make, and they've been made with much less hesitation than of yore. Should time prove that I've erred wrong doors, I feel that the results may not be more disastrous (at least to myself) than the constant turning from one door knob to another that I've been doing for longer now than I care to recall.

Now about those bureau drawers! Like others of the column I can't picture you as the least bit disorderly. But if you are, I'd be very glad to hand you every bit of the sense of order I possess. Isn't there such a thing as having too much of it? How I envied Talking Trees when she wrote of her ability to relax while the cute little pussies blew around under the beds! I'm afraid that I'm the ash-tray emptying type of which you complain. I never physically empty them in the presence of guests, but mentally, O how often they're not only emptied, but washed! (Are we still friends?)

When my love of sitting in the sun and my sense of order in the home begin their tug of war the resulting conflict is some battle, you can believe. I really wish that the sun could win out more often, but those dust-seeing eyes, lying directly behind the sun-seeing ones just won't let me off until everything's done and then I'm usually too tired or I get out in time to see a lovely sunset! Any suggestions as to how to go about acquiring some bad house-keeping habits?

I'm still believing your statement that if you've been able to gain self-confidence, I can, and I intend to report my progress to you from time to time whether or not I hear from you.

Thank you for each and every letter you've written to the column. Capella.

Time Healed Their Misunderstanding

Dear A Lost Valentine—

You hoped that some ex-Lost Valentine would offer a solution to your sore, confused heart, didn't you? I was exactly in your position. Undoubtedly the reasons for our classic misadventures as "horrible mistakes" were unlike, but I know this will help you.

My husband and I were both convinced that our marriage was a mistake and he asked me to leave him. Wretched, I made plans to do so, but certain conditions made it impossible for a short time, and time, I am thankful, healed our misunderstandings. My husband and I love each other deeply. Years, births, deaths and all the usual events in a busy, happy life have touched us, making more sure our love.

Certainly you cannot heal your "nerves" while in your present mental and emotional turmoil. But you can go deep within yourself, find your in-dwelling spirit, get poised. Like the love which was all that all resentment and hate and fear and condemnation. Clear your mind with the conviction that your husband is God's child, as are you. Forget penalties.

Perhaps your marriage was a mistake, but probably it was not. You have shown good sense in trying to keep your feeling from your husband and in determining to go ahead and be the best wife you can, providing, of course, that your principles of character are not being degraded. You tell us nothing of the reason for your regret. Advice would vary with the cause of your trouble. But whatever it is, get still, listen to the voice within. . . . You will hear it. . . . And love your husband. Keep so busy finding good things in him that there is no time for pondering over the "weeds."

Please write again. I find that Chinese nail lacquer. It's the newest kind of nail-polish, and its resistance to chipping and its brilliance and luster are sensational.

By BETTY DUTTON

It's wonderfully long-lasting. It has an amazing resistance to chipping. And, if properly applied to the nails, it keeps its first brilliant luster, it wears and wears, and retains its new look for such a long time that you begin to wonder if it's going to wear off.

Doesn't that sound like the nail-polish you've been praying for? Well, it is the answer to your hopes and prayers, for this startling new lacquer is long-lasting, is chip-proof and does retain its original brightness for a long, long time.

This revolutionary polish was inspired by the enchanting charm of gorgeous Chinese lacquer work. Somehow the brilliant and exotic exquisiteness of such work was copied—how we know not, though that doesn't really matter so long as it was copied—and put into an enamel for the nails. Now you can give to them that same breath-taking luster that you find in this marvelous Chinese lacquer, for this polish has all the beauty of these rare lacquer colors.

And you'll certainly want to give your nails a bit of this brightness, for they look more stunning than you ever thought possible. They shine and gleam, and honestly have the same beauty as pieces of objects d'art to which Chinese lacquer has been applied.

But even more astonishing and even more important is the fact that this unique polish is amazingly resistant to chipping and peeling. Sounds too wonderful to be true?

For more information concerning this Chinese nail-polish, call Betty Dutton, L.A. 2000, or write to her at the Boston Globe, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Consider the Stepchildren Before a Second Marriage

By DOROTHY DIX

Emily Post "Mother and Daughter" Dresses for Night Wedding

The "Mother and Daughter" dresses that have been popular for some time, particularly for daytime wear in the country, are really charming.

Although the following description sent me by a reader is an evening dress question, it seems equally attractive.

"In the present-day fashion of matching mother and daughter dresses, what do you think about having my daughter, who is only 11, dressed like me at an evening wedding? I saw a very nice dress in a magazine and I saw myself a dinner time dress with short puffed sleeves and modestly cut-out neck, but with a long skirt. The question is: may her dress be long too, or would this perhaps look overdone?"

Children of 12 all wear long dresses to parties, so unless your daughter is very small for her age, 11 should not be straining the point. It is a question, I think, whether the effect of the dress will be becoming to you both. If it is, I wouldn't hesitate to choose it.

Surely a man of your age and experience must know that the boy of 14 who has been reared by a weak and foolish mother, who has not even taught him the decencies of behavior or controlled him in any way, cannot be disciplined by a stepfather.

The lad will resent your authority and flout it. His mother will side with him and think you are persecuting her poor darling when you try to correct his faults, and there will be bitter quarrels between you that will make your home a place of strife and your life a burden to you.

Titles Again

Dear Mrs. Post—My fiancé is a chemist and has his doctorate in chemistry. Since my family, and not the groom, is sending the marriage announcements, may his name appear on the announcements with the title Dr. instead of Mr.?

Answer—If he is attached to an institution of research or of learning it would be proper, but otherwise not in best taste.

Cottage for Week-End Holidays

Dear Mrs. Post—In your opinion would it be proper for a sorority to take a cottage at a resort some 50-odd miles from college, to be used by the girls in groups for week-end holidays? The main point is that there would be no chaperon staying in the cottage, and it would probably be inconvenient for most of the girls to find someone who could find for this status when they go down week-ends.

Answer—It would be perfectly all right for them by themselves, but if they are going to have men friends come to see them, then it wouldn't be all right.

Young Attendants vs. Pre-Wedding Parties

Dear Mrs. Post—Are the junior bridesmaids, as well as the two little flower girls, left out of the wedding parties given for the bride and groom and their older attendants? Even the junior bridesmaids are children in every sense of the word—age, looks and actions—and I think it might be out of place to have them at a party with the older ones. But I'm afraid to omit them without first finding out what is customary.

Answer—A similar question was answered a few days ago. Young attendants, even as old as their mid-twenties, are rarely if ever asked to the grown-up parties, except to the wedding breakfast or reception, and even then they need not sit at the bridal table.

(The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to answer many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Names and Signatures." Be sure to send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of the Boston Globe, P. O. Replies

Dear G. H. S. '03: It is nice to hear that you are well and happy. I do not mean to be aloof from the Household Columns, it is only that I do not have as much time to contribute as would be necessary to maintain an active interest. I overheard a conversation between a young man and a young woman who were talking about the Household Columns, and I thought I would write you a letter to let you know that I was still interested in you.

Do you know what that means? It means that you can use a typewriter, open a file cabinet or put your hands in water without damaging your precious nail coloring. It means that you can be reasonably assured of salting forth in the evening and not having part of your nail-polish come off en route.

To carry out the Chinese lacquer theme, this polish is cleverly bottled in miniature Chinese vases. And with each purchase you get a small-size bottle which can be conveniently carried around in your purse, so that when the time does come you can do a hurry-up, patch-up job before leaving for your date.

Clever? Yes, and you can choose from the most heavenly shades you ever saw. There's Jade Pink, Celestial Pink, Dragon's Blood, Lotus Blossom and Weeping Willow, to name but a few.

If you're wondering about colors—Joss House and Blue Moss are light lacquer colors; Temple Fire is a good, clear red; Flowering Plum is a plum shade; Canton is a deep, mysterious red, and Opium Poppy is a brownish shade.

You'll do well to look into this new lacquer. Use it once, use it always.

For more information concerning this Chinese nail-polish, call Betty Dutton, L.A. 2000, or write to her at the Boston Globe, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a widower with two very fine boys and I am engaged to be married to a widow who has an utterly undisciplined son. My boys are good students, well advanced in their studies for their ages, well mannered and courteous, Boy Scouts, page boys in church and members of their church dramatic club. My fiancée's son is backward in his school work, far behind in his grades, has boorish manners, doesn't show people even common courtesy, and his sole ambition is playing with older boys and coming home with weird tales of juvenile acts of violence, such as cleaning out empty houses, gang fights, etc.

When I speak to this boy's mother (my future wife) about why she does not control him and take him to task for his faults, she brushes it aside by saying: "Why do you worry about it? He will learn to behave as he should in time."

Or: "Never mind about Edward. I'll look after him when the time comes." When this boy comes under my care I am going to make him toe the mark and I realize it is going to be no easy task. Nor do I see how the three boys, who are all between 12 and 14 years of age, are going to be able to get along together. Now the question is: Should I go ahead with this marriage, or wait until I see a decided change in the boy? If I marry the mother, will I have unrestricted control over my stepson, or will I be limited by the fact that I am not his father?

S. E. M.

ANSWER—I should certainly advise you against going into this marriage unless you are hunting trouble, because there will be nothing else in it but trials and tribulations from your wedding day until you rate a divorce or a funeral.

Surely a man of your age and experience must know that the boy of 14 who has been reared by a weak and foolish mother, who has not even taught him the decencies of behavior or controlled him in any way, cannot be disciplined by a stepfather.

The lad will resent your authority and flout it. His mother will side with him and think you are persecuting her poor darling when you try to correct his faults, and there will be bitter quarrels between you that will make your home a place of strife and your life a burden to you.

My earnest advice to you is not to marry this woman. It will bring you nothing but misery and regret. If she had all the virtues and the charms of combined femininity, they would be offset by that trait of a boy.

Don't Wreck Another's Home

Dear Miss Dix—I have been a personal secretary for the last 15 years to a very fine gentleman. He wants to divorce his wife and marry me and I don't know what to do, as I don't feel that I could be happy with him, knowing that I have taken him away from his family. What shall I do?

ANSWER—You know very well what to do. Get another job and tell your philandering employer to go back to his duty. The stew you have in hand is wrecking another woman's home.

CHAPTER XXXIV

"There's not a lot to tell," Grandmother Radzell said. "You remember we read the story of this Jerry woman's success and saw her picture in the paper?"

"Yes," said Andy. "And you know that as soon as I learned they were coming to Chicago with the tryout I wrote asking this wonderful Jerry to a reception after the first performance. What you don't know is that she accepted with pleasure. It's going to be a brilliant affair, Joanne, but I've been so upset I scarcely knew what to do."

"We get one letter from you addressed one place and then another letter another. You never left a forwarding address and we didn't know where we could even telephone you. And then with all this thieving proving out about Hamilton, and knowing what a terrible mistake you'd make by marrying him—we, we haven't been very happy, Joanne."

"But I didn't marry him. Grandmother, can't you understand that? He couldn't ever have made me marry him?"

"O I do understand," Grandmother Radzell nodded. "Sure, darling. I understand, but honestly I've been so confused and so upset I hardly knew whether I was going or coming. The reception is tomorrow night and I had all the arrangements—all the flowers to order, the orchestra to choose, and everything. Andy hasn't been any help at all."

"After your father got him to come back both of them have been acting just like wild men."

"We weren't sure about your safety, darling," Andy said.

"You look as though you hadn't slept."

"I haven't," Andy admitted. "I couldn't believe you'd married that big stiff Burton. It seemed to me there was some mistake about it. We'd uncovered so much of his crookedness I thought there was something weird about all these letters of yours. I didn't believe any of them."

"Did he get away with much of your money, Dad?" June asked, just trying to hide the wild excitement that swept her when she read the love and anxiety in Andy's eyes.

"Some, but not too much. Mother and I have had a definite understanding. After almost 50 years I'm going to stop being a playboy. I'm going to be the head of my family."

"Andy, you called me darling awhile ago," June reminded him. "Why don't you do it now?"

"I'll talk to you about that later," Andy's being difficult. "He's desperately in love with you and he won't admit it. Just because you've got a lot of money, Joanne, he isn't going to admit that he loves you."

"But he doesn't need to admit it—your father and I know it perfectly well. And all those terrible days of anxiety when we thought you were married to Ham Barton have certainly taught me a lesson. I'll be more than willing to have you marry Andy. Why, when I compare the two—"

"Please, Grandmother," June said, watching Andy's embarrassment. "If you say too much Andy McGlone won't have me. He's just that proud. We've got to sneak up on him and capture him, haven't we, Dad?"

"I'll help you daughter," Jim Radzell said, his hand on Andy's shoulder. "There's no other man I'd rather have for a son than Andy here, and I'm going to be in plenty of need of his expert help."

"We'll talk about that later," June said quickly, trembling with happiness. "Let's be going home now. Let's leave this awful place quickly. I want to know all about the plans for tomorrow night. Let's make it the biggest reception that ever happened. Let's make it the most exciting event."

June Radzell was certain that the evening reception would be an exciting event. She was certain of that even before she received her twin sister's telephone call.

Joan had gone to great lengths to place that telephone call secretly. "Are you all alone where you can talk to me?" she asked, speaking from a telephone booth in a loop hotel.

"I'm here in the library alone, Grandmother's taking her nap. Dad and Andy have gone somewhere. This house is all excited over the reception tomorrow night. Joan, isn't this all just like a fairy tale?"

"It's the biggest fairy story I've ever lived, darling," Joan said. "Won't all of them be surprised?"

"The William Heater Company: This winter has been the first in the last twenty years that I didn't have trouble with smelly coal gas. Thanks to our William Heater Tri-Life furnace, that has now been done away with. The automatic gas regulator works like magic. I don't have to break up twice a day—we have even heat in all rooms and greater comfort than ever before."

Taking Care of Baby

By ANNE CAMPBELL

His mother has gone dancing. And so he stays with me. Barred from his home this evening. A happy refugee!

For him no painful journey. From the snug walls of home—Only a few hours' visit. To one who bade him come!

His mother's feet are twinkling. Where modern music plays. But her fond thoughts are turning. To Baby's merry gaze.

And she enjoys her evening. More than a girl, carefree. Because she has a baby. Who waits for her with me.

Comfort in Helping the Less Fortunate

Dear Invictus—Thank you for your kind thoughts of us. Wish I could write more often to the column. Perhaps this Winter I shall be able to do so.

Among the letters Entre Nous wrote to the column I can always find help and comfort. I never realized how many letters she wrote. Have four large books and many, many letters she never mounted. I shall do it this Winter, work I love to do.

The first of this year, I engaged in some new work among those who are not quite so fortunate as myself, and I find comfort and pleasure in doing so.

Beautiful sky today; how wonderful the evenings. Be sure to look

Mr. Entre Nous.

Dear Ignorant Sue—Why do you us that pen-name, may I be bold enough to inquire? Have read your contributions to the column and they do not fit in with your signature.

For better results in a good meringue try beating your egg whites stiff, and add one level tablespoon of granulated sugar to each egg white. Add the sugar gradually when whites are nearly beaten. Do not beat too much but when you remove the beater the whites should form a peak.

Bake meringue in slow oven 275 degrees about 15 or 20 minutes. Hope this is clear and that you have good results.

My Neighbor Says:

Bulbs for Winter display should be potted at intervals so that you will have a continuous supply of flowers.

When cooking cauliflower, place it in a wire frying basket. It can then be lifted out without being broken. Do not cover when cooking, as covering may turn it dark.

A speck of salt greatly improves chocolate, caramel and white frostings, and candies, too.

To remove chocolate or cocoa stain, cover stain with cold water. Then sprinkle a thin layer of powdered borax over it. After about 10 minutes, rinse well with boiling water.

GADABOUT

In Hollywood

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

Bidding goes on for Hemingway's new book...

Katharine Hepburn wants to play before another picture

KATHARINE HEPBURN

Paramount has bid an all-time high—$150,000—for the movie rights of Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bells Toll." But the bidding is still going on hot and furiously from all five major studios. And even before you read this Metro, Warner, or R. K. O. may have come through with a higher price. There are 24 advance copies of the book in Hollywood, and everyone is scrambling for them. All the interested studios are casting for it—without waiting to cinch the deal.

Paramount plans the biggest lineup ever, with Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, William Holden, Brian Donlevy and Akim Tamiroff among others. Metro would give it Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, John Carroll, perhaps Garbo, and a few others. Warners casually mention Jimmy Cagney, Errol Flynn and Bette Davis. Meanwhile the bidding goes on.

Richard Arlen has signed a contract at Paramount for a series of aviation pictures. This is like going home for Arlen, who scored his first picture success in "Wings."

Metro wanted Katharine Hepburn to do another picture on the heels of "Philadelphia Story." But Katie is canny lass. She would rather do another play first; then, if it is successful, she can sell the movie rights with herself as star for a higher price. She received $150,000 from Metro for her nine weeks' stint in "Philadelphia Lady."

You hear nothing these days of a movie for Mae West. The last time I talked with Miss West she mentioned the possibility of a screen portrayal of Katharine. Great, but apparently she wanted too much money for it. Mae is currently going to negotiate a weekly radio program. But sponsors are acting shyly, remembering the rumpus that followed Mae's "innocent" Adam and Eve. Mae has a scene that lasts seven minutes in "The Letter." All of it is played with Bette's back

THE ONCE OVER

I remember—
(With apologies to Hood)

I remember, I remember,
The old-time postage stamp,
The kind a small man could lift
Without a pain or a cramp.
It was a plain and little thing,
Quite pleasing to the eyes,
And when you asked for one the clerk
Did not demand "What size?"

I remember, I remember,
The colors, green or red,
The old familiar oblong shape—
With just a bust or head;
The likeness of George Washington,
Whose face we always knew,
It never bore three dancing girls
Against a field of blue!

I remember, I remember,
The old Postoffice where
The stamps were good all season—
There were no style changes there;
The shapes were quite unchanging—
I liked my stamps that way,
And no postmaster ever chirped,
"I've something new today."

I remember, I remember,
The stamp that used to fit;
You used to put it on your mail
And not your mail on it!
A man could handle it alone
When he a note would send;
Amusing it, he didn't need
Some help to hold one end.

ROCK-A-BYE, BABY*

Adin Ballou, in New York Herald-Tribune.
Rock-a-bye, baby, on the treetop.
You must come in, for the bombs start to drop.
When you are in, the ceiling may fall.
And down will come baby, plaster and all.
Then, rock-a-bye, rock-a-bye, rock-a-bye,
dear.
Up so high, in the sky, watching us here,
Are enemy squadrons close hovering near.
So, rock-a-bye, baby, trouble's to fear.
Mother is fitting his gas mask on Bill;
Grandma is knitting—she looks rather ill.
She rocked baby's papa in 1914—
Now he's got a job in a submarine.
Oh, rock-a-bye, rock-a-bye, rock-a-bye, pet.
They've dropped twenty bombs, but they've not got you yet.
The sirens have ceased and the signal's
"All clear!"
So, rock-a-bye, baby, nothing's to fear.
*1940 version.

Report Probe of Sabotage in Seattle Shipyard

SEATTLE, Nov. 12 (AP)—An investigation of alleged sabotage at the Todd shipyard, where two passenger ships are being converted into Navy transports, was reported here today.

The Post-Intelligencer said it had learned of five acts of sabotage prior to last week, but none had occurred since. The paper said ground emery had been found in some of the machinery.

Prosecutor B. Gray Warner confirmed that the case had been reported to him. Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters here, which the paper said was directing the inquiry, declined comment.

R. J. Lamont, Todd president and general manager, said, "The case is closed as far as we are concerned, and it is ridiculous to bring it up now." He declined to discuss it further.

The liners President Grant and President Harrison are being converted into Navy transports at the shipyard.

Star Farmer of America Title Goes to Arkansas Youth of 17

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 12 (AP)—The 520-acre home place where he was reared.

Gerald, farmer at heart, began hoeing cotton and milking cows when he was 6 years old. Since the death of his father last year, the responsibility for managing his mother's farm has been his.

He put the farm on a money-making basis.

Gerald is the next to the oldest in a family of nine children. His first year's projects included 1½ acres of corn and 6½ acres of Irish potatoes which netted $125.

What he'll make on his 1939-40 project will not be determined until all the crops are sold. His corn crop will average more than 40 bushels to the acre.

Every passerby will admire the impressiveness of your LACE NET CURTAINS. And from the inside looking out, they are beautifully sheer, interesting in pattern, and inviting to sunlight's cheer. Choose them for beauty's sake, appreciate them for long wear.

Habits Have Changed?
Says the Boston Globe:
"When two-pant suits were first advertised in Maine it caused indignation. 'We don't get it that cold up here,' they exclaimed."
The Globe has it wrong. At first there was great consternation, not indignation, for Maine we don't sit down enough to wear out two pairs of pants to every coat.—Lewiston Journal.

POOR PA

"Julia is particular about her baby's health and she won't take him in a crowd unless she has seen a nickel article advertised for four cents."

You See the Smallest Part

The iceberg—towering high above the ocean liner—is impressive. Yet seven-eighths of it is under water—unseen.

Similarly, when you unwrap a 40-Fathom Fillet, what you see is only a small part of the picture. Back of the product is the far-flung organization that brings North Atlantic Ocean fish to the tables of America as fine and fresh-flavored as the fish landed at Boston.

A great fleet of trawlers ... modern plants ... nationwide distribution ... it all adds up to make the 40-Fathom picture increasingly important to the port of Boston.
