Levee District Tax Assessment Is Ruled Upon

The attorney general's department ruled in an opinion announced yesterday that a levee district covering more than one parish may not assess railroad rolling stock for taxes.

Quered by Tax Assessor N. F. Pecquet of West Baton Rouge parish about the Atchafalaya Basin Levee district, Special Assistant Attorney General John L. Madden noted that the district includes all or part of 11 parishes.

"The definition given of 'parish' which appears in Section 29 (A) of Act 59 of 1944," he wrote, "provides that all taxes contemplated shall be levied by the police jury thereof or by other taxing authority which has lawful authority to levy taxes effective throughout the governmental boundaries of such entire parish only."

Other current rulings of the department were:

Registrars of voters are authorized to collect only the actual expense incident to the preparation of a taxpayers' list of voters under Act 308 of 1942, and may not collect additional fees for such service.

The (forestry) acreage tax authorized by Act 179 of 1944 would be due on all property regardless of whether it was occupied, as a homestead, this levy being in the nature of a special assessment and not a tax properly so called.

A police jury may not levy a parish sales tax nor a special road tax of $1 per family, but may levy a license tax on the business of operating automobiles for hire.

House Passes Bill For River Bridge

Washington, April 17 (AP)—A bill to authorize Louisiana to construct and operate a free highway bridge across Mississippi river, "at or near" New Orleans, was passed by the house today and sent to the senate.

The measure specifies that work must start within two years and be completed within four.

The measure does not specify the location and the author, Rep. Hebert (D., La.) was unavailable.

Local Man Named to Pest Control Group

Ernest R. Barber of Baton Rouge has been appointed to the pest control commission to succeed Roy H. Bannister of Lake Charles, secretary of state records showed yesterday. O. W. Rosewall and L. S. Bridges, both of Baton Rouge, were reappointed to the same commission.

Mrs. Margaret M. Larche was appointed Morehouse parish registrar of voters, and John U. Barr of New Orleans was named to the state securities board of curators, vice Alfred Crima, listed as deceased.

No holder of an insurance policy with Lloyd's of London has ever lost a cent through a member's insolvency.

Workers Entitled to Receipt for Social Security Payments

Every worker is entitled to a receipt for the old-age and survivor's insurance taxes deducted from his pay by his employer, P. L. McGee, manager of the Baton Rouge office of the Social Security board, pointed out yesterday.

The internal revenue code, as amended, in the section which relates to old-age and survivor's insurance taxes, provides that "every employer shall furnish each of his employees a written statement or statements, in a form suitable for retention by the employee, showing the wages paid by him to the employee after December 31, 1939," McGee said.

This, McGee said, specifies that the statement shall be furnished at least once a year, and in every instance when the employee leaves the employment, no matter what the reason, it must be furnished at the time of the last payment of wages. The statement must show the name of the employer, the period covered by the statement, the total amount of wages paid within the period, and the amount of the old-age and survivor's insurance tax deducted. In case the employer gives the worker such a statement with each payment of wages, he may substitute the date of the payment for the period covered.

Editorial:

The Germans Behind Our Lines

Opening of an Allied campaign to reduce the hold-out German garrisons that still block the use of certain important French ports brings to mind the possibility of a similar last-ditch battle by the largest German holdout garrison of all—the several hundred thousand German troops in Norway. The Germans are estimated to have about 200,000 troops in Norway, plus Quisling forces of about 10,000. They appear to have made no serious effort to bring these troops home, and the Norwegian underground reports preparations for a long stand there.

The Germans are said to have moved the remnants of their navy to Norway, to have built their air force there to its strongest point, to have laid in large oil stocks and to have spent millions in enlarging their air fields and bringing in munitions and expanding harbor fortifications.

As a matter of fact, Norway might be almost as well suited for a last-ditch stand as the German redoubt around Berchtesgaden. There aren't as many troops in Norway, and the opportunity to transfer others to that country will not exist much longer, but the terrain offers even greater opportunities for defense. The Allies as yet do not have a land front on which to attack the Germans in Norway, with the exception of Russia, which has, indeed, invaded Northern Norway, but in a distant and isolated area, a region of terrible winters during which all fighting must halt. The mountain roads and narrow fjords of Norway offer excellent defensive positions, as the British found out to their sorrow when they tried to counter the German invasion of the Scandinavian country.

It is to be hoped that the German garrison in Norway will see a glimmer of reason and surrender when the German forces at home are smashed. A campaign to destroy these isolated troops would inflict much additional suffering on Norway, whose fate already has been tragic enough.

When the German war lords stand before the bar of justice on this earth and elsewhere, they will have to answer not alone for all their other crimes but for the needless suffering they have brought about by their suicidal resistance in the face of total defeat.

The Double-Crested Cormorant

The recent water-turkey hunt in which sportsmen were invited to bring their spare shells and free the City park lake of what many consider a fish-eating pest has aroused some discussion among local conservationists and others interested in wild life. Opinion is divided.

The water-turkey, also commonly known in Louisiana as the poule d'eau, is in fact, the double-crested cormorant. Native of the northern part of the continent, found to some extent in the Dakotas and in Minnesota and in many other places, including the coastal areas of Maine and Newfoundland. It winters in the South. The large flocks seen on the City park lake, on False river, and elsewhere in Louisiana recently, were headed back north. They ordinarily leave this part of the country about the middle of the present month. The flocks seen here recently appear to have been somewhat larger than the average.

Those who oppose such events as the park lake hunt do not deny that the cormorant eats fish. Some varieties are skillful fishermen—the Chinese train them to fish, tying a string around the bird's neck so it can't swallow its catch. The critics do argue that the cormorant eats about as many harmful fish as it does game fish, and that the flocks do not remain long enough to do a great deal of harm. They even feel that the flocks resting on the lake had a sort of scenic value in themselves and, above all, that an indiscriminate invitation to come out and bang away may have a harmful effect on conservation in general, particularly in the minds of the young.

The discussion between sportsmen and conservationists is an old one. Sometimes the farmers get mixed up in it, too, and you have a real merry-go-round.

The Big Smoke

The cigaret shortage as a topic of conversation is becoming about as stale as some of our hoarded cigarets. The numerous investigations of the shortage haven't thrown a great deal of light on the reasons behind it, but they have brought to the public attention some rather colossal figures on the size of the cigaret industry. It's big time.

In 1944, American tobacco growers harvested 1,683,000 acres of tobacco, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Production of flue-cured tobacco totaled 1,080,000,000 pounds, the second largest crop on record. Burley production was between 575,000,000 and 600,000,000 pounds, the largest crop on record. On July 1, 1944, the stock of both kinds of tobacco was sufficient to keep the cigaret manufacturers busy for about 18 months.

The annual volume of cigarets manufactured in the United States reached 100 billion for the first time in 1928. By 1939 this had increased to 181 billion; by 1943 to about 296 billion, and by 1944 to about 325 billion. In 1942 more than 22 billion cigarets were shipped to our armed forces overseas; in 1944, they received 79 billion, or almost four-fifths as many cigarets as were manufactured in 1928.

All this, of course, is aside from the production of enough snuff to fill a new "dust bowl," heaven only knows how many square miles of cut plug, and a mountain range of pipe tobacco.

Surely, if all this keeps up, we shall find out whether there really is such a thing as evolution and whether evolution still is going on. If so, every American will develop a new organ, a smoke stack.

The further Germany breaks down, the worse our service to prisoners of war is bound to become.—Richard F. Allen, Red Cross vice-chairman.

THE ROVING REPORTER

By Ernie Pyle

Okinawa—(By Navy Radio)—After a couple of days with the headquarters of the Marine Regiment I moved to A company and lived and marched with them for several days. The company is a part of the First Marine division.

At first I introduced myself to the company commander and he took me on a half hour's walking trip around the company area before turning me loose with the men.

They had turned in for the night and put out perimeter defenses so no infiltrating Japs could get through and any big attack could be dealt with.

The company was on a hill about 3,000 yards long and about a hundred yards wide. The men were dug in down the sides of the hill. There was a mortar platoon at the foot of the hill, all set up to throw mortars any direction.

Our part of the island had not then been declared "secured," and we had even received warning of possible attacks from sea that night. So nobody was taking any chances.

"This is the most perfect defensive position we've ever had in our lives," the company commander said. "One company could hold off a whole battalion for days. If the Japs had defended these hills they could have kept us fighting for a week."

He is Capt. Julian Dusenbury from Clausen, S. C. He is easy going with his men, and you could tell they liked him. It happened that his birthday was on April 1—The Easter Sunday we landed on Okinawa. He was 24 that day. His mother had written him she hoped he'd have a happy birthday.

"That was the happiest birthday present I ever had," he said, "going through love day without a single casualty in the company."

While I was aboard ship somebody had walked off with my fatigue and combat jackets. So the ship gave me one of those Navy jackets, lined with fleece, which is actually much warmer and nicer than what I'd had.

On the back of it had stenciled in big white letters: U. S. Navy. I had it on when I first walked through the company's defense area. Later that evening we were sitting on the ground around a little more fire, warming our supper of K rations. By that time I was acquainted with a good many of the boys and we felt at home with one another.

We had some real coffee and we poured it into our canteen cups and sat around drinking it before dark.

Then one of the boys started laughing to himself and said to me:

"You know, when you first showed up, we saw that big Navy stenciled on your back and after you passed, I said to the others:

"That guy's an admiral. Look at the old gray-haired bastard. He's been in the Navy all his life. He'll get a medal out of this, sure as hell."

The originator of this bright idea was Pfc. Albert Schwab of (1743 E. 14th St.) Tulsa, Okla. He's a flame-thrower and flame-throwers have to be rugged guys, for the apparatus they carry weighs about 25 pounds and the flames are very much addicted to getting shot at by the enemy.

But to see Albert sitting there telling that joke on himself and me, you'd never know he was a rugged guy at all. I'm not an admiral and I won't get any medal, but you do get a lot of laughs out of this war business when things aren't going the badly.

HOLLYWOOD

Erskine Johnson

Hollywood—The six-foot-four ex-doorman of Grauman's Chinese and the Roxy theaters took Gene Tierney in his arms today and allowed that Hollywood is a very wacky place indeed.

Glenn Langan of Denver, Colo., is the ex-doorman's name, and he is co-starred with the beautiful Gene in the 20th Century-Fox version of "Dragonwyck." It's the break he has been working for for nine years, ever since he left Denver to crash the screen.

He almost made it twice. David O. Selznick tested him for the role of Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind," then changed his mind and cast Leslie Howard in the part.

Paramount signed him for the "beautiful hunk of man" role in "Lady in the Dark," but Jon Hall got the part and Glenn sat around for 20 weeks without even seeing a camera.

Between promises he put on a tall hat and a red coat and gold braid and worked as doorman at Grauman's Chinese theater, scrubbed floors to earn his tuition with the Henry Duffy players, went to New York, washed dishes in the Automat, worked as doorman at the Roxy theater and wound up on Broadway as Lulie Rainer's leading man in "A Kiss for Cinderella."

Star the Hard Way

There's a star on his dressing room door in Hollywood now thanks, as you can see, to acquiring it the hard way.

"I guess though," he laughs, "I wasn't a very good Roxy doorman. I had my name and photograph on file with all the Broadway agents and producers for a stage role and every time one of them came to the theater, I had to duck into the men's washroom. I told them I was a great actor—I could not let them see me as a theater doorman."

At Grauman's Chinese theater one night, Glenn had strict orders not to admit anyone during the last 10 minutes of a mystery thriller. Director Gregory Ratoff walked up to him and demanded admittance. Glenn refused. Ratoff stormed. Glenn was adamant. Ratoff sat in the lobby, gnashing his teeth, until the doors were opened.

When Glenn was signed by 20th Century-Fox, he starred in a play supervised by the studio. One night Ratoff was in the audience and was introduced to Glenn after the performance.

"It took me two acts to recognize you," Ratoff stormed angrily. "You were the so-and-so who kept me out of Grauman's Chinese theater one night. You'll never work in one of my pictures."

Only a Rib

Glenn turned red, then Ratoff grabbed his hand, confessed he was only ribbing him and congratulated him on his performance.

All his life, he says, he has followed hunches. But on his first trip to New York he made a big mistake. He got in a game of smoking room golf on the train and landed in the big town with only $3.20 in his pockets. That was the time he wound up as an Automat dishwasher.

Getting Ready

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Gen. Eisenhower, nearing the end of a war which has occupied him for three years, has gotten himself into another which might keep him busy for a great deal longer.

He has come out for a unified armed service for the United States. He suggests general training for all officers, apparently with the idea of producing men competent to supervise any combination of forces in a given action, or at least mingled training to develop friendly understanding.

Carrying the weight of a man who has commanded two of history's greatest amphibious operations, Africa and Normandy, who has made full use of air power, who has employed Naval units to aid river crossings far from the sea, the pronouncement must have staggered some of his West Point associates. And a lot of Naval and flying people hardly could have been shocked more by a similar pronouncement from an admiral or Billy Mitchell's ghost.

Fundamental arguments against unification are hard to get at. Even newspapermen, carefully trained as objective observers, seem to get caught up in something when attached for a considerable period to any one branch of the services.

The services have bowed very well, although not without a great deal of friction below the top ranks, to a wartime system under the joint chiefs of staff which has been tantamount to union. But they don't want anything like that in the peace.

The Navy is already deciding what ships it wants to dispose of and lay up, without indicating that it has asked the Army where it might want to go.

The services have their technical arguments. The Air Force doesn't feel that men preoccupied with ground or Naval problems should be able to order it out under unfavorable circumstances; ground and sea officers claim air power is something they must have when and where they need it, and that they alone are able to decide.

Gen. Eisenhower, in his brief expression on the subject, seems to have in mind a top level familiar in general with everything, tapping off to the technical technicians for each assignment.

If the general has stirred up a hornets nest, he has some good support. Discussing the problem last summer, President Truman said his investigation of the war effort convinced him that:

"The end, of course, must be the integration of every element of America's defense in one department under one authoritative, responsible head."

"By the way of a good beginning," he advocated that West Point and Annapolis "should not be continued as competitive institutions, fostering rivalries that never die down. . . . At some point in the final period of instruction, switch the Cadets to Annapolis and the Middles to West Point. Break up the tradition that the Army and Navy are separate and distinct, with the success of one endangering the success of the other."

FROM INSIDE EUROPE

By Thomas L. Stokes

Naples, Italy, April 17—It is the little things observed as you travel about this country that makes you aware of the sorry plight of the Italian people who first were sold by their Duce and then sold out by him.

It is, for instance, the poorly clad people who stand about aimlessly as if wringing their hands internally in the squares of the small towns and in the industrial districts of large centers, such as Naples and Rome. So many seem just waiting for something to happen. They seem philosophical about it, which may be lucky.

Their sorry plight is seen too in the little boys, some of them mere tots, snatching coal out of a truck in the factory section of this city. One little fellow was making away with a lump almost as big as he. The contact between boy and coal, however, did not make his hands or his clothes any blacker. Both were already as dirty as they could get.

The sorry plight of the Italians is seen also in the distraught and unkempt folks, kids and old people mostly, who come begging for money, for cigarets, for anything.

In the poorer sections of the big cities, even along that beautiful drive to Amalfi with the blue Mediterranean down far below on the right and the mountains with their villas rising sheer from the left, looking altogether like a piece of heaven—even there the youngsters race along beside the car holding up wild flowers and live birds they have trapped.

They call out desperately as they puff along, "Hey, Joe."

They have been quick to learn ways to attract and please the American soldiers.

The sorry plight of the people was seen in the little old woman with greasy, stringy hair and one fang of a tooth protruding from a corner of her mouth. She delivered with many gestures a discourse as we stood in a street in Naples while a fire was being changed. Her gabbling was interpreted by a member of the party. She was bitter about Mussolini. Drawing her grimy, gnarled hand in a swift, menacing slit across her throat as she spat out his name, she complained about the high cost of bread and appealed for the Americans to help poor people like herself. She begged, too.

There was a time some years ago when it was popular among some classes in the United States to say in condoning Mussolini: "Well, he got the trains to running on time and he cleaned out the beggars."

When we were just beginning to get bogged down in the depression, one United States senator even said: "What we need in this country is a Mussolini."

In 1927 on a visit here I did discover that the trains were running nearly on time and that the beggars were not so numerous as they apparently had been at one time. But the beggars are back again and such trains as are running now are running only because American army engineers have repaired the wreckage left by the Germans who paralyzed transportation almost complete.

The American uniform to these people is as the light and shining garb of a rescuing angel. The truth is that the Italian people, like the French, were oversold on what the Americans could do for them, which goes back to rosy promises in the early days of the war.

On the other hand, they are undersold on what the Americans actually are doing for them, as are also the French. This is a mistake for which somebody or other is responsible. These people have not got the story here in Italy. An attempt is being made now to remedy this.

SO THEY SAY

Jap generalship has helped us in the past. I know little about land warfare, but I must say I am glad to be on the same side with our American generals.—Vice Adm. Richmond K. Turner at Guam.

We have secured our beachhead. Don't ask me why we haven't had more opposition so far, I don't understand it, but if they don't want to fight, it makes it just that much easier for us.—Marine Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger at Okinawa.

The San Francisco conference has nothing in common with the League of Nations. This conference does not repeat the past, but opens a new chapter in world history.—Moscow broadcast.

People do not realize that the western nations of Europe are on a decline, economically, industrially, and politically.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president Columbia U.

Resignations in high places will set a bad example for thousands of war workers who also would like to prepare for peacetime living.—Rep. Earl Lewis (R) of Ohio.

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By Drew Pearson

Washington—The town seems empty today—and a little numb. Actually Franklin Roosevelt hasn't been here much this winter, and things are really no different. He went to Warm Springs after his reelection, then to Hyde Park for Christmas, then, after the inauguration, to Yalta, then back to Hyde Park and Warm Springs. I doubt if he had been in Washington a total of two months since election day. But people always felt that he was here, that he had his hands on things, and so the town seems empty.

Even the guards around the public buildings, the folks who sit on the park benches, the elevator operators, the taxi drivers, seem a little lost. More than any other man, Roosevelt was their president. They felt he was working for them. And he was. They know it will be hard for them to get another such friend.

It is hard to write about Roosevelt now that he is dead. It was easy to write about him when he was living. He was vivid, colorful copy. And battling out one column a day, seven days a week for 13 years, I have probably written more about him than any other man in America—some things he liked, some he didn't like, and some he criticized quite frankly in public.

But not everything was written. And here are some of the unwritten things I remember about Franklin Roosevelt.

FDR Emptied Aarsenals

I have always thought that Roosevelt turned the tide of the European war by a daring move in the late spring of 1940, when France fell and it looked as if England were about to be invaded.

The British had lost most of their arms at Dunkerque. Their arsenals were almost empty. Ours were none too full, but the president, in one bold stroke, emptied them. He knew that if he waited, Hitler would invade England. He knew what the consequences were to the United States if that happened.

He knew also that if he went to congress, it would debate pro and con for weeks, and the isolationists might defeat him. So he took the law into his own hands. Probably he acted illegally. But he acted. And England was saved.

How Dewey Got Mad

I have always thought also that Roosevelt won his fourth term campaign by a very smart piece of strategy which only he would have devised. He got Tom Dewey mad. He deliberately set out to get him mad.

Dewey had been coasting along, making semi-New Deal speeches which were beginning to win a few votes away from Roosevelt. His Seattle speech on labor, his old-age pension speech at Los Angeles, were almost identical with FDR's own policies. There was not enough basic difference between the candidate for people to get out and vote. And the Gallup poll told Roosevelt that if there was not a heavy vote, he would lose.

So at the teamster's dinner, he deliberately set out to prod and poke Gov. Dewey and stir him into a rage. Dewey fell for the trap and at Oklahoma City came back with a scathing speech. Roosevelt on everything, Republican or Democrat, was delighted. So was the president.

From that time on, labor began to get sore. They rallied to get out the vote. From that point on, Roosevelt knew he was elected. I have always thought that if FDR hadn't succeeded in getting Dewey mad, Dewey might be in the White House today.

FDR Loved Yachts

Roosevelt was one of the smartest politicians ever to sit in the White House, but once in a while he slipped. One slip was when he let himself be drawn into the senatorial purge campaign of 1938, and among those slips was his decision to invade the eastern shore of Maryland against Sen. Millard Tydings.

That decision was based entirely upon Roosevelt's love of boats. I was on the inside of that campaign and sat with Mayor Jackson of Baltimore when it was arranged to have the president deliver a labor speech at Baltimore, an industrial city where labor is important.

But the president said no. He wanted to cross Chesapeake bay in his yacht Potomac and motor up the eastern shore of Maryland. It would be a restful week end relaxation. There was no labor audience on the eastern shore, only hostile farmers. But the president wanted to take that boat trip, and he took it.

The Labor day speech at Denton, Md., was a good one. But it was out of place. Hostile banners greeted him everywhere. The results, as shown at the polls later, were disastrous.

Spanish War Bungling

No man was ever more right in foreseeing this war and trying to head it off than Franklin Roosevelt. His attempts to block the Japanese as early as 1937 are too long to be told here and will have to wait for a later column. That, however, was where Roosevelt and Henry L. Stimson, now secretary of war, first were drawn together. Stimson had come down to see FDR in 1933, just after his inauguration, to urge a strong stand against Japan. Roosevelt promised and stuck to that promise.

However, I always felt that the president was not as farsighted in regard to Spain as in regard to Japan. I talked to him at some length about this at Hyde Park during the Spanish civil war. He realized that Hitler and Mussolini were subsidizing Franco and that this might be a curtain-raiser to a

Charlie Chaplin Named Father of Joan Berry's Baby

Los Angeles, April 17 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin was adjudged to be the father of Joan Berry's baby by a jury in superior court today.

The jury of 11 women and one man brought in the verdict at 5:20 p. m., Eastern War Time, after deliberating the bitterly contested case for 2 hours and 55 minutes.

The court room was only one third filled when the verdict, climax of the second hearing in the suit, was read.

Last January the first case ended in a mistrial when the jury was unable to decide whether the comedian was the father of the baby, now 18 months old, Carol Ann.

Women jurors in the first trial were in the majority in sympathy with Chaplin's denial that he was the father of the child.

There was a light burst of applause as the verdict was announced. The vote, as disclosed by a poll taken by the court, was 11 to 1, reversing the 7-5 verdict in Chaplin's favor in the first trial.

A vote of 9 to 2 would have been sufficient to decide the civil case. The lone dissenting juror in today's vote was Mrs. Mary H. James.

The jury—the second to weigh Joan's claims, since a previous panel deadlocked in January—was instructed by Superior Judge Clarence L. Kincaid to deliberate without sympathy, prejudice or passion.

The jury can not determine whether the father decides that both Chaplin and another man or other men had relations with Joan about the time of conception, Judge Kincaid said, the verdict must clear the actor.

Chaplin's character and reputation for chastity and virtue are not at issue, the court admonished, and blood tests to determine parentage are not binding under California law. Physicians testified that such tests proved Chaplin was not the father.

ORDER SEIZURE

to take such action "as may be necessary" to provide protection to persons employed or seeking employment at the plant.

Operation Vito permit the management "to continue with its managerial functions to the maximum degree possible."

He said the order will terminate when government possession is no longer necessary to the war effort and in no event more than 60 days after the restoration of productive efficiency.

In his statement released through the White House, War Mobilizer Vito declared:

"This plant is one of the largest 100-octane gasoline-producing refineries in the country."

"Its operation is vital to the effective prosecution of the war."

"The production stoppage exists because of a barricade which prevents safe access to the plant."

"This barricade is manned by a group of men dissatisfied with their rents in a nearby privately-owned and privately-operated housing development."

"The company and the union have a contract which is mutually satisfactory and neither is responsible for the stoppage of production."

Closed Since April 9

Lake Charles, La., April 17 (AP)—The huge Elites Service high-octane refinery here, ordered seized tonight by President Truman, has been closed since midnight April 9 in a dispute between workers and the near-by Maplewood housing project over increased rents.

E. F. Carpenter, mayor of Maplewood, informed a mass meeting of the president's order and then told the meeting that "we will not work for the government Elites Service or anyone else. We'll maintain our picket line for six months, a year, or until such time as we get our rents adjusted." His statement was vigorously applauded.

Approximately 800 workers living in the housing project announced after a mass meeting April 9, that they would not report for work until their rents were adjusted by the housing project officials. The strike affected 1,500 workers.

The workers said they had received notice that their rents would be increased effective April 9, from $44 to $66 on the larger houses and proportionate amounts on smaller units.

Picket lines were formed before the plant and several men were beaten slightly last week as they attempted to enter the refinery.

The Lake Charles Metal Trades council (AFL), bargaining agent for the workers, said in a statement that no labor question was involved and that the controversy revolved exclusively around the rental question. Officials of the Elites Service company or the privately-owned housing project have made no statements.

The Elites Service command with headquarters at Dallas ordered 100 Military Police into the plant last week for protective purposes. State highway police took over patrolling the roads leading to the huge plant.

Blames Minority

C. W. Owens of New Orleans, state business manager of the AFL-affiliated International Union of Operating Engineers, declared here yesterday that "efforts to discredit the American Federation of Labor" were behind the walkout at the Elites Service refinery in Lake Charles.

Owens, here for a conference with State Labor Commissioner W. F. Metzger, said the AFL Metal Trades council had been elected to collect the business agent for all workers at the plant and signed a contract and was eager to live up to it.

"But a small minority there," he said, "is preventing Louisiana citizens, members of the AFL, from carrying out that contract, hoping to discredit the American Federation of Labor. It is very doubtful in my mind that 10 per cent of this minority are citizens of this state."

"Incidentally, this is a strike, not a walkout. Any time you form a picket line and prevent men from working, that is a strike. The rent protest is only a means to that end. We and the management are in agreement and are willing to go ahead."

"The Metal Trades council has contacted every governmental agency, including the state, asking for protection for our members to resume work, but so far such assistance has not yet been given."

Owens, who also conferred here with State Public Safety Director H. H. Huckabay, said that Metzger had given a "true picture" of the Lake Charles situation in his recent statement that the walkout, in view of the interruption of war-needed gasoline, was a "form of sabotage."

The labor official had been in Lake Charles for several days but was called to his home because of illness in his family.

Ford to Stop B-24 Production

Willow Run, Mich., April 17 (UP)—The Army Air forces announced today that Ford Motor Co. will stop producing B-24 Liberator bombers before the end of August because of the strategic victory over the Luftwaffe proclaimed yesterday by Gen. Carl A. Spaatz.

An Army spokesman said nearly 100,000 workers over the country who makes parts for the "work-horse of the Air Force" will be affected by the cutback.

Ford itself now employs 22,000 at Willow Run, 39 per cent of them women, while 9,000 workers at other Ford plants make parts for the bomber.

War Manpower commission officials said the male workers will be absorbed readily by other Detroit war plants. There is, however, a surplus of women workers in the city.

The cutback poses the question of what is to be done with the huge, $100,000,000 Willow Run plant, which has turned out more than 8,200 Liberators since September 10, 1942.

The plant, which once employed 32,000 workers, hit its peak in March, 1944, when 465 new Liberators were flown from Willow Run.

YANKS FREE

for by the army," MacArthur said in his daily communiqué.

Four members of the Filipino collaborationist government have been captured and will be confined for the duration of the war, then turned over to the Philippine government, MacArthur said.

It was recalled that Jose Laurel, president of the Japanese-puppet Philippines government, once was reported at Batavia, which for a time was a Japanese headquarters in Luzon.

MacArthur named the four as Jose Yulo, chief justice of the supreme court; Antonio de las Alas, minister of finance; Teofilo Sison, minister of the interior; and Quinton Paredes, minister of justice.

MacArthur reported a continuation of heavy air attacks on Japanese hold-out positions in the Visayan Islands and in the Davao sector of Southern Mindanao, one of the sectors where the Japanese are believed most heavily concentrated.

In China waters, American bombers have sunk or seriously damaged at least six more Japanese vessels, including a destroyer, and a number of coastal vessels and small craft. Four troop-filled barges were sunk in sweeps "covering the Asiatic coastline from Shanghai to Singapore."

Heavy bombers dropped 150 tons of explosives on three Formosa airbases, destroying seven parked planes.

in the Marianas for their third assault within four days on the Japanese homeland, battering at six airfields on Kyushu.

Probably 150 of the sky giants were in the force that carried the aerial assault on Kyushu's airfields during the third consecutive day. Earlier strikes were made by Pacific fleet carrier planes.

Unlike their fire attacks of Saturday and Monday, which ignited industrial areas in and near Tokyo, today's raiders loosed demolition bombs on the enemy's air installations. Results of the raid were not yet available. Bombing was from a high but unspecified altitude.

The tactical campaign to knock out Kyushu's airfields was launched Sunday by carrier planes. They hit major bases at Kanoya and Kure, a Pacific fleet announcement said, and destroyed 37 enemy planes. Carrier fighters struck again Monday, destroying 22 more enemy aircraft, followed by a sweep by two-based army Mustang fighters. The Mustangs also smashed at Kanoya and Kure.

Kanoya, East Kanoya, Izumi, Kokubu and Nittagahara, all in Southern Kyushu, and Tachiarai in the northwest part of the island were the objectives of the B-24s. The Superforts had hit Tachiarai in two previous raids and East Kanoya three times. The other places felt their sting for the first time.

Meanwhile, more than 400 twin-engine bombers of the U. S. Ninth Air Force carried out continuing assault at 20-minute intervals against defended positions in Magdeburg on the Elbe river. The attacks lasted four hours.

Enemy equipment directly in front of the U. S. First, Third and Ninth armies was raked by 600 fighter-bombers of the Ninth Air Force. Within ten miles of Berlin, the bombers also raked a straggled 30 trucks in a convoy and strafed seven airfields destroying at least 13 planes. All the twin-engine bombers returned, but one fighter-bomber was missing.

NEED OF NEW

Dr. Voss, Dr. Rhea McMahon, and Dr. Kernan Irwin wrote to the American College of Surgeons to ask why the hospital couldn't be recognized by the group. They investigated, found that some of their objections were unfounded, and gave tentative recognition, he said last night.

"But that didn't fix everything," he said. "We finally decided that the only way to improve the hospital was to get a new building. The hospital was inadequate—did not have enough rooms, the laboratory was too small, the X-ray room was too small, and things like that. The question was how to do it."

"I was unofficially told that the industrial plants of the city—realizing the serious conditions here—would probably back the enlargement of a hospital provided there was a good, strong organization, accustomed to running good hospitals, that would come in and take over. The question was: 'Who is that strong organization?'

The Baptists have had much experience and much success in running a strong organization. That looked like the best bet."

Under Charter

Under the charter, he said, the hospital may be turned over to another hospital group to run, but it can never be turned into something else. Dr. Voss found that the request for the Baptists to take over the running of a new hospital would have to originate with the Baptists, that otherwise they wouldn't consider it. He talked with the board members and then talked with Dr. J. Norris Palmer, pastor of the First Baptist church, about the project.

However, the thing was not yet set because when he presented the idea to the board they were "cold" on it and just passed it up without a word. Then when Percy Roberts was put on the board he talked for the project and he was put on the building committee as chairman with Henry Louis Cohn, Jesse Webb, Bonnie V. Baker and Dr. Voss as members. The members tried to seek several sites without success, he said last night.

Finally the one in the 3500 block of Florida street was selected and this was the very best one of all, he said.

Asked if it was customary for a doctor to do as much as he has done for his community, Dr. Voss chuckled and said, "Is it customary? No, not locally. I guess I am the biggest fool of the present local crop. Sometimes I have wondered why I got into this. I am certainly not getting anything out of it. I've often said to myself: 'Why are you sticking your neck out and going all out for this?' But I started, so I just have to see it through."

"He Was Right"

He said the board agreed to let the Baptists take over, if they were interested and if they were. But there was one person who disagreed, Henry Louis Cohn. He insisted that the hospital be run by a new board, to be run by the Baptists, until those who had donated to the original hospital had been informed about the plan at a mass meeting.

"He was perfectly right in that," Dr. Voss commented.

He declared that the Baptists would not get a nickel out of running this hospital, but that they would have the prestige that would accrue from running a good one.

He said that if the campaign is a success, which he feels that it just has to be, that the ground will be broken within the next several months and that in 250 working days from that date there will be a new and more modern hospital added to the skyline.

Asked about the contribution he had made to the hospital in pushing the current drive, Dr. Voss said:

"I don't know that I have accomplished anything, but I have sweated and prayed over it many times and I guess that I have talked to everybody I have met for the past two years and I certainly want to see the thing go through. If this thing goes over I am ready to be thrown out the board—or out the back window. Then I can relax and forget it."

all the way over to this other war to take a belt at the Krauts."

That was the remark of a sleepy-eyed youngster, who roused to find the youthful-looking 48-year-old general striding about and injecting new life into the Cherbourg environment which, when he had closed his eyes some time before, had seemed like himself worn and battle-weary.

"That he did take a 'belt' at the enemy is recalled by all those who remember the widely-published story of the surrender of Cherbourg, which he received as his first spectacular act on the Western front. With his success in that campaign, he confirmed the claim that was already being advanced by many that he would be 'Lt. Omar Bradley's ace-in-the-hole throughout.'"

It was a GI who gave him his descriptive nickname, "Lightnin'." The answer is easy. It stayed with him because it fits. He is quick in making decisions, quick in carrying them out, and his formula is: "Outguess the enemy, keep him off balance and never stop driving."

Sent to Europe

Collins, who had had various assignments after World War I, including an instructorship at Benning, service in the Philippines, an instructorship at the Army War college, and the assistant secretary's post of the War department general staff, was the first chief of staff of the Seventh corps after its organization in 1940. He went to Hawaii as chief of staff to Lt. Gen. Delos Emmons in the Hawaiian department shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

But Joe Lightnin' was not the kind of man to be left at desk duty. When he was in MacArthur's staff he was raised to the rank of brigadier general, and in November of that year he was sent to Guadalcanal to relieve the First Marine division.

Collins led his men into battle on January 10, 1943, and in 27 days of bloody fighting wiped out the Japs. They moved on next to New Georgia, where again they drove the enemy before them. When he was given leave the following Christmas and flew home to spend the holidays with his family, it was with the expectation of returning to his men who were resting in New Zealand. But Eisenhower and Bradley had other plans, and Joe Lightnin' was sent to Europe and made commander of the Seventh corps. And that was the beginning of further successes for the Louisiana officer, successes which have won him the respect of his fellows, the admiration of his state and his fellow alumni of LSU.

Meets Peace Delegates

7. Conferred with the U. S. delegation to the United Nations conference on world organization, efforts of the state agencies in controlling the Red and its tributaries in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Decision to hold the meeting was reached Monday in Hugo, Okla., where Red River Valley association members were in session. No date was set, due to flood conditions in four states which might prevent attendance of key officials, but intention is to meet some time during May.

Ed C. Burris, Shreveport, secretary-manager of the Improvement association, said the Texarkana session would be attended by representatives of the Oklahoma State Planning and Resources board; the Texas Board of Water Engineers; the Arkansas Resources and Development commission's flood control division, and the Louisiana Department of Public Works.

Attempts will be made to map a co-ordinated program with U. S. Army engineers for immediate corrective action to control Red river. At the Hugo session, Col. E. J. Wanless, Denison district engineer for the army, declared that flood control is the first need on the Red river. He said it was necessary to prevent the annual losses, which cause heavy property losses, irrigation suggested.

Irrigation is needed to the west-end of the basin, he said, as well as flood control measures. He pointed to the plan for development of the Washita river in Oklahoma as one of the most important steps to be taken. It calls for flood control reservoirs, hydro-electric power development, and irrigation facilities.

Development of the Red river for navigation all the way to Denison is another project which, Col. Wanless said, may eventually be achieved. He said that intensive study already had been made toward opening navigation as far as Shreveport.

Col. Wanless said that sites for flood control reservoirs had been considered on the Blue, Muddy and Cane Rivers; Kansas and Little Rivers in Oklahoma, in addition to plans for water control in Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana.

He declared that additional flood control reservoirs are needed badly. Denison dam's benefit in flood control was proved amply during the March-April floods, he pointed out. Storage in the huge reservoir prevented an additional two feet of water at points as far south as Shreveport, he asserted. This would have meant inundation of additional thousands of acres, and a heavy burden over the over-taxed levee system, which broke in numerous places in Arkansas and Louisiana under the impact of water from the Little, Sulphur and Cypress rivers, as well as the Red.

Polish Plans for Security Meeting

Washington, April 17 (AP)—American delegates to San Francisco have agreed to back a plan permitting the proposed assembly of all United Nations to recommend—but not force—postwar treaty revisions.

The delegates expect to offer this plan in the form of amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks formula for a world organization designed to keep the peace.

They practically wound up their preconference work today, but will meet again tomorrow to give final approval to a draft of proposed changes for presentation to the United Nations meeting opening April 25.

Still in abeyance, however, is the troublesome question of trusteeships for the captured islands of the Pacific and for some territories in other parts of the world.

The delegation discussed the trusteeship question at length in its closed session today. It was reported leaning strongly toward mandate control by individual nations rather than international government of the territories involved.

It was learned authoritatively that the amendments approved—subject to final decisions at San Francisco—represent compromise versions of proposals made by Sen. Vandenberg (R., Mich.). They call for the insertion of the word "justice" at pertinent points in the preamble of the world organization charter and deal with the treaty revision question.

With reported unanimity, the delegates agreed to submit to the conference a proposal that the general assembly of the international organization be empowered to investigate and discuss prior to political decisions that threaten to disrupt the peace. It also could make recommendations to the 11-member council.

These might include recommendations for the alteration of treaties, if the terms of the treaties were regarded as threatening to bring about another war.

But it was emphasized that the council to be made up of representatives of the Big Five Allies and six smaller nations, would have no power to order or otherwise force countries which have signed a treaty to change its terms.

Presumably the matter and make recommendations if it chose, thus bringing the weight of public opinion to bear on the nations in question.

through the streets of the industrial city on the banks of the Elbe river.

It was the first real attempt to take Magdeburg since it was reached a week ago, though Ninth Army troops had crossed the Elbe both above and below the city. Thousands of Poles, Czechs and French—former slave laborers in factories around Magdeburg, cheered like a football crowd as Simpson's doughboys and tanks began the grim task of rooting out the Nazi garrison.

A front dispatch said Yank infantry was methodically approaching the city's center, but that Simpson's tanks were being hampered by thick smoke screens laid down by German guns from across the Elbe.

Troops of the First and Ninth armies linked up at Bernburg, a short distance from the Elbe some 27 miles due south of Magdeburg. The Ninth Army's bridgehead across the Elbe at Barby, southeast of Magdeburg, remained intact. German forces who had been by-passed by the Ninth Army made an attempt to break through and escape up the Elbe to the north, but were turned back after overrunning an American anti-aircraft position.

When the Germans late in 1944 made a sharp counterattack through the Ardennes, Patton swung up from the south and relieved the besieged Allied garrison in the key city of Bastogne.

In awarding Patton the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Cross for his sweep across France, Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley said "he has contributed immeasurably to the success of Allied operations on the continent."

Shreveport, La., April 17 (AP)—Representatives of the Red river basin states, meeting in Texarkana shortly, will seek to co-ordinate efforts of the state agencies in controlling the Red and its tributaries in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Churchill Pays High Tribute to Roosevelt at Memorial Service

London, April 17 (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the house of commons today that the late President Roosevelt was the "greatest American friend" Britain had ever known and a "champion of freedom" who had raised the United States to heights never attained by any nation in history.

Churchill's tribute came a few hours after he had gathered with King George, Queen Elizabeth, members of the cabinet and parliament for a memorial service in war-scarred St. Paul's cathedral. Once during the service the prime minister wept, but quickly recovered himself.

"There was never a moment's doubt in this war upon which side his sympathy lay. He never lost faith in Britain," Churchill said.

"He devised the extraordinary measure of assistance called lend-lease which will stand forth as the most unselfish, unworldly financial act of any country in all history."

The prime minister traced the growth of his friendship with President Roosevelt, by letters and by personal contact, from the time that Churchill assumed the admiralty post in September, 1939, at the outbreak of the European war, to last Thursday, when he received his last messages from the president.

"I had met him but only for a few minutes after the close of the last war and as soon as I went to the admiralty in September, 1939, he telegraphed, inviting me to correspond with him direct on naval or other matters if at any time I felt inclined," Churchill recalled.

"Having obtained the permission of the prime minister, I did so. Knowing President Roosevelt's keen interest in sea warfare, I furnished him with a stream of information about our naval affairs."

In the autumn of 1941, Churchill continued, he met the president in Newfoundland for the first time in the war "and together we drew up a declaration which has since been called the Atlantic charter and which, I trust, will remain the guide for both our peoples and the other peoples of the world."

Their next meeting was in Washington after Japan declared war on the United States, the prime minister said, and "since then, we have advanced over land and over sea, through many difficulties and disappointments, but always with a broadening measure of success."

Churchill said that in the course of their wartime association, he and Mr. Roosevelt exchanged over 1,700 messages, many of them lengthy, and in nine meetings had about 120 days of close personal contact.

"I felt the utmost confidence in his upright, inspiring character and his outlook and personal regard—an affection, I must say, beyond my power to express today," he said.

He said that President Roosevelt's "physical affliction lay heavily upon him. It was a marvel that he bore up against it through all the many years of tumult and storm."

"Not one man in 10,000 stricken and crippled as he was would have attempted to have plunged into a life of physical and mental exertion and of hard, ceaseless political controversy."

"Not one in a generation would have succeeded."

Churchill said that he noticed at the Yalta conference that the president was "ailing."

"His captivating smile, his gay, charming manner had not deserted him," he said. "But his face had a transparency and an air of purification and often there was a faraway look in his eyes."

"When I took leave of him at Alexandria, I must confess that I had an indefinable sense of fear that his strength and health were on the ebb."

Yet the president continued to work, Churchill said, until:

"As the saying goes, he died in harness, and we may well say, in battle harness, like his soldier, sailors and airmen who died by his side with ours and are carrying out their tasks to the end all over the world."

stories and sometimes exasperated callers who had come loaded to put across ideas to him rather than hear his stories. However, he was a marvelous raconteur.

One morning I was sitting with him in the Lincoln study when he told me the story of his first political battle in the Albany senate. It took him nearly 15 minutes, during which Marvin McIntyre was telephoning at five-minute intervals from the executive offices demanding that he come over to his desk. However, the president, would not be deterred.

FDR was under 30 when he was elected to the New York senate, at which time the Ryan Traction interests attempted to put across "Blue-eyed Billy" Sheehan as U. S. senator from New York. (Senators were elected by the state legislatures in those days.) However, Roosevelt led a little band of Progressive Democrats and Republicans who fought the appointment and had a majority of about three votes.

At the height of the battle, however, Roosevelt said that a senator named Charlie Cusack had come to him to say that the mortgage on his farm was going to be foreclosed if he voted against Sheehan.

"Seneca county hadn't elected a Democrat since 1856," the president said, "and Charlie Cusack was a political miracle. He was about 73 years old, had a long beard, usually stained with tobacco juice. We investigated, found the mortgage was a good investment, and that the Ryan Traction interests had pressured the bank. So some of us raised the money to pay off the mortgage."

"Then we found that two others on our side were threatened with mortgage foreclosures. So we paid them off."

"Then one night, in the Ten Eyck hotel," Roosevelt continued, "Charlie Cusack was sitting with a couple of other legislators drinking beer. At midnight the bar closed and one of them suggested that they go down to a speakeasy. The three legislators were sitting there drinking beer with three girls on their knees when suddenly the place was pinched."

The president, with a flare for description, got a great kick out of telling the story. He omitted no details, telling how the legislators were afraid of political reactions in their own districts if their arrests appeared on the police blotter.

"We're legislators—you can't arrest us," they argued.

"The hell we can't," replied the police.

Finally one of the legislators remarked that he knew Charlie Murphy, the head of Tammany, who in turn knew Pinkie McCabe, who controlled the police of Albany. So this legislator slipped out to phone Murphy. After an interval he came back.

"It's OK, boys," he reported to Charlie Cusack and the other legislator. "I talked to Charlie Murphy and he talked to Pinkie McCabe. Pinkie says he'll call off the police. Everything's going to be OK." But," he continued, "there's one thing you've got to do in return, Charles." And he turned to Sen. Cusack. "You've got to vote for 'Blue-eyed' Billy Sheehan."

"Well," drawled Charlie Cusack, according to the president, "I've been thinkin' this thing over. I'm 73 years old. Down in Seneca county they call me 'Uncle Charlie.' But I figure that if they read I'm arrested in this kind of a house they'll send me back to Albany the rest of my life. Bring on the police."

Naturally, this was a plant by the Ryan Traction interests and a phony arrest. Roosevelt won his first great liberal victory. He defeated Sheehan for the senate. That marked the beginning of the many battles he fought for liberal government until the end, last week.

Shortly before the end of his second term, Roosevelt, still silent as to his third term plans, was under heavy pressure to run again. Jimmy Roosevelt was then a member of the White House staff.

Roosevelt called in a group of advisers, including Harry Hopkins, and his son, Jimmy, and asked them to submit their reasons why they thought he should run. One of those present made a particularly eloquent plea. When the conference was over and the group filed out, Jimmy rushed up and said:

"What are you trying to do? You're trying to kill my father! No man can live through three terms in that job. You can't do this to him. We won't let you do this to him!"

"Jimmy," said the White House aide, "He's your father, but he belongs to the country as well. He belongs to the world."

He also blamed the State department for not giving quiet diplomatic help to the Spanish Republics, and even told me the amazing fact that his own brother-in-law, Hall Roosevelt, had gone to Paris to sell arms to the Spanish Loyalists through France, but that this had been blocked by the State department.

During these days of food shortages — GET 5 GREAT BENEFITS FROM KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is extra rich in protective food elements you need

In these days when many foods are short, make sure your family gets protective food elements it needs for good nutrition. Serve the delicious breakfast cereal, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, which helps provide these 5 great benefits:

- 1. IRON—to help make good red blood. Nut-sweet KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN actually gives you 3 times as much iron as whole wheat. One ounce provides over 1/2 of your minimum daily iron needs.
- 2. OTHER MINERALS—to help build bone and teeth. Once for ounce, ALL-BRAN gives 4 times as much phosphorus as whole wheat, and nearly three times as much calcium.
- 3. VITAMINS—to help guard against deficiencies. ALL-BRAN provides 3 times as much B₂, 4 times as much niacin, and just as much B₁, as whole wheat!
- 4. PROTEIN—to help build body tissue. Quality is of great importance in protein. And KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN provides protein of high quality.
- 5. GENTLE REGULATION. ALL-BRAN is a famous regulating cereal. Millions of people eat it regularly. Satisfactory laxation usually results from eating one ounce of ALL-BRAN daily and drinking plenty of water.

ALL-BRAN provides these important benefits because it is made from the vital outer layers of wheat.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is made from the Vital Outer Layers of finest wheat. Nature concentrates protective food elements in the skin of many fruits and vegetables. This is true of wheat, too. Wheat's vital outer layers (from which KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is made) are more abundant, ounce for ounce, in many essential food elements than whole wheat itself.

ALL-BRAN is triple-milled for golden softness. See that your family does not lack its 5 great benefits. Serve them KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly.

"We enjoy ALL-BRAN many delicious ways!"

So say thousands of women, who find that crisp and crunchy ALL-BRAN is a delight as a cereal in itself—that it adds zest to other cereals when it is sprinkled over them—and that it is wonderful in cookery. ALL-BRAN muffins are really something to cheer about. Simple recipe is on the package. Try 'em. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Here's where the HELLCAT gets its "Pounce"

FROM Brest to Bastogne and beyond, the story was the same.

The speed of the M-18 Hellcat—its ability to go anywhere—the hard, straight striking power of its 76-mm. gun—all this spelled bad news for enemy armor and strong points.

Now one secret of the M-18's lightning-like agility has been adopted as standard for all American track-laying vehicles.

For in addition to ample power—a principle long basic in Buick design—the Hellcat is marked by a wholly new kind of torsional springing that does several things—all good.

It smooths the ride, much as Buick Coil springing leveled the easy stride of your prewar Buick. Crews can travel at higher speed and remain ready for combat when they arrive.

It provides constant traction. Because all bogey wheels bear down hard, the Hellcat goes anywhere—even crosses fields in pace with wheeled vehicles on nearby roads.

And it means high speed. Holding tracks ever taut, this springing permits speeds as high as 55 miles an hour—speeds greater than many types of land cargo carriers.

Now Ordnance officers, who worked with Buick men to bring the M-18 into being, have standardized on this type of springing for all American tanks and track-laying vehicles. It will be a feature of both new vehicles and improved versions of older ones.

It has met the test—proved its worth. And no one is more tickled than Buick to see this Buick good-thing incorporated in other good American weapons.

Costumes and Antiques Lend Striking Color To Heirome Gaines Tea

In an atmosphere of colorful colonial costumes, beautiful antiques and appropriate music, the Heirome Gaines chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution entertained at a Silver Jeffersonian tea last night at the home of Mrs. Janie Jones on St. Phillip street.

Wearing period gowns of lovely silks and satins, trimmed in lace and set off with antique brooches, the hostesses presented a program entitled "Leaves of the Book," in which they depicted women of colonial history as they appeared then.

On display during the evening were many outstanding antiques. Mrs. J. DeJong showed guests a worn brocade vest belonging to Timothy Matlack, assistant secretary of the Constitutional convention and the man who engrossed the Constitution of the United States for the Continental congress. The garment, tan with a rose and green design woven into it, belongs to Mrs. Lula W. Adams, a direct descendant of Mr. Matlack.

An unusual inlaid secretary and family shrine, belonging to Mrs. DeJong, passed to her through her family, was also on display. The secretary, which was made in Valencia, Spain, in the 17th century, is 300 years old, and is worked with tortoise shell.

Several old silver snuff boxes, a glass case, and a silver Sheffield-on-copper serving bowl, were remarkable. A sugar box, made of cherry wood and standing about four feet tall, was another notable item. The box, which had been brought over the mountains into Tennessee by James Richardson, was divided into two compartments, the larger of which was used for storing brown sugar. A drawer was built in underneath the compartments.

The tea, which was given to buy equipment for hospitals, may become an annual event. The chapter, which sponsored two such events, plans to celebrate each Thomas Jefferson day in this way.

On the program were Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, Mrs. C. J. Custer, Mrs. Elizabeth Shippen Rhee, Miss Annie Belle Nesom; Mrs. Martha Jefferson, Mrs. J. S. Butler, who is regent; Betty Madison, Mrs. Edward Kerr; Abigail Adams, Mrs. W. C. Easton; Nancy Hart, Mrs. Alma Cobb; Mrs. John Hancock, Mrs. W. H. Adams; Betsy Ross, Mrs. Janie Jones; a belle of Revolutionary days, Miss Bobbie Jones; Evangeline and a friend, Miss Hazel Barron and Miss Abbie Lee Adams; a colonial dame of 1700, Mrs. DeJong; colonial dame of 1945, Mrs. J. Otis White; belle of the '30's, Mrs. E. R. Adams; modern colonial dame, Mrs. J. Charles Brueck, and a lady of the '60's, Mrs. R. J. Abbott.

Miss Lily Adele Maye DeJong turned back the leaves for the guests. After the program, tea was served in the dining room.

On the entertainment committee were Mrs. John DeJong, chairman, Mrs. G. W. Bilbo, Mrs. Eileen Potes, Mrs. Vertie DeJong Perkins, Mrs. Leon C. McGeehee, Mrs. Winifred Thompson, Mrs. Eloise Cline, Mrs. Boland, Mrs. Stephanie Wicker, Mrs. Pearl Anton, Mrs. Euphemia Garren, Miss Lucy LeRue Gueship, and Mrs. Sallie Lee Gregg.

Mrs. W. H. Adams headed the committee to serve. With her on the committee were Mrs. J. S. Butler, Mrs. Otis White and Mrs. R. J. Abbott. Mrs. A. B. Hurston and Mrs. R. D. Anderson, Mrs. Janie Jones, Mrs. K. K. Kennedy, Mrs. Charles Bezerd, Mrs. W. H. Adams, Mrs. M. A. McGeehee, Mrs. John DeJong, and Mrs. Brueck.

Refreshments committee members were Mrs. Alexandria Beech Hurston, chairman, Mrs. Katherine Brown Ball, Mrs. Ida May, Mrs. Caroline Milan Brown, Mrs. Alma Cobb, Mrs. Charles Paulson, Mrs. Josephine Borland, Mrs. Mary B. Sistrunk, Mrs. Emily Edwards and Mrs. Jane Butler Lancaster.

Decorations committee members were Mrs. R. D. Anderson, chairman, Mrs. Jess Williams, assistant chairman, Mrs. Idella Rueck, Miss Unice McGeehee, Mrs. Tiltie Eby, Mrs. Easterly, Mrs. Josephine Borland, Mrs. Mary Eby Tally, Mrs. Annie Maude G. Bardwell, Mrs. Florrie G. Hegeman and Mrs. Sallie May Atkinson Shoemaker.

Mrs. Charles Bezerd was chairman of the girls. Miss Lily Adele Maye, Miss Julia Ann Brueck, Miss C. Martin, Mrs. Dorothy Purcell, Miss Robbie Jones, Mrs. Mary McDonald, Miss Christal Larson, Miss Nancie Cobb, Miss Bettie Sue Guy, Miss Bettie Jane Butler, Miss Addie Lea Adams and Miss Eunice McGeehee were tea girls.

DARs Donate To Army, Navy War Hospitals

Speeding its war program because of the victorious sweep of American forces in all theaters of war, the Daughters of the American Revolution today contributed over $35,000 for Naval hospital equipment and $65,000 to Army hospital equipment. Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge, president general, announced this week end.

The funds will provide mobile X-ray units for the Navy medical corps, and also provide portable X-ray units and field ambulances on board Naval ships.

At the same time Adm. Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy, received $4,000 from the junior groups of the DAR for the purchase of additional German metal locators. These magnetic devices detect pieces of metal in the body, no matter how small, and thus enable surgeons to operate quickly to save the lives of men wounded in battle.

The bulk of the funds turned over to the Navy, will go to the purchase of the mobile X-ray units, costing $15,058 each, now increasingly needed as the great American offensive strikes closer and closer to the heart of Japan.

The portable X-ray unit is a new device which makes possible the X-ray examination of wounded or sick men aboard ship, without transferring the patients to the X-ray laboratory. The units can be set up in any ward or place on shipboard, thus preventing the suffering to men who, desperately ill, would have to be moved in stormy weather under adverse conditions from their beds. These little units cost $900 each and one will be placed on each of the Navy hospital ships now in commission. Field ambulances costing $1,736 each are being contributed to three ships.

Another war project of the DAR which has been concluded is an appropriation of $61,200 to the surgeon general of the Army, Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, for a wired distribution system at the great Mayo General Army hospital at Galesburg, Ill.

The hospital has beds for 3,500 patients. Each bed will be equipped with head phones. Besides each bed will be a gadget of five push buttons. Each will turn on a radio network and also tune in on the hospital main speaker system, providing entertainment and news to the patients.

This system is needed therapy which the government is not supplying. The patients will get all radio network programs as well as all hospital programs.

Mrs. Talmadge said that the immediate response of DAR chapters to these war programs had made possible their fulfillment. They will be expanded as needed, she declared.

The Louisiana society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has contributed over $700 toward these projects. This was made possible by the 29 chapters raising money for this fund. The Baton Rouge chapter had a benefit bridge party and raised over $100 as their contribution to this worthy cause.

Yanks Find One of Hitler's Giant Underground Factories

By Louis Lochner

Heidelberg, Germany (AP)—Hitler's vast underground factories are no myth if the gigantic airplane motor plant, one and three-quarters miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, which I visited is an example.

The factory was built into the side of the hilly terrain overlooking Neckarelz, a village on the Neckar river.

Acting on a tip from Col. Henry Parkman, Jr., of Boston, Mass., who heads the military government in the Sixth army group, I drove 30 miles to the factory with Lt. William Conklin, former New York Times writer and now Sixth army group public relations officer.

About half-way up the hillside—perhaps 600 feet above the Neckar valley—there was a concrete mine. Directly under it we found the entrance.

Here was an underground factory of undreamed size.

Sgt. John W. Combs, of Baptist, Ky., who with me from the U. S. 55th ordinance, guarded the entrance, showed us a detailed map of the interior. The factory was divided into some 150 units, most of them large machine halls.

The plant was evidently one for the manufacture of the Daimler Benz airplane motors. Nothing was lacking—not even pinup girls and gas masks.

The long aisles bore numbers, except an occasional "zirkus" deep red on all festive occasions.

Signs pointed to seven points whence finished products were shipped on narrow gauge cars to the outside. To the left of the entrance was a narrow hall with enormous switches for supplying current to each of some 15 numbered "stations."

There were generators close for emergency current, but the electricity appeared to have been furnished by some nearby power plant.

The principal halls were about 35 feet high. Huge lathes and other machinery for production of airplane machinery parts abounded.

Micrometers, gauges and other gadgets filled drawers and tables of halls set aside for precision work.

Each department had its stockroom with carefully-kept records. Ventilators pumped fresh air into the plant. Lights still were functioning. Vast stocks of aluminum plates lined the walls.

The noise in this underground plant must have been terrific, for even when we spoke there was a reverberation and re-echoing of our words.

From the newness of the machinery we judged the plant was not old.

In Rome the face of the statue of Jove on the capitol was dyed a deep red on all festive occasions.

Fine Arts Club Hears Book Review

The Fine Arts club met at the home of Mrs. R. J. Keller Monday at 8:30 p. m., with Mrs. L. E. Himler as cohostess. During the business meeting the president, Mrs. E. E. Moore, presided.

The program for the afternoon consisted of two book reviews. The first was given by Mrs. Keller, entitled "The Forest and the Port" by Hervey Allen. It is the story of a white child captured by the Indians and reared to manhood as the son of the chief of the Shawnee tribe, and his subsequent return to civilization to start a new life.

The second book was reviewed by Mrs. A. M. Schutzman, "Laughing Boy," written by Oliver LaFarge. It is also the story of an Indian boy, but a real Indian, and his love and marriage to an Indian girl who had grown up among white people. There is a similarity between the two books in that both deal largely with the struggles of natural instincts against environment.

The hostess served refreshments to the following members: Mrs. George Allan, Mrs. Ralph Duff, Mrs. Ralph Easton, Mrs. H. E. Huchins, Mrs. W. J. Hughes, Mrs. K. K. Kennedy, Mrs. C. P. Litter, Mrs. Colin A. McHardy, Mrs. E. E. Moore, Mrs. L. R. Neill and Mrs. Schutzman.

Grain Pits

Chicago, April 17 (AP)—Grain markets closed on a busy undertone today with the bullish pressure of the past week absent. Committee house liquidation appeared at the opening and continued through most of the session, until a strong rally in rye at Winnipeg, touched off some buying power here.

At the close wheat was 1/2 to 1 cent lower than yesterday's close, May $1.74 1/2. Corn was 1/4 higher to 1/2 lower, May $1.14 1/2. Rye was 1/2 higher to 1 cent lower, May $1.33 1/2.

New York Stocks

New York, April 17 (AP)—For the sixth consecutive session the stock market average advanced today, touching another new high since September, 1937, although numerous leaders stumbled over profit-taking on the recent sharp upswing and gains generally were restricted.

Dealings ran to 1,000,000 shares in the forenoon. Volume then tapered as trends wavered but turnover for the full proceedings reached 2,070,000 shares compared with 2,500,000 Monday which was a 10 months' top.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .1 of a point at 63.6. The individual and rail averages were ahead as much, all three ending in the "new high" class. The market was broad, 874 issues registering. Of these, 439 were up, 321 down and 214 unchanged.

Bonds were steady. Cotton advanced 10 to 95 cents a bale.

New York Cotton

New York, April 17 (AP)—A heavy demand for spot May futures which rallied 95 cents a bale to the highest level for prices on the New York cotton exchange since 1927-28 featured active trading in the futures market today. Price movements in the balance of the list were relatively narrow as buying encountered considerable commission house profit taking. Final values were 10 to 95 cents a bale higher. Aggressive mill buying against textile awards, along with short covering prior to first notice day April 25, swelled the volume in May.

The basis for the sharp advance was the tightening situation in spot cotton where "free" supplies of desirable grades have practically disappeared under the operation of the CCC purchase program. Other factors lending strength were the statement of WPB officials that V-E day will likely bring an increase rather than decrease in textiles for the armed forces and heavy need for cotton in Europe.

Bertolette Sparks Pirate Keglers to AIAA Bowling Leadership

Bill Bertolette rolled his Pirates into first place in the du Pont-Ethyl AIAA Bowling league at Glynn's lanes this week with a sizzling 611 series that was topped by a 235 second line. Bertolette's efforts were tops of the night, and his team's series totals were best in their departments too.

Indians, All-Stars Win in Boy's USO Cage Tournament

A late rally that fell just short of its mark gave the Indians a victory over the Blue Darts in the first contest of the Boys' USO basketball tournament last night. Leading 21-24 going into the last quarter, the Indians hung on, to salvage a 36-35 victory. In the second contest the All-Stars easily beat the Capitol Stores quintet, 37-23.

Indians Lead
In the opening contest, the Indians jumped out into a 16-6 lead and increased it to 27-12 by halftime. But largely through the efforts of the Blue Darts' Walton, the contest ended up as a thriller. Center Sommers was outstanding for the victors, leading the scoring with 10 markers, and controlling the backboards for his team.

The All-Stars eliminated the Capitol Stores' team in the evening's finale, led by L. Courtney with 10 points, and Long with 8. For the losers, Richardson with 12 points was high scorer. The All-Stars jumped out to an early lead, taking a 10-3 advantage in the first quarter and increasing it to 18-7 by halftime. See-sawing up, the score went to 25-14 as the third quarter ended.

The finale will be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the Isthmian High gymnasium. The Indians will meet the All-Stars for the championship.

Cooper Brothers To Confer With Bredon on Pay

Chicago, April 17 (UP)—Leslie O'Connor, chairman of baseball's advisory council, announced today that Mort and Walker Cooper, the St. Louis Cardinals' famed brother battery, will confer with him tomorrow concerning their salary differences with President Sam Bredon of the Cardinals.

Bredon is in St. Louis and is not expected to attend the conference, but the Coopers said that Lee J. Haveren, their attorney, would accompany them to see O'Connor.

The Coopers, after quitting the Cardinals Saturday in a strike for higher wages, rejoined the team yesterday and announced they had been "urged to pursue our rights through orderly and regular channels" upon the suggestion and advice of O'Connor.

Walker, Cardinal captain and star catcher, was behind the plate the full nine innings today when the Cardinals lost their National League opener to the Chicago Cubs here, 3-2.

Although they have agreed to confer with O'Connor, the two Missourians emphasized that they will not accept less than $15,000 each.

Bertolette got a good helping 519 from Len Calvert, and together they got 206 and 235 to help towards a scratch team 826 and gross 949. The totals of 2,429 scratch and 2,798 gross for the Pirates were best of all allies. Paced by Cary Skrinney's steady 556, the losing Cardinals put up a game scrap. The Cards' first line 827 was high scratch and their 954 was best gross game of all matches.

Percy Trotter's 541 was the highlight of the Braves' 4-0 win over Giants, giving the winners second place only two games back of Pirates. Browns beat Dodgers 3-1 to tie cards for third, three games off the top. Jerry Prejean of the Dodgers had a closing 211 for a crack 569, while for the winning Browns Earl Dugas opened with 294 and finished with 511.

Says Ban Will Definitely Stay Until V-E Day

And Leaves Speculation On Post-V-E Day Open; Brownout, Curfew Stay

By Bus Ham
Washington, April 17 (AP)—President Truman, in his first remarks on a sports subject, today positively put his foot down on a resumption of racing before V-E Day.

The new president also said there will be no lifting of the midnight curfew or brownout, at least until victory in Europe.

At his first news conference, the man who succeeded Franklin Delano Roosevelt in the White House quickly stamped out current rumors about a quick return of racing.

Truman was asked about reports which came to a head Monday that former War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes' wartime prohibition against racing might be lifted on May 10.

The ban has done a lot for the moral well being of the country, the chief executive said, and stated emphatically that he did not intend to lift it.

Asked whether there might be another decision after V-E Day, the president said he did not have the answer to that question.

Just before Byrnes resigned as war mobilizer to return to civilian life, he said in a report to the late President Roosevelt and congress that the racing ban should be lifted V-E Day.

Other good series saw Mike Griebel pace Cubs was 523; Gil Moore and John Sharkey teamed with 545 and 529 to lead the Tigers to a 3-1 win over Athletics, where "Hot Harry" O'Connell got back in the groove with second best series of the night, a 597 on 192-211-194.

Duffer Tournery Gets Under Way; 23 Enter

Qualifying play in the City park last night by Course Manager Paul Bourg. The tournery will continue to hold qualifying play until Sunday, when the finals will be held.

Young Albert Triche led the field with a 40 for the nine-hole preliminaries. Triche, a Baton Rouge High student, set the pace for the entire field with his red-hot score, while Harry Meames and H. H. Greenblatt followed closely with a 41.

Running a third was E. J. Landry, shooting a 42; and Danny Kahn rated next on the list with a 46.

Shooting a 47 were Alton Melancon, W. H. Bolling, Sidney Lawton and R. S. Sayers; followed by L. J. Arthur with a 48 and L. D. Wier with a 51.

The medal-play tournery is a new style of meet for Baton Rouge, and is divided into groups of eight, with the classes to be created by the nine-hole qualifying totals.

An additional 18 holes will be added to the qualifying scores to determine the first three winners in each flight. Values of the prizes to be awarded are 7, $4 and $2.20.

The 18-hole round can be played any time from April 22 to April 28, and with any number of the player's respective class in a group no larger than a foursome.

Twenty-three entries have registered so far.

Plenty of Pep, Drive on Lookouts Says Bert Neihoff
Chattanooga, Tenn., April 17 (UP)—Manager Bert Neihoff, back in baseball harness after a season managing a professional girls' softball team, expects a good showing from his Chattanooga Lookouts when the Southern association pennant race gets started.

With 37 Lookouts in camp, Neihoff said today that the team appears to be stronger this year than last, although actual strength of the club can't be predicted this early.

Two Good Hurlers
Neihoff has two pitchers who have shown up well in spring training—Southpaw Larry Brunke, who won seven and lost one for Kingsport, Tenn., last year, and Joe Cleary, a right hander who won six and lost 14 for the Lookouts in 1944.

Bob Comiskey is expected to get the nod as starting catcher if he comes along as well as he has the past week or so.

Outfield and infield spots are well scattered with question marks right now, but early standouts include Jim Langley at first, Maurice Lee or Armond Gallart at third and one of two Cubans, Angel Fleitas and Manuel Hidalgo, at shortstop. Both of them have shown up well in fielding the ball this week, but their hitting is still weak.

Neihoff said his best prospects so far in the outfield are Gil Coan, who batted .376 for Kingsport last year, and Earl Wooten, who hit .307 as a pitcher-first baseman.

The Choo Choo pilot plans to trim his squad in a couple of days in preparation for the opening at Eagle stadium April 27 against Atlanta. He will open the season with eight of his 14 pitching candidates.

"My boys look pretty good," he summed up. "I think they have plenty of pep and drive and will be developed into a good club after they get started."

99,747 Attend Major Openers, Weather Poor
New York, April 17 (UP)—Threatening weather held the crowds down at the major league opening games in most cities today, with the eight inaugurals drawing 99,747 as compared with 145,364 in 1944.

The American league drew 43,003, while the National league recorded 56,744 at its four games. Cincinnati, which drew the highest attendance for its opener with Chicago last year, took honors again today with 30,069.

Bonham Reports To Yankees After Salary Dispute

New York, April 17 (UP)—Ernie Bonham, New York Yankee pitcher who won 12 and lost nine games last season, reported today during the Boston Red Sox game at Yankee stadium.

Bonham was absent from spring training because of a salary argument. He is demanding the same amount he received in 1944—$15,000. The Yankee management said it would meet his demand if a physical examination showed that the big right-hander has been cured of a back ailment that hampered him last year.

Juan Zuarita Still Favored as Odds Drop on Fight

Mexico City, April 17 (AP)—Odds dropped a bit today but Juan Zuarita still was favored to retain his NBA lightweight championship in his 15-round fight tomorrow night with Ike Williams of Philadelphia.

The Mexican boxer started training as an overwhelming choice but there was a change when word got around that Williams had run out of sparring partners.

At his final punching session yesterday, Williams had a Mexican named Poncho Malacara—which means "Uppercut Bad Face"—bloody in three rounds. Then he put his successor out in the first. After that two other sparring decided they would not fight because they had just had their lunch.

Both Zuarita, veteran of 13 years in the ring, and 21-year-old Williams were pronounced in perfect condition today by their managers.

George Parnassus, Zuarita's manager, commented that "Williams may have a good punch, but Zuarita isn't maimed. Hard left hook may cause him some misery."

Commie McCarthy, manager of Williams, said that apparently the challenger is unaffected by Mexico City's high altitude, which causes some visiting athletes to become winded.

The Mexico City bull ring, largest in Latin America, has been converted into a boxing arena.

Capacity, including stands and ringside, is 30,000. Prices are the highest in Mexico boxing history, ranging from $1 to $20.

Phil Palmer Easily Whips Ben Evans In 10-Round Bout
New Orleans, April 17 (AP)—Phil Palmer, Vancouver, B. C., decisively outpointed Ben Evans of Oklahoma City, in a 10-round bout here last night.

Evans who has been a great drawing card here, appeared far below his best form, and with the exception of the first three rounds, was clearly an also-ran.

The Oklahoma appeared too finely drawn at 140½ pounds. His best weight is 145 and it appeared the weight making had a lot to do with his performance. Palmer weighed 139.

Palmer, a strong, durable youngster, peppered Evans' body at will. There were no knockdowns, but the British Columbian shooked the Oklahoma frequently, with short uppercuts at close quarters.

Indians Lose Two More Men To Armed Forces

Cleveland, April 17 (UP)—The armed forces claimed two more members of the Cleveland Indians today and left another on the sidelines.

Ray Mack, 28-year-old second baseman, who did not report for spring training this year because of his war job, left for service in the army.

Nineteen-year-old rookie catcher Hank Ruskowski leaves for military service in three weeks. Until then he will show up in uniform with Jim McDonnell, the only other catcher on the Tribe roster at present.

Mel Harder, veteran Cleveland Indian pitcher, missed his first opener in 18 years. He decided to stay on his war job until his draft status is clarified. Mel joined the Tribe in 1928 and in 17 years won 209 games.

Lefty LaChance Whips Norman See in 10 Rounds

Portland, Me., April 17 (UP)—Former New England featherweight, King Maurice (Lefty) LaChance, 129½, of Lisbon unanimously decided Norman See, 131, of Montreal in their 10-round feature bout at the exposition building tonight.

Quiet Mr. Truman Has Gift of Management

By James D. White

Washington, April 17 (AP)—The nation's new chief executive is not exactly an amateur at management.

President Harry S. Truman's record shows he has a knack of making people like him and do what he wants them to.

In the first world war he was an army lieutenant and at camp was named canteen officer. He hunted up a doughboy who was an experienced mercantile man, put him in charge of the canteen. Together they earned a profit for Uncle Sam, a promotion to sergeant for the ex-merchant and a captaincy for Lt. Truman.

After the war Mr. Truman and the sergeant started a clothing business in Kansas City, but deflation caught them after a brief success. They had to go out of business like a lot of other people in the early twenties. Mr. Truman, however, refused to go into bankruptcy and it took him years to pay off his debts.

He turned to politics, made friends with Kansas City's Democratic boss Tom Pendergast and was elected to a Jackson county judgeship. In Missouri county judgeship isn't a judicial job but one of managing county affairs, like county commissioner in some states.

The state was in the midst of a roadbuilding program to "lift Missouri out of the mud." Mr. Truman had charge of spending $6,000,000 in Jackson county.

"Nobody ever found anything wrong with that," he says, "and it wasn't because they didn't try hard enough."

Among other things, Pendergast controlled a cement company. Mr. Truman might have played some profitable ball with it while building a new courthouse, but he finished the job with $35,000 left. He spent it on a monument to Andrew Jackson.

When Mr. Truman got to Washington as senator in 1934, he pitched in and did yeoman work on senate business, making friends by the committee, roomful through his demonstrated loyalty and affability.

It was his idea that the defense program was not being managed as well as it should be. He proposed a special committee to investigate. The senate gave him $15,000 for the first year, which was not much as senate committees go. Nevertheless, Mr. Truman hired a lawyer Hugh Fulton of New York, and went to work.

They turned in a report that awoke the country shortly after Pearl Harbor to the sliphed way some parts of the war effort were being run.

After that the senate never voted the committee less than $100,000 at a time. Confidence in it was so high that the vote was almost automatic. Mr. Truman didn't know, sometimes, that more money had been voted.

The reports of the committee, numbering as many Republicans as Democrats, were based on millions of words of testimony from anybody the committee thought knew the real facts.

"Our sole function is to promote the war effort," said Mr. Truman. "A political report has never come from our committee. If one ever should, it would be our last, for the committee would then have committed suicide."

It was estimated that the committee, by pointing out waste and poor management, saved the taxpayers many millions of dollars.

It was conducted upon an unusual basis. Any member of the senate could sit in any time he felt like it.

As the war effort grew, so did the committee's special staff. Its members worked hard for Mr. Truman, apparently appreciating his early arrival in the morning and the way he worked at a job with them until it was finished.

One typist rose to his defense when a reporter jokingly baited her by suggesting that Mr. Truman was "an old hellion."

"He is not," she replied hotly. "He's a swell guy."

President Truman hasn't had any experience at the biggest management job in the world—being president of the United States. Neither has any other living man, except Herbert Hoover.

"I will need the support of the best patriotism and brains of our country," Mr. Truman said on his way to the White House the other day.

"I have no doubt but that I'll get it."

Varied Assortment of Clothing in Readiness for Shipment Overseas

Miniature pink booties, heavy black work shoes, French-heeled slippers, and matronly house shoes are lined up on the tables along the dance floor of the Military USO waiting to be shipped overseas to refugees who have been without shoes for many years. These are some of the donations in the clothes drive for the war-ravaged people of Europe, for whom the late President Roosevelt made a plea in congress a few months before his death.

The response of Baton Rouge citizens to the drive has been generous, volunteers from the AWVS who receive, pack and prepare the clothing for shipping, state. The amount received by last night was estimated at 10,000 pounds. Baton Rouge's goal in the drive is 550,000 pounds.

Miss Evelyn Parkins is in charge of the clothing, as it pours into the USO, and she is assisted by Mrs. Newman H. deBretton, who has the responsibility of procuring boxes to pack the clothing in; Mrs. Louis Row, in charge of mending; Mrs. Hannis T. Bourgeois, Mrs. L. W. Eaton and Mrs. James Hodge.

"We've been greatly aided by Mrs. Katherine Fortinberry and Mr. Ben Lyons, who answer telephones and take messages for us," the ladies declared, and they also wished to express their appreciation to the Ours cleaners, who collected and cleaned the soiled clothes, the organizations who have donated boxes and crates, those who have contributed sewing machines, cord and rope, and many other articles, but especially to

BEFORE PAINTING

There is a vital factor to be considered by a property owner or tenant engaging the services of a painting contractor. Does he carry Workmen's Compensation Insurance, Public Liability Insurance, and Property Damage Insurance? Accidents DO happen and whatever their nature or their cause, damages are incurred. Proper Insurance carried by a contractor takes care of these items without involving the person for whom the work is being done. Accordingly, the wise owner employs a contractor who has proof that he is thoroughly covered. Also, you should be sure that the contractor is meeting his obligations under the Social Security Act.

Evans Electrical Supply, Inc., Celebrates Its Tenth Anniversary

20,000 Square Feet Required For Business

Mississippi and Louisiana Served From Local Establishment

Evans Electrical Supply Co., Inc., shows a long period of growth, a period not unassociated with the growth of Baton Rouge and Baton Rouge business enterprises.

In April of 1935 Oscar Evans decided to venture into the electrical wholesale business and absorbed Evans & Evans, a partnership then composed of Oscar and Willard Evans. The company at that time was mainly an electrical contracting firm. The old company had offices at 808 Main street at that time and represented and handled merchandise for 12 manufacturers occupied 5,000 feet of floor space.

Evans' company is hardly recognized today as the same one established in 1935. The offices have been moved several times and with each move enlarged the building and the work.

In 1937 Evans' company moved to 523 Third street; became distributors for 32 electrical manufacturers; and occupied a floor space of 10,000 feet. In 1940 the business had steadily grown until it represented 57 electrical manufacturers. More floor space was needed so Oscar Evans erected the building in which the company is now located.

Latest Displays Provided

It is a completely modern building, and when first built Baton Rougeans stopped to admire this new structure on Nicholson drive, the main thoroughfare to Louisiana State university. There are 20,000 square feet of floor space in the new building and the latest methods of displaying merchandise have been employed. There is a sales floor and a lighting fixture display room. Rooms are complete with Terrazo floors and all the modern methods of merchandise display.

There is plenty of parking space for customers; there is a rear drive for motor transport, also on railroad track. Two delivery trucks are operated to serve Baton Rouge and industrial North Baton Rouge. Baton Rouge has grown, business has prospered, because the industries of the city are in great need every day of fast and efficient service, a secretary was taken into the firm.

He is David P. Taylor. Taylor attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as an electrical engineer with a two-year test course with General Electric company of Lynn, Mass. He is a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Evans Electrical Supply company now feels that it is in a better position to help growing industries with their electrical problems and is in a position to render better service.

Serves Two States

The company now serves Mississippi as well as Louisiana. The type of merchandise handled was chosen slowly and carefully to secure the best possible quality for the customers. Evans Electrical Supply company strongly recommends to its friends and customers the merchandise shown and advertised in this section.

Because of war conditions the Evans' stocks are not as complete as those prior to the war, but they announce that they can and will serve those who extend priorities for necessary construction. "After the war, we will have the same reliable merchandise with complete stock and quick service," says Oscar Evans.

To keep meats from "bleeding," cook them in their skins with part of the atoms attached. Skins will slip off easily after cooking.

New Plant at Ethyl to Begin Work on June 1

Scheduled to go into operation in June, and costing approximately $750,000, a new unit to increase the production of one of the most important chemicals used to manufacture ethyl fluid is being built at the Ethyl plant in North Baton Rouge. It was recently announced by Clinton W. Bond, Ethyl resident manager.

Using an entirely new process, ethyl chloride, a clear, colorless liquid, will be manufactured in the unit under construction. In this new process, developed by the Ethyl corporation, the waste products will be reacted with chlorine to make ethyl chloride.

When the new unit is on stream, Ethyl corporation will be producing ethyl chloride by three distinctively different processes. The two processes now in use are based upon (1) the hydrochlorination of alcohol vapor and hydrochloric acid combine in the presence of a catalyst to form ethyl chloride and water. In the ethylene process, ethylene gas is mixed with hydrogen chloride gas in the presence of a catalyst.

Two-Thirds of Ethyl Fluid
Because of the enormous requirements of ethyl chloride in the manufacture of tetraethyl lead, the ingredient which comprises about two-thirds of ethyl fluid, and which does the work of taking out the "knock" in gasoline, Ethyl corporation is the world's largest producer and consumer of ethyl chloride.

The new process was designed to produce ethyl chloride by using available quantities of waste products and chlorine in order to overcome shortages of alcohol and ethylene which are used in the present manufacturing units.

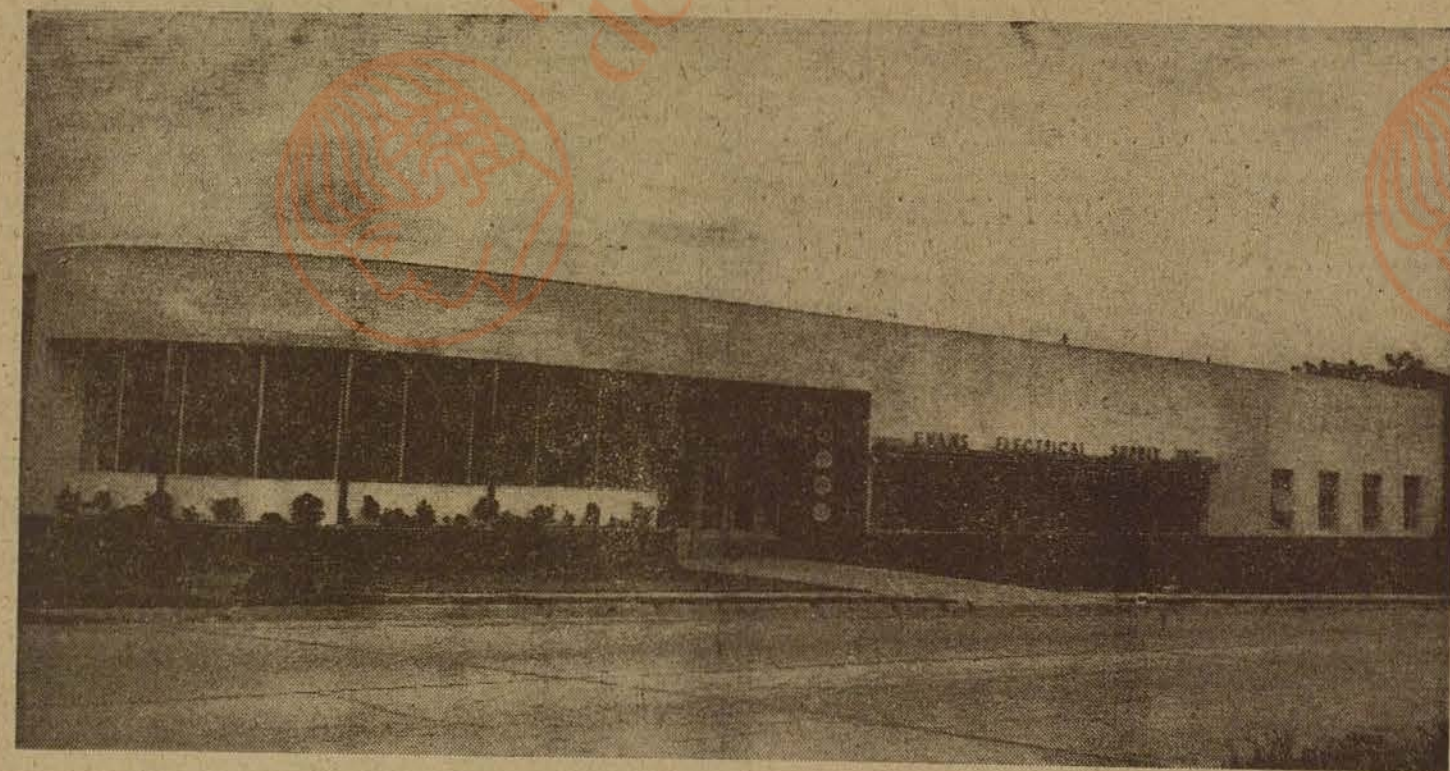

The manufacture of ethyl chloride by Ethyl corporation created continuously difficult production problems as the wartime demands for ethyl fluid increased concurrently with other demands for raw materials used in making ethyl chloride, Ethyl officials declare.

Chlorine was one of the first chemicals which went on the shortage list. Prior to the war, all the chlorine obtained from the electrolysis of salt at the North Baton Rouge plant was converted to hydrogen chloride for use in the manufacture of ethyl chloride, and this supply was supplemented by additional chlorine purchased from outside sources.

The war brought on a twin dilemma. On the one hand, supplies of chlorine were growing increasingly scarce, due to the intense pressure of wartime demands. On the other hand, Ethyl was in need of increased supplies of chlorine for its own purposes. The problem was solved by several steps.

First in 1941, sodium was over-produced—and the surplus amount

Following Rent Rules Will Save Many Violations

Landlords and tenants following the simple rules of rent regulations will avoid many of the most common violations, Ernest Roberts, director of the Baton Rouge defense rental area, said here yesterday.

The director urged that landlords follow these rules:

1. Register each dwelling unit within 30 days of date first rented.
2. Notify area rent office in writing of any change in service or equipment, but do not charge over maximum rent shown on the registration statement until authorized in writing by the area rent director.
3. When seeking to recover possession of their property, landlords should send written notice to the tenant, stating reason for desiring possession, sending copy of notice to area rent office within 24 hours. Landlords should remember that eviction of tenants is allowed only for reasons given in the regulations.

5. Landlords should not collect more than one month's rent in advance and should not collect a security deposit unless authorized in writing by the area rent director.

Tenants have obligations under rent control regulations, too, Roberts pointed out, stating they could be evicted if rent payments became delinquent, if they become nuisances, refuse reasonable access of premises to the landlord or violate a rental agreement. Tenants should request to see the landlord's copy of the registration, pay no more than the maximum legal rent shown thereon and should get a written receipt for the full amount of the rent paid.

Roberts stated that both landlords' and tenants' inquiries would receive prompt attention by his office, but stated that the area rent office was joining in the "handle-it-by-mail" campaign now being conducted by all War Price and Ration boards.

Need for Waste Grease Cited

Although every household and army mess hall is equipped with a receptacle for catching waste fats, collections must be increased if this year's goal is to be met, G. Chester Freeman, district representative, War Food Administration's office of supply, said yesterday.

The armed forces long have recognized the importance of used fats to the war program and are saving millions of pounds yearly, he explained.

In a recent statement to the War Food Administration representative, Col. Luther G. Weatherly, Eighth Service Command quartermaster and director of salvage and redistribution, pointed out "Grease for Glycerin" had been a byword in every army installation in the southwest ever since housewives were asked to turn in used fats to their butchers. Last year, he explained, more than 6,500,000 pounds of used grease were earmarked for war uses from army kitchens in the five-state area of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico and collections are continuing.

In all army kitchens in the Eighth Service Command, Col. Weatherly said "No amount of grease, however small, is wasted. Ammunition is needed too badly overseas."

Greatest untapped source of used fats is the civilian kitchen from which still larger quantities must come this year if the goal is realized, Freeman said. For every pound turned in, housewives are paid two red ration points and four cents cash.

NEW PLANT

placed in storage—in order to obtain more chlorine. This made it possible for Ethyl to produce the chlorine it needed for its own operations and to discontinue open market purchases.

Chlorine Shortage

This was of only temporary benefit, however. As nationwide supplies of chlorine became critically short, Ethyl corporation embarked upon an expansion program, both at Baton Rouge and Deepwater to substitute hydrochloric acid for chlorine in its process. While chlorine was scarce hydrochloric acid could be produced from sulphuric acid and common salt. A hydrochloric acid plant was completed at Baton Rouge in September, 1943, with the result that the Ethyl corporation thereby solved its own supply needs.

But then other raw materials, besides chlorine, became scarce as wartime uses increased. One of the largest wartime demands occurred in ethyl alcohol which is used to produce butadiene for synthetic rubber and to make detonating powders. Construction of a second ethylene plant at North Baton Rouge for the production of ethyl chloride helped to relieve a "tight" supply situation in ethyl alcohol.

As the war progressed, supplies of ethylene in the Baton Rouge area became inadequate in meeting the continuously increasing demands for ethyl chloride needed to manufacture Ethyl fluid for the war effort.

Having scraped the "bottom of the barrel" of raw materials, Ethyl corporation's manufacturing department began its search for new methods of producing ethyl chloride without using either alcohol or ethylene. Its efforts resulted in the construction of a small-scale pilot process plant to make use of waste products.

Process design for the full-scale plant now under construction was completed by the manufacturing department of Ethyl corporation, and the engineering design was assigned to the Stone and Webster Engineering corporation.

When the new ethyl chloride unit is in operation, Ethyl corporation expects to meet fully all the increased demands of ethyl chloride for the manufacture of tetra-ethyl lead without any additional drain upon available supplies of alcohol or ethylene.

Walking Sticks Needed For Wounded at LaGarde

A state-wide drive is being conducted by the American Legion to collect walking sticks for the wounded at LaGarde and the Navy hospitals in New Orleans.

Mrs. W. K. McMillan, president of the local American Legion auxiliary, has urged everyone to "look through their closets and find the long-forgotten canes which the boys in the New Orleans hospitals need so badly."

All members of the local legion posts have been asked to contribute the canes which they received as souvenirs at legion conventions in the past.

Canes or walking sticks should be left at the downtown USO or at the American Legion building, located at 701 Laurel street.

Different Story Told on $2 Reward for $8,000

W. E. Davis, owner of a local radio repair shop, seemed to be mystified yesterday at a story told by a New Orleans youth, James Ashley, Jr., who claimed that Davis gave him a $2 reward for returning a wallet containing $8,000.

Ashley found the wallet while working at his father's filling station in New Orleans. He told reporters there that the billfold had been held in safekeeping and later returned to an unknown man who dropped it while his car was being serviced.

Davis said that in the first place he had just started to leave the filling station when the boy called him back to give him the wallet. Secondly, Davis said that the wallet did not contain $8,000 but only about $400. He said that he received three $100 bills to the youth which were in a secret flap in the wallet and said "the boy must have become excited at the sight of the money which caused him to make the statement he did concerning the denomination of the bills."

Davis also said that all of his identification papers were in the wallet, but that since the wallet was only out of his possession for a few minutes, it was understandable why his name was not known.

Hoover Assails Veto Plan for World Council

Philadelphia, April 17 (UP)—Former President Herbert Hoover tonight assailed the agreement to give the great nations veto power in the world security council, terming it a compromise with Russia that would make the proposed organization as ineffective in dealing with aggression as was the old League of Nations.

Addressing the Foreign Policy association, Mr. Hoover said the original Dumbarton Oaks proposals had made the machinery of force to stop a would-be aggressor stronger than the machinery of the old league.

Outlining his own suggestions for the peace plan that will be adopted at the United Nations conference at San Francisco, Mr. Hoover added two proposals to the seven he made three weeks ago.

military alliances," he said. "There should be a definition of aggression."

He also urged adoption of Sen. Arthur Vandenberg's proposal that the conference have freedom of initiative.

Treatments for Syphilis Fatal To Six Patients

"Syphilitic convulsions following meparsen administration," was the verdict of a coroner's jury after an investigation of the deaths of six mental patients during last week end at East Louisiana State hospital, Dr. Clovis Toler, East Feliciana parish coroner announced, and said the deaths "were accidental and we hold no one to blame."

The men died last Friday and Saturday after they and about 74 others received drug injections for the treatment of syphilis. Dr. Glenn Smith, hospital superintendent told departments of institutions officials here.

Dr. Toler said he would have complete records of the coroner's jury "open to any who want to investigate more," and R. L. Pettit, who went yesterday to the hospital.

Dr. Smith said eight patients suffered violent spells after being administered the drug but two of them recovered. The others of the 80 patients who took drugs suffered no ill effects, he explained.

He said he could not understand what happened in these cases but that due to the fact there were so many deaths he had called the coroner.

Mentioning the possibility of bad drugs he said they were standard. He explained that there are "several types of 606" and that two types were administered. The six patients died after they had taken what was considered the mildest of the two types which were given.

Discuss Farm Labor Problems Of Louisiana

Meredith C. Wilson, deputy director of extension farm labor program, Washington, has declared that the farm labor problem of the United States in 1945 is represented by an unfilled gap of 300,000 man-years of labor. Wilson is in Baton Rouge to discuss Louisiana's plans for filling the gap with J. G. Richard, assistant state director of extension, and C. E. Kemmerly, Jr., extension supervisor of emergency farm labor.

Wilson came to Baton Rouge on his way back to Washington after attending a preview showing of the motion picture, "Victory Harvest," which is designed to stimulate recruitment of farm labor. The picture was shown at Amarillo, Tex., and was attended by the 83-year-old mother of Marvin Jones, war food administrator, Wilson said.

In his conference here, Wilson was told by Emergency Farm Labor Supervisor Kemmerly that "delayed plantings in North Louisiana, resulting from a very wet spring and flood waters will cause excessive demands for farm labor." Reports indicate that the rice area is well in advance of a normal year, and that sugar cane is about normal.

"It would seem that the situation in the state as a whole would point to peak seasons of various crops coinciding this year and therefore causing farm labor to be much more acute," said Kemmerly.

"The overall picture of the farm labor problem," said Farm Labor Director Wilson, "means that the effective utilization of the labor on farms and made available to farmers must be stressed as never before. In fact, increasing productive efficiency of the farm labor supply offers the only way of completely closing the gap."

The program to be carried out in Louisiana will include adjusting farm operations and enterprises so that maximum utilization of available labor may be had. It was stated by Kemmerly. Co-operation will be sought from school men and leaders of civic organizations, and by promoting labor swaps, pools and exchanges of heavy farm equipment.

Use of prisoners of war, as far as obtainable, will be one of the means to fill the gap in farm labor, it was stated during the conference.

Food Shortage Probe Asked in New Orleans

New Orleans, April 17 (AP)—Officials of the Association of Commerce announced today that they would ask government officials to conduct an investigation of food shortages in New Orleans, with a view to obtaining "equitable distribution" of foods on a population basis.

The action was announced by William G. Zetzmann, president, and George E. Schneider, general manager, of the association, because of continued shortages of meat, cheese, butter, chickens and other foods.

Zetzmann said it was apparent that food supplies for New Orleans were not meeting civilian requirements and that there was "something puzzling" about the shortage of meat.

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The War department has announced the following temporary promotions of officers, and orders directing newly appointed officers to proceed from their homes for active duty:

Promotions:

Louisiana:

Eleanor O. Prescott, ANC, 1404 Florida street, Baton Rouge, from second lieutenant to first lieutenant.

(S/Sgt. Lee R. Johnson about whom the following story was written lives at Livonia. His wife works in a Baton Rouge store. Sgt. Johnson was wounded in December but is now back in action on the march to Berlin. The author, a native of New Orleans, is now in Harmon General hospital, Longview, Tex.)

By Lt. Brian Bell, Jr.

S/Sgt. Lee R. Johnson of Livonia, is one of the best soldiers who ever hit France. He just seems to be one of those men who do not have fear in their constitutional make-up. "Hitler never will put me out of the fight," Johnson used to say, "the bullet never was made which could get me." And to see him in action, one could really believe that he thought his boast to be true.

Johnson was a member of the first platoon to go into Cherbourg, on a reconnaissance patrol. And it was there that the officers of his company discovered another highly valuable asset of his, that of being able to speak French. Once when they were marching down the road near Cherbourg, a Frenchman came running out to them and started talking very rapidly. The other GIs, not understanding, just shrugged their shoulders and walked on, but not Johnson. He got the information which the Frenchman was trying to give them, and as a result the platoon went over to a neighboring barn and found 20 Germans who were hiding there, making them all prisoners.

But it was not until later on in the Normandy campaign that Johnson really proved what a soldier and potential leader he was. He wore only one stripe on his arm, as a private first class, at the time an action took place which is still talked about by Company G men as they sit in their foxholes. The platoon was cautiously moving along a hedge row in the direction of the enemy, with, as usual, Johnson out in front.

Takes Charge

Suddenly, they came upon a group of Germans, superior in number and with several machine guns, in the process of setting up a defensive position. The enemy did not see them. There was no officer there at the time, and the squad leader was farther back, so Johnson took charge of the situation, and spread the men out in firing positions, cautioning them not to make too much noise and give away their presence. Then he grabbed an automatic rifle, and on his signal, they all opened up at once. The Germans toppled over like duck pins as the GIs threw lead at their most rapid rate, the automatic rifle doing particular damage. An antitank grenade fired by an American blasted a German mortar to pieces. The Jerries, taken by surprise, fired a few bursts from their burp-guns, but so much fire was coming from the GIs that they thought they were being over-run by a superior force, and started running down a road bordering on a field where they were. As soon as Johnson saw the enemy retreating he put a new magazine of rounds in his rifle, scaled two hedge rows and took up the pursuit. Running down the road after the Germans, he continued to fire his piece from the hip, stopping only to reload. He sprayed the road, the ditches, and the hedge rows, and the bullets sizzling in their direction caused the Germans to abandon completely all the equipment they had. He continued in the pursuit until all the enemy were either dead or had disappeared, then he counted the men who had fallen before his fire; there were at least 12, including a captain.

Gets Squad of His Own

Very shortly Johnson had a squad of his own, which soon became known as one of the most aggressive ones in the battalion. It also suffered a proportionately higher percentage of casualties.

When some tanks helped the GIs, and the Germans, met with superior force, were overwhelmed, Johnson was the first man forward in the assault. He sent round after round after the fleeing enemy, took some prisoners, and directed the activities of his squad in the pursuit. He also found time to relieve several Germans of their Luger pistols, a prize souvenir, large numbers of which Johnson had taken from time to time and given to other members of the company.

The Louisiana sergeant's attitude toward his own safety and that of his men was illustrated the time he and an officer took a reconnaissance patrol out. They came to a large open area, where their movements might easily be detected by the enemy and where they might be taken under fire from the elevated positions to the front. Rather than expose the whole patrol to danger, Johnson readily agreed to a plan whereby just he and the officer would go forward, while the rest of the men would remain in firing positions in the rear to cover their movement. The sergeant exchanged his Garand for an automatic rifle, because, he said, "We might need some fire power."

The officer and the noncommissioned officer moved forward quietly, in dashes, taking advantage of every bush for concealment, and returned later with valuable information. By studying the way the grass was beaten down in the paths, they determined in which direction the enemy was moving. They got back without being detected by the enemy, and no one was lost. But his willingness to sacrifice himself illustrated Johnson's habitual attitude.

As it turned out, Johnson was wrong when he said, "There is no shell made for me." There was, but experienced soldiers in G company claim to this day that it was a freak shell, not an ordinary one at all. All the men were assembled in a small neck of woods while the first gray light of dawn lit the sky, waiting for 11 hour to make an attack. Suddenly a mortar shell exploded in their midst. Usually you can hear the pop of the mortar when it takes off, or at least there is a whistle caused by the round in the last few hundred feet of its descent. But on this occasion, no one heard the warning—just the explosion.

An officer, not knowing who had been wounded, passed Johnson and was surprised to see him lying in a hole, his face as white as it could be, contrasting strangely with the black whiskers. This was a man not usually given to fear, and the officer could not understand why his face should not look as normally. Then he saw a red color spreading out over the water in the hole and bloody bandages around the sergeant's leg, and he understood.

But whether fighting or wounded, Johnson was the same. He looked up and gave his lieutenant a reassuring smile, before opening up another first aid packet to put more bandages on his bleeding legs.

Johnson was one of the many

GI heroes who never receive a special medal. Somehow the company he was in was always too busy fighting to think much about medals. But the lads he fought with will always think of him as one of the best, and they will often recall his mad dash down the road in pursuit of the Germans, and they will think of the many occasions when they saw a figure out in front in the attack, and they said to themselves, "There's Johnson."

Marvin G. Osborn, Jr., 22-year-old son of Director M. G. Osborn of the LSU school of journalism, and Mrs. Osborn, recently was promoted to the rank of captain, according to a message received here by the family. Capt. Osborn is a graduate of the school of journalism and a former campus editor of the Reveille, LSU student newspaper. He is now serving with the First army on the Western Front. His promotion was effective on April 1.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant on graduating from the University's ROTC in 1942 and went into service immediately afterward. He went overseas in October, 1943, and shortly after arrival in England was one of 40 young officers chosen to attend a school in London for discussion leaders. He was one of two selected from the class to attend assemblies in many parts of England to participate in discussions and to answer questions on America.

He is education officer and a member of the headquarters staff of his Field artillery battalion, and recently was sent to Paris to attend a special school for officers who will be in charge of classes for soldiers for the period between the cessation of hostilities and the time of their return home.

St. Gerard's to Show Gay Nineties, Minstrel

Members of the St. Gerard Catholic church will present a combination gay nineties and minstrel show Friday at 8 p. m. in the Junior High school auditorium. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the church.

Originally planned for last Friday night, the program was postponed because of President Roosevelt's death.

Shelbyville, Ky. (AP)—Burglars spotted this sign under a wall safe in the office of a bottling company. "This safe contains records only. All money is in the vault." So the culprit cut the 400-pound vault loose and fled with it—and $400.
