ALLIES STORM ON SICILY

Land Forces Meet Fierce Defense; Warships, Planes Pound Island

The shaded area shows where the Allied invasion is reported to be centered.

By VIRGIL PINKLEY, United Press Staff Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 10—The United Nations opened the Battle of Europe today by sending powerful invasion forces swarming onto the beaches of Sicily, and the first eyewitness report said a bombardment by Allied warships had "started a chain of smoke and flames" stretching 10 miles into the island.

A mighty aerial umbrella aided the Allied invasion forces which were made up of American, British and Canadian troops.

Meager and unofficial reports said the invasion, aided by heavy naval support was "proceeding according to plan."

Indications were that the Axis defenders were putting up fierce resistance.

Axis communiques said heavy fighting was in progress on Sicily, especially on the southeastern coast, and that Allied paratroops participated in the invasion, presumably to seize air bases. The German communique reported decisive counter-blows had been struck by the Axis defenders.

The Allied amphibious operations under command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower began after two weeks of mounting aerial onslaught that was continued by hundreds of airplanes up to Friday, when U. S. Liberators from the Middle East smashed Comiso and Taormina, 30 miles south of Messina, causing heavy damage.

Fifteen Axis planes were shot down Friday when Allied aircraft from the Northwest Africa command encountered increased opposition, losing 10 airplanes.

Eisenhower Tells French of Invasion

A furious naval barrage that illuminated sections of the Sicilian coast opened the invasion operations in darkness as the Allied fleet—including battleships—threaded through the enemy mine field and put assault troops ashore in tank-carrying barges. There was no immediate indication that Mussolini's scattered and battered Italian fleet accepted the challenge to fight the invasion.

(London reports describing the greatest Allied offensive of the war suggested that parachute and air-borne troops were used by the Allies to crash through the strong Sicilian defenses, manned by an estimated 300,000 Italians and Germans. Radio Morocco reported the landings were "being consolidated" on the west coast of Sicily, but it was believed many landings had been made around the shores of the island, with the ports of Catania, Palermo and Trapani, as well as Comiso, Catania and Gerbini airdromes, as the main objectives.)

The Allied invasion forces, specially trained in American-built landing barges for many weeks, were reported meeting "strong resistance" in the first phase of fighting on European soil just two months after the last Axis forces were driven from Africa.

Island Battered in Two-Week Air Assault

Gen. Eisenhower, following issuance of a communique announcing the landings, broadcast a message to Occupied France in which he described the invasion of Sicily as "the first stage in the liberation of the European continent" and told the French people to remain calm until they were called upon to act, which he hinted might be soon.

The special communique at 5:10 a. m. from Allied headquarters said:

"Allied forces under command of Gen. Eisenhower began landing operations on Sicily early this morning. The landings were preceded by Allied air attack. Allied naval forces

Sicily to Test Allies' Power

Offers Preview of Europe's Defenses

By [illegible], Cable Editor

We are off on the great adventure, the task of invading the fortress of Europe, and of imposing defeat on Adolf Hitler and his vassals.

Sicily is the outer bastion on the southern side of Hitler's fortress and its conquest is the necessary first step in our approach to Europe from the south, whether we mean to invade Italy next, as seems probable, or go directly into the Rhone valley of France.

The invasion of this great island is the first real test of the capacities of the armies of the United Nations. How well we succeed in our task will reveal not only how well we are prepared for amphibious assault but also our ability to deal with the great defense works that the Axis powers have thrown up against us.

Sicily is an island and operations on it will be subject to some limitations due to the absence of great space for maneuver and the lack of ready communications for reinforcement.

Island Is Big

These are defensive rather than offensive limitations. They assist us in the conquest of Sicily. But their existence means that the problem of occupying Sicily will not be quite the same as the problem of getting on the larger continental space.

Nonetheless, Sicily is an island of considerable size. It occupies a triangular space roughly the equivalent of a triangle running from Cleveland to Buffalo to Pittsburgh and back to Cleveland.

This is a substantial depth for conquest. And while communications with the mainland are not as good as communications would be between two adjacent areas on the mainland, the Axis can reinforce their troops on Sicily with relative ease. Our experience in Tunisia showed that the Axis can bring in troops in face of our virtual command of the air. Troops can be brought in by air and they can be brought in by ship. Sicily's coast line is too long for our naval forces

Soviets Push Nazis Back

Wipe Out Wedge in Belgorod Defense

MOSCOW, July 10—(U.P.)—The Red army, seizing the initiative after halting German panzer spearheads in a gigantic tank battle, has wiped out Nazi wedges in its lines near Belgorod and driven the enemy back to his initial positions, front dispatches said today.

(A German communique broadcast by Berlin claimed "considerable territorial gains" north of Belgorod and reported heavy artillery dueling in the Orel area. Russian tanks knocked out since last Monday totaled 1227 while 119 Soviet planes were destroyed yesterday, the communique said.)

The Soviet counter-attacks were buttressed by reserves rushed to the threatened Belgorod sector as the battle of the southern front entered its sixth day on a note of rising fury.

Burned-out hulks of hundreds of Nazi 60-ton Tiger tanks, wrecked aircraft and thousands of bodies littered the battlefield over which Russian and German armored forces slugged it out in a battle of extermination.

Every attempt of the Germans to exploit their wedges near Belgorod was frustrated by the bitterness of the Soviet defense and the launching of the Russian counter-attacks sent the battle into a new phase.

Maj. Vassily Dubkov, military commentator for the army organ Red Star, said Russian tanks and infantry counter-attacked the Germans in one sector with such force that the Nazis were compelled to retreat in disorder, abondoning sev-

Orders Rollback on Fruits, Vegetables

OPA Cuts Price July 20 on Lettuce, Cabbage

A rollback which will reduce the retail price of lettuce in Cleveland 28 to 33 per cent and cabbage 45 per cent was ordered today by OPA as the first step in cutting prices of nearly all fresh fruits and vegetables.

The order will become effective July 20 and will not involve the payment of subsidies. The rollback will be absorbed by the wholesaler, whose profit margin is held to be sufficient to take up the decrease.

What the rollback will mean to Cleveland consumers is shown by the following comparison of present lettuce prices with those which will prevail under the new schedule:

| | Present Price | New Price (Approx.) |
|---|---|---|
| 1¼-pound head | 19 cents | 15 cents |
| 1 -pound head | 17 cents | 12 cents |
| ¾-pound head | 15 cents | 10 cents |

The price of cabbage, from now until October, will be reduced from 9 cents to approximately 5 cents a pound. Under a sliding scale set up by OPA to reflect seasonal variations, the price of cabbage will drop even more in October and November, but will rise from December through May, reaching its peak in March and April.

Previously, lettuce and cabbage, with five other vegetables, had been under a general ceiling imposed by President Roosevelt in his hold-

Banta Resigns Bank Post, Becomes Jahco Associate

Clare Walker Banta, executive vice president of the Union Bank of Commerce since its organization five years ago, has resigned that post to become an associate at the Jack & Heintz Co., it was learned today.

William S. Jack, head of the aircraft parts firm, said Mr. Banta had been in the Jahco organization more than a month and "has his office next to mine."

Mr. Banta, credited with obtaining many of the large industrial and commercial accounts of Union Commerce (Jack & Heintz's is believed to be the largest deposit), was out of the city today and could not be reached for comment upon reports that his resignation at the bank was preceded by frequent clashes with its board of directors.

It was understood friction arose between the board and Mr. Banta over his opposition to proposals of mergers with one or another of Cleveland's large banking outfits. There was no comment available at Union Bank of Commerce on his leaving.

Mr. Jack said today that Mr. Banta "will do the type of work here he has spent his life doing—projecting and analyzing the future not only of this business but of all business.

"He will be associated here, just as any machinist is an associate, and his recommendations will not necessarily be final. I welcome him as an associate whose experience in financial matters will do much not only for the future of this company but also of the community."

Mr. Banta, in banking more than 30 years, left a vice presidency of National City Bank of New York to come here.

Giraud Party Informed 2 Hours Before Public

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt, in a message to Pope Pius, said today that during the present invasion of Italian soil churches and religious institutions would "be spared the devastations of war" and that the neutral status of Vatican City would be respected.

By MERRIMAN SMITH

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—It's "the beginning of the end."

President Roosevelt thus described the invasion of Sicily in revealing the attack to a select group of White House dinner guests two hours before the official public announcement was made last midnight.

The party was in honor of the French commander, Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, and Mr. Roosevelt promised him that the Sicilian attack will be followed later by other campaigns for the liberation of all of France and "the elimination of Germany."

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said reports of the Allied invasion of Sicily began reaching the President at about 9 o'clock during the dinner.

All but two of the guests were military or naval persons. Gen. Giraud sat on the President's right

Sicily, Bristling With Axis Guns, Presents Tough Problem for Allied Invaders

Stepping-Stone to Europe Is Strong Natural Fortress

By BEN WILLIAMSON

The first round in the battle of Europe will not be an easy one for the Americans, Canadians and Britons.

Sicily, a battleground through all known history, is a natural stronghold—just as it is the natural road to Italy and bigger objectives.

Sicily, ever since Mussolini turned his war-reluctant people against a falling France, has been a great Axis bastion. It has, in the years of the African campaigning, been converted into a huge unsinkable aircraft carrier. It has fine facilities for naval operations . . . deep anchorages, bases, large fuel reservoirs.

The Axis reportedly has made Sicily its strongest fortress of the many fringing the continent along the Mediterranean.

Defenses Are Strong

First reports from the ancient battleground tell of fierce resistance met by the Allied invaders.

What the Axis has learned from its lessons in smaller scale at Pantelleria and Lampedusa—reduced by air power alone—is not, of course, publicly known. But it is certain that fortifications and defense positions vulnerable only to the heaviest frontal assault have been set up.

Of the 300,000 Axis forces believed to be on the big island—its over-all area is about one-fourth that of Ohio—at last reports there were 10 Italian divisions or their equivalent. Two or more German divisions were reported there even before the coldly scientific, round-the-clock air bombardment of the island's vulnerable points served notice a week ago that Sicily would be a first major target in the coming invasion of Europe.

20 Big Airfields

Sicily, tough and mountainous and canalized by deep and narrow valleys, has at least 20 principal Axis airfields. There would be many more dispersal landing and taking-off points. The most important Italian fields are in the south and east portions of the island—where, it is indicated by Rome, Berlin and London, the Allied invasion forces struck first and heaviest.

Obviously, the immediate objective would be seizure of these principal fields—such as Pachino, Pozzallo, Syracuse, Augusta, Catania, Gebrini, Biscari and Gela.

Obviously, too, these would be strongly fortified points, where the Axis would first expect onslaught, since their reduction must be a prime aim of invaders heading northward toward Messina, only two miles from the tip of Italy's toe. There are good coastal roads from that area—and forbidding, sharp-rising hills and mountains from which Sicily's defenders could pour fire.

Messina Is Vital

We may be hearing later of other landing forces on the north and west parts of the triangular island. There lie the important naval base of Trapani and Stagnone and another concentration of airfields around Mar[illegible]. Obviously, the objective, in order to cut communication at the shortest point to the Italian mainland. Messina, target of the fiercest air attacks in the pre-invasion air warfare, is the chief ferry point to the Italian mainland. Its shipping facilities, docks and quays have been bombed repeatedly. A week ago the Allies reported ferry ship service had been abandoned by day. Messina already has taken a terrific going-over. So has Reggio Calabria—two miles across the Messina straits on Italy proper.

This southeastern area offers other strategic objectives of great importance. Catania, about midway between Messina and the southeastern tip, is a city of 250,000 population, site of several large sulphur refineries.

Syracuse Is Nearby

To the south of Catania, a naval station, lie in close range Augusta, with the finest natural harbor of the island, and on a tiny peninsula connected to the Sicilian mainland by a narrow isthmus the large and important harbor of Syracuse.

Assuming Catania as the center of the immediate invasion area, to the north is a stretch of flat and sandy country, backed by mountain terraces.

On the northern coast is Palermo, largest of Sicily's cities with a normal population of 417,000. It has better communications with the interior than any Sicilian port except Catania. It is the business and financial center of western and much of central Sicily.

Palermo's chemical industry produces citric acid and calcium citrate. It has large shipyards and the Caproni Sicula aircraft factory.

The southwestern coast of the island is relatively flat country. The main southern ports are Porto Empedocle, with its good harbor, Sciacca and Licata. These also have sulphur refineries.

Passes Are Tough

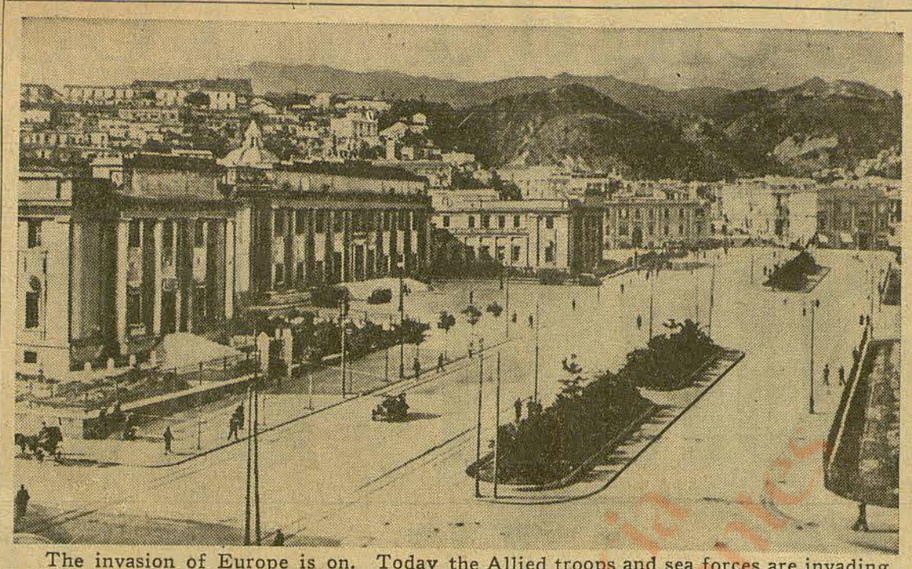
Over all, Sicily contains about 4,000,000 people. Thousands of them are fierce mountain fighters, reared in the traditions of the Mafia. They never have liked Mussolini. They seldom have liked anybody but themselves.

Sicily's total area is nearly 10,000 square miles. Most of the island tops 500 feet above sea level, rising to volcanic Mt. Etna—back from the coast between Messina and Cantania—which reaches to 10,868 feet.

Sicily presents a variety of military problems. The immediate fighting from the Allied beachheads will be ranging through vineyards, flowered hill slopes and orchards, including orange and lemon groves. There are many good roads.

The mountain passes are something else again. But these, too, must be secured early for successful invasion—if we are to take and successfully hold Catania, Augusta and Syracuse as harbors for the heavy equipment required for large-scale reduction of this formidable fortress.



The invasion of Europe is on. Today the Allied troops and sea forces are invading Sicily, probably a prelude to the invasion of the mainland of Italy and the establishment of the second front.

At right is a map of Sicily and Italy, and notice how close together they are. Notice, too, the relation of Corsica and Sardinia to Scicily and the Italian mainland.

Top is Messina and bottom is Syracuse, two cities which undoubtedly are objectives of the Allied invasion.

3-Way Barrage Softens Munda

Bombardment Opens Way for Land Assault

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—American warships pumped shells into Japanese positions on Kiska for several hours yesterday morning in the second bombardment in three days, the Navy announced today. Jap shore batteries returned the fire but caused no damage.

By BRYDON C. TAVES

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, July 10—(U.P.)—American jungle forces deployed east and north of Munda, main Japanese base in the central Solomons, today for an all-out ground assault following a massive naval, plane and artillery bombardment that pulverized its defenses.

U. S. warships, presumably cruisers and destroyers, laid down the initial barrage just before dawn yesterday and more than 100 Avenger and Dauntless bombers, with an escort of Wildcats, took over the offensive at daylight.

The aerial armada, largest ever mustered for a single operation in the South Pacific, dropped more than 70 tons of bombs ranging up to one-ton block-busters on Japanese bivouacs, supply dumps and antiaircraft positions between Munda Point and Lambeti.

Artillery brought up by American forces holding positions only two miles east of Munda, along with other guns mounted on Rendova Island five miles south, added to the devastation with concentrated barrages.

Simultaneously, other Dauntlesses, covered by Wildcats, attacked the subsidiary enemy bases of Bairoko and Enogai Inlet, 10 miles above Munda, on the northern shore of New Georgia Island. American ground troops also hold positions within a few miles of these bases.

Forty-five Japanese Zero planes attempted to raid American positions at Rendova, but were intercepted and dispersed by Allied fighters which shot down four of the raiders. One Allied plane was lost.

At the opposite end of the 700-mile South-Southwest Pacific, Mitchell bombers bombed and strafed enemy positions along Bobdubi Ridge, only four miles southwest of Salamaua, big Japanese base on the northern shore of New Guinea. Fires were started.

F. D. R. Assures Poland Hour of Freedom Nears

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt said last night in a telegram to President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz of Poland that he fully shared the Polish leader's view that increasing Allied victories "are bringing closer the hour of deliverance for the nations of Europe struggling against the brutal invader."

His telegram, in reply to Raczkiewicz's message on American Independence Day, also eulogized the late Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, who was killed in a plane crash near Gibraltar earlier this week.

Allies Invade Sicily, Meet Fierce Defense

escorted the assault forces and bombarded the coast defenses during the assault."

The crossing of the 90-mile "moat" from Tunisia to the rugged island of Sicily, which once had 4,000,000 population, was made in all types of naval craft, including special landing barges brought under their own power from the United States to strike at Italy just three years and one month after Mussolini stabbed France in the back. (There was no mention of French troops taking part in the invasion of Sicily.)

For two weeks huge Allied air fleets based in Northwest Africa and the Middle East had hammered at Sicily with thousands of tons of bombs, seeking to knock out Axis air power, demolish air bases, destroy railroad facilities and ports and isolate the island from the Italian mainland. For the last seven days the air attack had been almost continuous, day and night.

Then the converted freighters, the big battleships, the fast destroyers, the heavily armed cruisers and the new type landing barges—heavily armed and heavily protected—were assembled by the hundreds and put out in darkness from the African coast.

Crouching in the barges and jammed aboard the transports were American troops that had been practicing invasion assaults for weeks and were toughened and ready for the hardest battle of their lives.

There were Canadian troops, too—the rough-and-ready soldiers who had been waiting (presumably until recently in England) for the chance to avenge their comrades who fell at Dieppe and had long been promised the honor of spearheading the invasion of Hitler's European fortress.

The British forces, which chased Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel across Africa and into the sea, were the third part of the Allied team which struck at Sicily in an operation that found land, sea and air forces co-operating magnificently under Gen. Eisenhower's command.

Attack No Surprise to Axis

Crouched in the landing barges, with their heads tucked down against their shoulders turtle-fashion, the Allied troops led by engineers and sappers were off the Sicilian coast in the dark hour before dawn came over the Mediterranean.

The engineers, given the toughest job in such a hazardous operation, carried bangalore torpedoes—a gadget about 15 to 18 feet long and encased in a two or three-inch pipe—used to shove into barbed wire entanglements in order to blast open a path for the assault troops.

Allied forces from Malta, only 60 miles away from Sicily, were presumed to have joined the invasion units somewhere off the island coast.

And then, in the last period of darkness, the big guns of the naval armada opened up.

The guns flashing out in the darkness may have been the first sign that the nervous Axis defense forces received that the battle to knock Italy out of the war had begun. But the enemy had been predicting the assault for days, reporting the massing of Allied troops and barges and trying desperately to guess where the first blow would fall.

Although the steady pounding of Allied airplanes had knocked out the main Sicilian harbors closest to Italy, there were late reports that Nazi and Fascist reserves had been rushed to the island and there was little question that the struggle for the mountainous stronghold would be a costly and probably a long one.

Preliminary reports indicated that the Axis resistance was fierce and that the enemy airplanes were attacking desperately, often diving through their own anti-aircraft fire in their efforts to get at Allied bombers.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, the Nazi air expert who had commanded an air fleet on the Russian front, was reported directing the Axis aerial defenses with the aid of Baron Wolfram Von Richtofen, who also had been on the eastern front.

Meager Reports on Fighting

Reports from the battle front in the early stages were meager, but Allied headquarters said that information would be issued as regularly as possible.

The Axis reaction by radio also was slow. The Rome radio had been warning the Italian people that a desperate defense must be made of the island, repeatedly emphasizing Mussolini's warning that peace at this time meant dishonor and disaster.

(The first Axis word of the invasion came from the German Transocean News Agency in a dispatch datelined "London." It said that according to an official announcement Allied forces had started landing operations in Sicily. The same agency next flashed a Washington announcement of the landing. Berlin radio later repeated the news.)

Radio Vichy told the people of France that the Americans had made "important" troop movements for an imminent invasion of Sicily. The transmission of the Italian news agency Stefani began as usual this morning with the words: "Vincere Vincere—Victory, Victory." But the agency's first two transmissions failed to mention Sicily.

Canadians in Attack

The first great Allied assault against the European fortress was started after a coldly, scientific day and night aerial bombardment that accelerated steadily for two weeks.

The Allied attacks met steadily decreasing Axis aerial opposition but it was uncertain whether the enemy was holding back his man strength despite the Allied efforts to force him to fight in the air.

As the aerial assault reached a crescendo, fighters and fighter-bombers in large numbers joined in the attack to shoot up Axis trucks and railroad equipment in order to hinder or halt the movement of enemy forces when the invasion began.

Meantime, Canadian forces had been moved into the mediterranean theater. They included infantrymen and tank crews which had been training in England.

The climax of the aerial preparation for invasion came eight months and three days after the Americans landed in North Africa and found the Axis main network of airdromes on Sicily littered with rubbish and pitted with bomb craters.

But the enemy had many good air bases left, strung like a chain of beads around the coast through Trapani, Palermo, Mesina, Catania, Syracuse, Licata, and Sciacca. The nearest Allied air bases are on Pantelleria and Malta.

and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, was at the President's left. Secretary of State Cordell Hull sat across the table from Mr. Roosevelt.

Shortly before 10 o'clock, as the dinner was drawing to a close, Mr. Roosevelt made the dramatic announcement of the landings.

"The first had word of the attack against the soft underbelly of Europe," the President told his guests.

Mr. Roosevelt asked those present not to say anything about invasion until midnight because of the arrangements for simultaneous announcements at that time in North Africa, Washington and London.

Tells Guests of Attack

Mr. Roosevelt, after telling of the attack and landing, continued:

"The operations have begun. We won't get definite news until later. But the news will be coming in from now on."

Then he said:

"This is a good illustration of the fact of planning—not the desire for planning, but the fact of planning.

"With the commencing of the expedition in North Africa with complete co-operation with the British and ourselves—that was followed by complete co-operation with the French in North Africa. The result after landing was the Battle of Tunis. That was not all planning. That was co-operation. And from that time on we have been working in complete harmony.

"Beginning of the End"

"There are a great many of objectives, of course, and the major objective is the elimination of Germany. That goes without saying, as a result of the step which is in progress at this moment. We hope it is the beginning of the end.

"Last autumn the prime minister of England called it 'the end of the beginning.' I think we can almost say that this action tonight is the beginning of the end.

"We are going to be ashore in a naval sence — air sense — military. Once there, we have the opportunity of going in different directions, and I want to tell Gen. Giraud that we haven't forgotten that France is one of the directions. One of our prime aims, of course, is the restoration of the people of France and the sovereignty of France.

"Even if a move is not directed at this moment at France itself, Gen. Giraud can rest assured that the ultimate objective—we will do it the best way—is to liberate the people of France, not merely those in the southern part of France but the people in northern France—Paris."

Tug Victim Identified

Identification of a body which floated ashore at Erie, Pa., six weeks ago, as Jerry Girard, 41, utility man on the tug Admiral which sank off Cleveland harbor last Dec. 2, was announced today by Capt. L. M. Jonassen of Allied Oil Co., owner of the tug.

Reds Drive Nazis Back to Initial Line

eral important positions captured earlier.

"Counter-attacks are growing in proportion to fierce Soviet resistance and mounting enemy losses," Dubkow said.

Russian tanks were reported fully engaging enemy forces [illegible] along the battle gradient.

Though now stymied at both ends of a 165-mile sector of the southern front, Nazi legions estimated at nearly a half million men and several thousand tanks hammered ceaselessly at Russian defenses in a desperate effort to close a pincers around a Soviet force estimated at 400,000 men in the Kursk salient.

(A German broadcast claimed that one panzer spearhead had pushed 37 miles north of Belgorod toward Kursk and that another had overrun Soviet defenses behind Belgorod in the direction of Stary Oskol, crossing the northern Donets at one point.)

(British sources believed the fighting around Belgorod would reach the climactic and perhaps the decisive stage within the next 24 hours.)

Draw Nazi Reserves

The army organ Red Star said the Belgorod battle showed no sign of abatement. Many villages changed hands repeatedly in the course of a few hours, but nowhere has the enemy progressed in the past 24 hours, the dispatch said.

Equally fierce battles were raging between Orel and Kursk at the northern end of the front, but here the enemy has been stopped cold for more than four days and at some points the Russians have gained ground in counter-attacks.

The Germans continued to draw from other fronts to maintain and even intensify the pace of their attacks and replace losses during the first five days of at least 40,000 troops, 2036 tanks and 904 planes.

In tanks alone, the Germans were believed to have lost the equivalent of 10 panzer divisions.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting

In one sector of the Orel-Kursk front, the Germans hurled 42,000 men and 200 tanks against Russian lines yesterday, only to be repulsed in fighting that frequently passed to the hand-to-hand stage.

A German infantry battalion broke into Russian defenses on a strategic height on the same area, but a Soviet counter-attack restored the situation.

On the Belgorod front, one Russian tank group was credited with destroying more than 80 tanks, 200 trucks and 2000 officers and men in one day, while in a neighboring sector the Germans lost upwards of 1000 troops and 20 to 30 tanks in a futile attempt to occupy a village.

Coast Guard Meets Spar---First-Sight Love Ends at Altar

When coastguard meets Spar—ah, boy, that's love!

That's the sentiment of the uniting forces" in Cleveland's first all-Coast Guard wedding performed today in the chapel of St. John's Cathedral by Rev. Fr. Kenneth W. Saunders.

The principals were Spar Helen Donaghy of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Coastguardman Lawrence Mayor, Electrician's Mate, of St. Louis, Mo.

It was "love at first sight" when they met June 13 during Bob Hope's show for servicemen at the Stage Door Canteen, the Coast Guard duo said.

"I asked her for a dance, we saw the show and then we had a coke before we started to talk about the Dodgers and the Cardinals," Coastguardman Mayor reported. It was as simple as that.

Spar Donaghy and Mr. Mayor . . . ah, boy, that's love!

Bird's-Eye View of Sicily: Blazing Guns, Swift Barges, Racing Men

Photographer-Pilot Tells of His "Greatest Picture"

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN

U. S. AIRDROME, Tunisia, July 10—(U.P.)—A young American reconnaissance pilot told today how Allied warships dashed close to the shore of Sicily, fired tremendous salvos into the Axis defenses and started "a chain of smoke and flames" stretching 10 miles inland.

"Someone is definitely catching hell," he remarked as he brought back first pictures of fighting on the Sicilian beaches stormed by Allied forces.

The Pilot—Lieut. Robert S. Bleile of Seaford, Del.—flew his Lightning reconnaissance plane over the Sicilian battlefield for a bird's eye view of the first blow at the European fortress.

"I could see our warships shelling the enemy without interruption," he said. "Some of the warships dashed in close to the shore and fired salvos and then swooped out again. Boy! What a battle picture. I never expect to see anything like it again.

Barges Everywhere

"I could see destroyers like cigars weaving about in the cobalt water. I saw bigger ships that looked like battle wagons, with wreaths of smoke rising from their turrets, as if they were letting loose everything they had.

"The landing barges looked like squirming blackfish with white wakes for tails. They seemed to be everywhere. There were waves of them dashing toward Sicily and piling men on to the beaches."

Bleile, wearing a fur coat and goggles, showed me with maps how he flew along the seacoast. He removed his cameras—crammed with what he believed were the best pictures of the war—as he talked.

"Somebody is definitely catching hell—and I give you one guess who it is," he remarked.

Bleile said he encountered no Axis opposition over the Sicilian coast.

Fired All They Had

"I took pictures undisturbed," he said. "Once I saw what looked like two planes far below me but they were busy with the invading forces.

"The antics of our warships fascinated me. They tore into the shore and then swung away. They fired everything they had. It was a damn good show. The invasion barges kept coming in a never-ending stream.

"About 6:30 a. m. (several hours after the invasion began) it was easy to appreciate that a tremendous battle was in progress on the island. For 30 minutes I watched our curtain of fire searing the coast."

"Most Exciting" Show

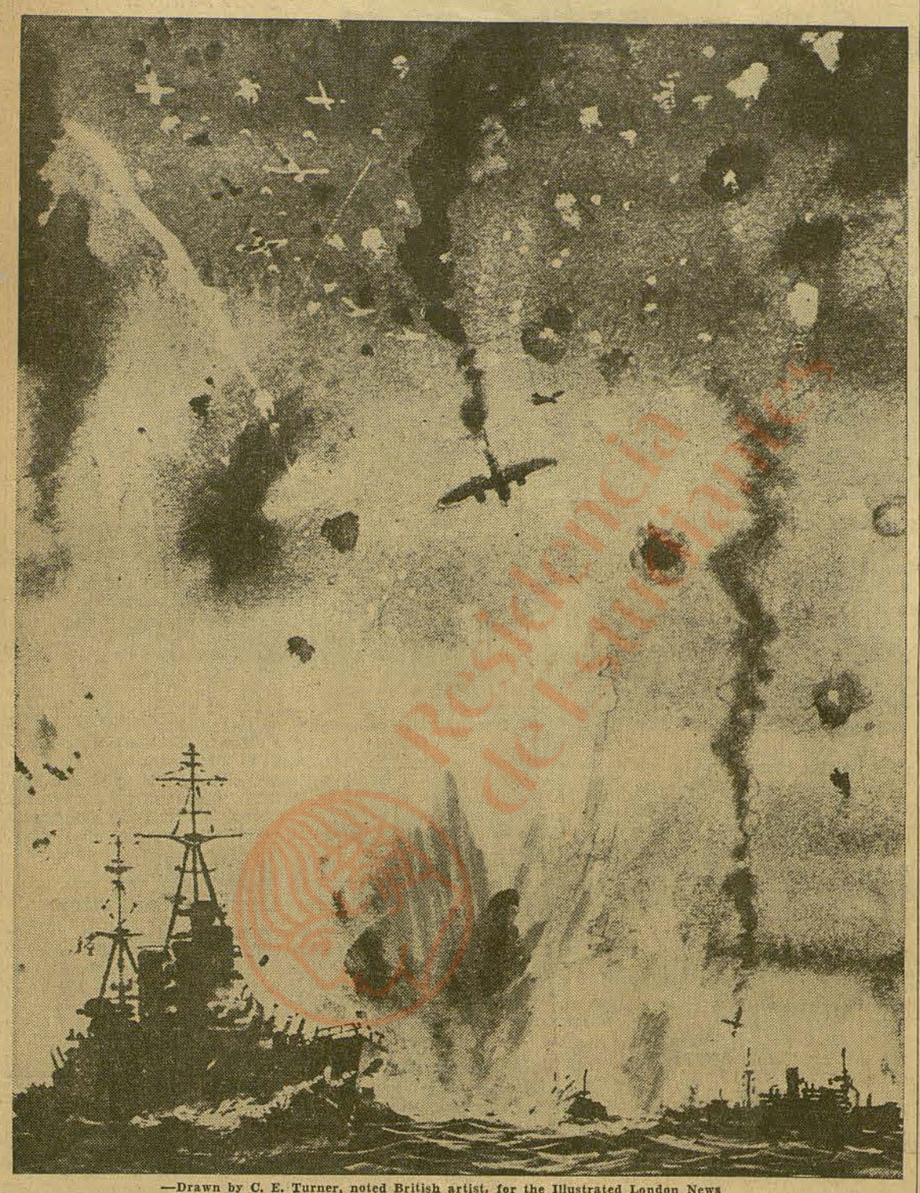
"I suppose this was your most exciting operation," I said to Bleile as he knicked off his fur-lined boots.

He grinned and said: "Well, this was only my second operation."

"Were you disappointed with what you saw?"

"I never hope to see anything more exciting. I flew over the island and the coastline for 35 minutes. Everywhere over the island I saw smoke curling and mingling with the early morning haze as the battle roared."



—Drawn by C. E. Turner, noted British artist, for the Illustrated London News

This artist's conception indicates the fierce opposition Allied invasion vessels must have met off the shores of Sicily.

British Bombers Rip Gelsenkirchen

Ruhr War Plant City Is Blasted; France Hit by Day

By WALTER CRONKITE

LONDON, July 10—(U.P.)—Hundrds of Britain's biggest bombers, striking at Axis Europe from the west while Allied invasion forces from the south swarmed ashore on Sicily, heaped new destruction on Gelsenkirchen in Germany's bomb-pocked Ruhr valley last night, it was announced today.

Upwards of 2000 tons of bombs were believed to have been dropped on Gelsenkirchen and adjacent targets.

Following through in daylight, big formations of other Allied bombers, possibly including Flying Fortresses, roared out across the English channel toward France.

The night attack on Gelsenkirchen, along with subsidiary raids on other targets in the Central Ruhr, was described by the Air Ministry as "very heavy," but only 10 bombers were lost.

A German communique admitted the Gelsenkirchen raid touched off fires and caused some damage, especially at Bochum, which is in the area, but said the destruction was confined to "residential quarters."

It was the 43d attack on the war on Gelsenkirchen, site of one of Germany's largest synthetic gasoline plants as well as iron furnaces and other vital war factories.

Coastal Command aircraft shot down a Junkers 88 dive-bomber off the Norwegian coast during the night, the ministry said.

Watchers on the English southeast coast described the daylight formations as among the largest heard over Dover Strait in recent months. Several large formations of four-engined bombers were escorted by fighters.

Many bombers streaked across the sunlit sky at 25,000 feet, leaving vapor trails. Some headed toward the Boulogne-Dieppe area. Radio Paris went off the air shortly before 8 a. m.

Committee Drafts Plans for a New Postwar City

By ROBERT BORDNER

Planning the "New Cleveland" as "The City in the Sun" to be built after the war on the present community was launched today as 16 members of the New Cleveland Committee met with Mayor Lausche at Hotel Statler.

It was Ernest J. Bohn, director of Metropolitan Housing Authority, who made the plea for planning the new city now, "so we won't get caught at the end of the war with our plans down."

Organization of the committee for postwar planning was suggested by the mayor. It took the following actions:

A COMMITTEE of seven was named to recommend the structure of organization, suggest personnel, and especially a full-time paid executive director.

I. F. FREIBERGER, chairman of the board of Cleveland Trust Co., was elected treasurer.

EDWARD C. BRENNAN, manager of the Cleveland Convention and Visitors Bureau, was elected secretary.

The seven named by Mayor Lausche on organization were: Paul Ryan, chairman; Mr. Bohn, Elmer L. Lindseth, William A. Stinchcomb, Robert F. Black, William F. Donovan, H. C. Erskine.

Mr. Black, president of White Motor Co., urged a young man be picked for the top job, "not another stuffed shirt."

Leyton Carter, director of Cleveland Foundation, urged that the first task be an inventory of the public and private planning now being done here.

Mr. Lindseth, vice president of Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., pointed out the main difficulties that must be overcome in creating the kind of over-all environment that will attract private industry to Cleveland.

John Rohrich, vice president of the Teamsters District Council, declared that the labor-management system set up here for the war emergency should be continued into peace times.

The mayor announced that he expected to be able to bring the Cleveland tax rate down to $3 next year, as an inducement to new industry.

"We are paying off more than $8,000,000 in indebtedness in these two years," he said.

the-line order of last February. The ceiling, however, had been punctured and prices steadily advanced.

The price cut, approved by the new food administrator, Judge Marvin Jones, is his first important act and is taken to indicate his complete sympathy with the Administration's rollback policy.

The rollback will apply ceilings only at wholesale receiving points. For lettuce, a basing point is provided at Salinas, Cal., the center of the lettuce industry. The ceiling at the wholesale markets will be the basing point price plus the freight from Salinas, regardless of the actual origin of the shipment.

For cabbage, a flat cents-per-pound ceiling is provided on sales by wholesalers to retailers. It depends on the cost of freight from the shipping point to the market. OPA said it will rigidly survey shipping point prices to prevent a squeeze on the wholesaler.

Abandons Rollback on Coffee Prices

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—The Administration has abandoned the projected rollback of retail coffee prices and will limit the subsidy-rollback program to butter and meat, it was learned today.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown reportedly gave such assurances to Congress this week, a fact that generally is credited with enabling the Administration finally to defeat congressional attempts to outlaw all subsidy-rollbacks.

Abandonment of the subsidized rollback theory, except for the programs already under way, was disclosed by Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), strong Administration supporter and chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, when he was asked whether the issue would dominate the fall session of Congress.

"They (rollback subsidies) won't be an issue any more," Wagner replied. "There won't be any more such programs."

Wagner's statement was taken as confirmation of reports that Brown reportedly assured Senate conferees on a measure extending to Jan. 1, 1944, the life of Commodity Credit Corp.—to which the Senate had attached an anti-subsidy "rider"—that subsidized rollbacks were to be abandoned.

Sicily Preview of Europe's Defense

to impose complete, unbreachable blockade.

Our invasion of Sicily will be the real test of our ability to breach the defenses the Axis powers have thrown up against us.

Defense in Depth

The Axis has spent considerable effort, in the months since we first invaded Africa, in erecting a system of defense in depth to block our invasion.

We may assume that on the beaches we have attacked we face a great belt of mines, roughly 13,000 land mines to each division of defending forces.

Behind the mines are barbed wire, tank traps and then outlying machine-gun bunkers. With their approaches mined, fortified islands of resistance face us.

Supporting these are gun positions, concealed in the hills. Then, more islands of resistance.

In the most exposed areas, the defense belt is likely to be of considerable depth. Similar defense belts on the Russian front have been 30 miles deep, with an area of support running another 30 to 60 miles. The Axis is believed to have at least 300,000 troops in Sicily.

Use Mainland Bases

Presumably, our air assault has knocked out most of the Axis air bases on the island. But Sicily is so close to the mainland that the Axis will have little difficulty in supporting their attacked forces from Italian bases.

The job of our attacking forces is essentially an engineering task at the outset. Bangalore torpedoes, TNT in long pipes, will be used to explode mines, tear through barbed wire and break up traps. Commando trained infantry, using TNT as well as hand arms, will have to reduce the German-Italian bunkers.

The heavy fire that is expected to tear through the Axis positions will come from the air as well as from the great guns of the Allied fleet, standing off shore. We may expect the same sort of air assault that carried our troops through the final positions of the Axis in Tunisia.

Initial reports indicate that the Axis is putting up considerable resistance. In view of the preparations the Axis has made against us, and in view of the importance of Sicily as an avenue of approach to Italy, this was to be expected.

Professional opinion has been that despite the heavy air assault that has been in progress for weeks, the conquest of Sicily would take about three weeks. We may get through sooner if we can wipe out Axis air support.

The cost of our operations naturally will be heavy. But the indications are that we have been well prepared, that we have more than ample forces on hand for the job, that we have more than ample supplies. Thus the costs should not be excessive.

Are Balkans Next?

After Sicily (or perhaps even before the job is finished on Sicily) we may expect an Allied attack on Sardinia. We should have both Sicily and Sardinia before invading Italy and we should have Corsica before trying to invade France from the south.

There are hints of impending action in other quarters soon. The logical place for such action would be on the approaches to the Balkans, to confront the Axis with a two-pronged invasion from the Mediterranean.

But the preliminary work is still to be done. We are still some time away from actual invasion of the continent. Taking the time between the conquest of Tunisia and today's invasion of Sicily as a guide, we may guess that the actual attempt to get on the continent may be two months away.

In Sicily we are facing our first great test against the Axis defense works. We expect to succeed. And in succeeding, we shall get the "know how" for the main job of attacking Hitler's fortress of Europe.

Moreover, our success in Sicily will strike a heavy blow against Axis morale. The effect upon the satellite nations should be tremendous. The inspiration to the peoples of the occupied nations should be tremendous.

If we do as well as we hope to do on Sicily, we shall be able to approach the continent with the psychological factors all in our favor.

Champs of Africa Pitch First Game of Europe "Series"

The Eisenhower-Montgomery team, which won the pennant in Africa, is arrayed in this crucial first game of the European series against a team of three—and possibly four—of the ablest Axis generals.

But the Axis has reason to fear the Eisenhower-led outfit. It has the momentum of great success behind it. It has the lustre of unity in its ranks of Americans, Britons and Canadians. It has the advantage of continuing offensive.

Gen. Dwight D. (Ike) Eisenhower, in supreme command, coupled with the brilliant Gen. Bernard Law Montgomery of the famed British Eighth Army have proven themselves the masters of the Axis not alone in battle but—most important in extending that battle to the European mainland—in the marshaling of men and supplies over great distances.

Lesson on Arms Organization

Gen. Eisenhower — little-known lieutenant colonel when he arrived in England to set up a hasty headquarters 17 months ago—gave the Germans and Italians a lesson in big-scale organization with this war's greatest movement of troops and ships and supplies into North Africa.

Gen. Montgomery—the tamer of Marshal Erwin Rommel—gave that now deflated desert fox an illustration not alone of British tenacity and fighting quality, but also of the ability of the Allies to carry war over great distances. Montgomery, as much as Eisenhower, is the master of supply organization, besides being a brilliant tactician.

How many invasions the Allies will undertake in southern Europe is a question for tomorrow and other tomorrows. But on one of those tomorrows will move the British Eighth and Montgomery—of which almost nothing has been heard since the swamping of the Axis in Tunisia.

Then There's Fiery Patton!

Also not heard from since the last days of the Tunisia campaign is Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., America's contribution to tank warfare and the tradition of hard-hitting warriors. "Old Blood and Guts Georgie"—still carrying the premonition that he'll be killed in battle—will be heard from, explosively and profanely, before any large-scale invasion move gets well along.

The Allied team's best hitter since Tunisia has been the incredible Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle. His air power alone reduced Pantelleria and Lampedusa. The next few days will tell how far along he had reduced Sicily for the telling punch. And then it will be Italy's misfortune to get better acquainted with the bomber of Tokyo.

All invasions must, of course, depend on control of the sea, which brings back into the foreground Britain's Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham. The Mare Nostrum about which Mussolini once ranted now is Cunningham's Pond—the Italian fleet is locked in its harbors, and the back gate opened right into Sicily.

Here is the Axis "Team"

The Axis team centers on three leaders. A large-scale organizer, an intrepid foe wherever met—over France, over Russia, over Britain, now over southern Europe, is Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, the field ruler of Hermann Goering's Luftwaffe. Kesselring, in Italy since the Tunisian campaign, reportedly has shifted his personal direction to the Balkans.

Immediately under Kesselring is Maj. Gen. Wolfram Von Richtofen, chief of the Luftwaffe's fighter commands. Since the Axis position is defensive, his fighter planes must carry the burden of most of the Axis air activities. Richtofen is a cousin of the great German air ace of the last war. He has been wherever the air action has been hottest—over Britain, over Russia, now over Italy. He has been beaten, or at best cut down to reasonable size, wherever the Allies have had sufficient planes. Malta, from which the Allies now send swarms of planes over Sicily, once was Von Richthofen's prize target. It now is a thorn in his side.

Little known outside Italy is the general reportedly directing the ground defenses of Sicily. He is Gen. Alfredo Guzzoni. If any Italian general still may be rated as able in comparison with the do-things-in-a-big-way Allied team members, Guzzoni may possibly qualify. He is the office strategist rather than the field leader. His successes were in Eritrea and Ethiopia (he wasn't around when the British took them back) and in Albania.

Children in West Side Bible School Play in "Rhythm Band"

By FRANK STEWART, Church Editor

WELL, well, here we have the "rhythm band"! Betcha you haven't seen many musical organizations just like it in Cleveland.

It's one of the unusual features in the church vacation Bible school operated by six West Side churches in the People's Methodist Church, W. 65th street and Bridge avenue.

The players, as you can see in the picture above, are members of the kindergarten department. The leader of the "rhythm band" is Miss Violet Reavey who is on the corps of the recreational teachers.

The six participating churches, with their pastors, included: Bethany Presbyterian, the Rev. Robert J. Beyer; Grace Congregational, the Rev. Edgar M. Shaw; Peoples Methodist, the Rev. E. B. McBroom; Ebenezer Evangelical, the Rev. O. R. Swisher; Calvary Reformed, the Rev. Oliver G. Droppers and St. Mary's Rumanian Orthodox, Rev. Fr. John Trutza.

The area in which the school is located is thickly populated and hundreds of war workers live in the district. The church school has solved a problem for many a mother this year.

For with its enrollment of 125 children the boys and girls have been kept off the streets and free from traffic dangers, the director, Miss Ruth Lancaster, said.

Kindergarten, primary, juniors and junior high groups were conducted. Instruction was given in Bible stories, handcraft and organized recreation.

There was a "junior church," too. This reporter attended part of the morning devotions conducted by Rev. McBroom. Some of the neighborhood pastors were in the "congregation."

Rev. McBroom reported it was the first year the six West Side churches had united in a vacation school project. It is part of a general co-operative movement among churches of the neighborhood.

Some of the teachers were from the city's public schools. Miss Blanche Smithers is a teacher in Watterson School and other leaders we met were Miss Catherine Wolfe and Mrs. Rolland McGilbary.

The term lasted three weeks with sessions from 9 to 12. The final day of "school" yesterday was a picnic.

The occasion will also mark the 34th anniversary of the pastor, the Rev. Alfred M. Wagner, who has been the minister at Hope Church since July 11, 1909.

Guild Seeks New Members

Campaign to obtain 1000 members is under way by the Nazareth Guild, which aids in support of Nazareth House, a refuge for women, located at 4514 Franklin boulevard.

The house was opened in March, 1939, by Rev. Fr. W. G. Lauer, S. J., with the assistance of the present director, Miss Leonette Deere. The house contains 27 rooms, Miss Deere said, and at present is furnishing a home to Catholic out-of-town girls who come to Cleveland for employment in war plants.

The guild meets in St. Mary's Hall, W. 30th street and Carroll avenue. President is Mrs. John Quinn and the secretary, Mrs. Joseph Weigler.

The program will be presented under direction of Walter Blodgett, organist and choirmaster. Soloists will be Mrs. Gretchen Garnett and Miss Goldie Hoffman.

Dr. E. M. Baker, the minister, will read lessons and prayers.

Members of Federation Meet in September

Revamping of the Cleveland Church Federation's program to meet wartime problems will be discussed at a one-day conference Sept. 27, Dr. D. R. Sharpe, president, announced today.

He said race relations, religious activities in trailer camp areas, chaplaincy in institutions not adequately served by Protestant chaplains and closer team work between Protestant churches and welfare agencies are some projects to be considered.

Seven simultaneous department meetings will open the conference, Dr. Sharpe said. They will be in charge of:

Dr. John W. Flynn, religious work; the Rev. W. S. Hockman, religious education; the Rev. B. B. Comer Lile, social action; Mrs. C. C. Dash, women's council; Dr. William H. Leach, inter-church relations; Frank P. Celeste, business and finance, and Dr. Howard N. Wells, social welfare.

Palace Show Gives Many Hearty Laughs

Audience Enjoys Laurel-Hardy Film, Ozzie Nelson on Stage

By OMAR RANNEY

After seeing the new show at the Palace, we're convinced of one thing. What America enjoys most these days is a hearty laugh.

Lacking much else in the way of screen comedy, what with a continuous bombardment of war pictures, movie audiences will take a couple of old-timers like Laurel and Hardy and literally roar at the same whacky, corny gags this veteran comedy team has been playing over and over for years.

Their latest picture, "Jitterbugs," which is now featured at the Palace, could be criticized from every angle except one, and in this it would have to be admitted that, in spite of all the movie's shortcomings, the audience liked it. Folks all around us practically screamed their delight and we wouldn't want you to think we ourselves sat exactly frozen-faced all the time. No, the picture had its points, and everyone enjoyed a laugh.

Ozzie Does Well at Clowning

In fact, laughs seem to be the main order of things in this new Palace show, for comedy is uppermost in the stage bill, too. Ozzie Nelson, the band leader who does pretty well at clowning, heads an entertaining one-hour vaudeville performance.

Right here we want to say that our remarks last week about name-band maestros making poor masters-of-ceremony do not apply to Ozzie. He can do a lot more on the stage than handle a baton. If the occasion arises—as it does in this show—he can even work in with the acrobats. And, of course, as everyone knows who listens to the radio, he does all right in those vocal duets with Harriet Hilliard, his wife.

Miss Hilliard comes along at the end of the bill to sing one of the not-quite-so-recent favorites, "I Never Knew," and she and Ozzie join voices in "Why Don't You Fall in Love With Me?" Their singing is one of the things that make this a good stage show, but, we repeat, the comedy is what is most outstanding.

Palace Has Dancing Comics

The bill has two teams of dancing comics—Harris and Shore and Paul La Varre and Brothers. Both stop the show with their antics.

The La Varres are the inebriated gobs—one hefty and the other half-pint—who throw each other around, eventually getting all tangled up with the athletic Mr. Nelson. In a quite different routine, Harris and Shore are a man-and-wife team whose comedy is nothing short of hilarious. Rounding out the bill, and adding just the right amount of variety, are a sepia quartet called Sons of the South, a pretty tap dancer, Jean Blanche, and some smooth swing numbers and cutting up from the boys in the band.

As for the movie, "Jitterbugs," it is hardly necessary to tell what it is about, for the comedy is the same old stuff. But, if you must know, it's this way: Laurel and Hardy, comprising a two-man jitterbug band, meet up with a confidence man, who meets a girl, whose mother has been trimmed by some sharpers. Result: Laurel and Hardy, confidence man and girl set out to out-sharp the sharpers. Terrific corn!

FEATURED in the new downtown movies are Patricia Morison in "Hitler's Madman," at the Stillman, and Stan Laurel (of Laurel & Hardy) in "Jitterbugs," at the Palace. All the other first-run movie houses downtown have hold-over attractions.

Bus Lines Probe Traffic Violations on Jahco Outing

"Amazed" Jack & Heintz Busses Beat Schedules to Sandusky by Hour

By RAY DE CRANE

Expressing amazement that their Jack & Heintz Co. special outing busses beat the schedule from Cleveland to Sandusky by an hour, officials of Greyhound and Lake Shore Coach Line today started an investigation into the many traffic violations committed by their 16 drivers.

I followed the caravan of busses loaded with Jahco "associates" bound for a two-week vacation at Cedar Point and had to travel at break-neck speeds to keep up with them yesterday.

Officials of Jack & Heintz today said that the whirlwind pace set by the drivers was the drivers' own idea, and there was no reason for the rush. Bus company executives admitted this was true, and promised disciplinary action against the drivers. Some of them may even lose their jobs, it was said.

"We had no control over the drivers," a Jahco official said. "They were the employees of the bus companies. We had told our people that the ride would take from 2½ to 3 hours.

"We're not a gang of wildriders out here. The value of our people's lives is important to us, and we want them protected."

Carroll Woods, director of the bus section of ODT here, said the speed traveled by the busses was in violation of ODT regulations, and he had asked officials of the lines to investigate and report their findings to him.

Exactly 97 minutes after the first bus left the Mall it pulled up at the ferry dock at Sandusky, a distance of 60 miles, for an average speed of 36.42 miles an hour.

In order to set this record the busses I trailed traveled between 50 to 60 miles an hour the greater part of the way.

Superintendent Surprised

"You mean two hours-and-a-half," August Hoffman, superintendent of Lake Shore Coach Lines, said with surprise when told the first bus made the trip in slightly more than an hour-and-a-half.

"Why they were supposed to leave the Mall at 9:30 and reach Sandusky by noon."

Actually the first bus departed at 9:15 a. m. and arrived at the ferry landing at 10:52 a. m.

Mr. Hoffman added that I was "misinformed" when I was told at the Mall by one of the drivers that "you can't get on this bus; all the seats are taken."

Actually, many of the seats were empty, but Jack & Heintz Co. ticket holders with golf clubs and fishing rods in hand were awaiting outside the bus with the tickets they had just been handed by a plant official. I had a ticket I bought at the Lake Shore Line office.

Used Chartered Signs

Government regulations forbid the use of chartered bus service these days and the Office of Defense Transportation permitted Jahco associates to travel by bus to their vacationland only on condition that they travel as ordinary passengers.

The four Greyhound busses marked "chartered" were done so by authority of ODT, Lloyd Higgs, assistant traffic manager of Greyhound, explained.

"I think it was the division of child health welfare or some such organization which permitted us to do this since those four busses carried only children and four adult chaperons," he explained.

Mr. Higgs was chagrined when informed that one of his "children's specials" raced at a 50-mile-an-hour clip through a 25-mile zone in Lorain where there was a children's playground.

New Drivers Blamed

In general, all 16 busses in the caravan broke just about every traffic regulation in the books. As for the 35-mile victory speed limit—it was smashed beyond recognition.

Both Mr. Hoffman and E. W. Flanigan, regional manager for Greyhound, said they were "grateful" for the information the writer passed on to them.

Mr. Hoffman was inclined to think that the "new drivers who have just been hired" were responsible for the violations.

Cameraman Killed

CAIRO, July 10—Fred Bayliss, Paramount News cameraman, was killed Thursday in the crash of a transport plane in the western desert, it was reported today. He was a British subject.

Fall Fatal to Clevelander

ASHTABULA, July 10—Frank Wilson, 60, of Cleveland, a steel worker, died of injuries received July 1 in a 25-foot fall from scaffolding at the National Carbide Co. building project here.

Sell "Problem" Shoes July 19-31 Without Coupons

Shoe dealers will be permitted to sell broken sizes, odds-and-ends and other "problem" types without getting ration coupons from customers during the two-week period July 19 through 31, OPA announced today.

Sales will be limited to fixed percentages of dealers' stocks and must be at mark-down prices specified by OPA. Purpose of the amendment, OPA explained, is to enable retailers to dispose of odd merchandise which they normally accumulate.

Percentages of their stock which the dealers will be permitted to sell ration-free are:

Men's dress and work shoes, boys' shoes, 1 per cent; women's shoes, 4 per cent; misses', childrens' and infants' shoes, 2 per cent, all other rationed footwear, 2 per cent.

The sale price may not be more than a 10 per cent markup from the price paid by the dealer.

Douglas Jumps From Private to Captain

HOUSTON, Tex., July 10—(U.P.)—Screen Actor Melvyn Douglas, who was inducted Dec. 6, 1942, has been promoted from private first class to captain in what Army authorities said might be a record for rapid advancement.

Douglas, who along with Dancer Mayris Chaney resigned from the arts council of the Office of Civilian Defense amid a storm of criticism of "frills and furbelows," was promoted by direct order from the War Department.

The movie hero whose real name is Joseph Kuesselburg, was sworn in Wednesday by Col. Leroy E. Nelson, commanding officer of the anti-aircraft replacement training center near Houston. His first assignment as an officer will be assisting in a radio promotion of war bonds in the headqurters of the Eighth Service Command at Dallas.

Neighbors Hit Paper Burning

Neighbors in the vicinity of the United Autographic Register Co. printing plant at 13300 Coit road were up in arms today over the daily burning of vast quantities of printing paper . . . tons of it, they said, in government ration books.

"This is a fire hazard and a nuisance," said Louis Grossman, 13401 Rugby road, a spokesman for the neighbors. "There is no reason why they should waste this paper. But they told me the Government is making them do it."

Irving Green, manager of the plant, agreed that ration book material was being burned, but added it was all scrap resulting from normal printing operations.

"We have to burn this scrap by government order," said Mr. Green. "We've had some complaints. We're taking steps to destroy this paper with as little smoke and dust as possible."

Federation Votes Fund to Fight Delinquency

A $25,000 program to prevent juvenile delinquency was assured by appropriation of that amount yesterday by the Cleveland Welfare Federation's board of trustees.

The trustees also appropriated $2000 to renovate and remodel local day care centers and $3500 for use of the Emergency Child Care Committee, with $500 of the latter amount designated as a scholarship fund in connection with Lanham Act requirements.

The trustees elected their president, Harry Affelder, to the Community Fund Council and approved continuation for six months of the Workers' Service Bureau, 1000 Walnut avenue, which is jointly sponsored by the federation and the C. I. O.

No Serious Work Stoppages Reported

Not a single serious work stoppage has occurred in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia during the past three weeks, Lewis M. Gill, regional War Labor Board chairman, declared last night during a radio talk over WHK.

Pointing to the renewal of the no-strike pledge by C. I. O. and A. F. L. leaders, Mr. Gill asserted that there was also a "strong wartime obligation on management to cooperate fully in prompt disposition o flegitimate grievances."

Discussing policies of his regional office, which covers the three states, Mr. Gill said that wages are "holding the line."

Sea Scout Unit Wins Certificate

The first Sea Scout unit in Greater Cleveland to be recognized as a member of the National Flagship Fleet, the S. S. Saratoga, will receive its certificate tomorrow night at the Lakeside Yacht Club.

Under Skipper Felix Danton and Mate Method Sulak, the ship achieved more than the 2700 points required on a basis of leadership, civic activities, general program and a ship inspection.

Located at the St. Clair Recreation Center, it is one of 41 units in the country to receive this honor. Scout Executive George E. Green and National Council Member E. E. Noble will present the certificates to Skipper Danton.

Restore Water Service After Steubenville Flood

Press State Service

STEUBENVILLE, July 10—Repairs were completed last night on twin water mains broken in Wednesday night's flash flood, and all service has been restored, after a 40-hour water famine. The line, crushed by the record storm, was repaired by emergency crews of city and industrial workers.

Meanwhile, estimates of damage caused by the flood placed the number of homes destroyed at 16, while over 100 were partially wrecked. Two hundred families lost their belongings, and 30 autos were destroyed. Repairs to county roads will cost $145,000, according to an estimate of County Engineer Harry Sharp.

Ration Board No. 6 Moving to Railway Bldg.

Ration Board No. 6, in the Crown Building, W. Third street and Lakeside avenue, will move about Aug. 1 to the second floor of the Cleveland Railway Building, on E. Ninth street, next to The Press.

Purpose of the move, Judge Joseph A. Artl, chairman, said, is to provide more room for the vastly expanded activities of the board and a location more convenient to the downtown businesses which it serves. Needed also is greater protection for board records and rationing coupons.

The new headquarters will give the board 6000 square feet of floor space.

Jaycee Secretary 17

SICILY INVADED

WE are invading Sicily. Reports of battle progress trickle in meagerly, but we can believe reports that resistance is fierce. Our enemies do not dare to abandon so important a bastion of the continent without a desperate struggle.

From what we know about our African operations, we can assume that the invasion of Sicily was carefully planned, that it will be adequately supplied, and that it will succeed. Eisenhower has proved that he prepares thoroughly and well.

Neither we nor our enemies can know now whether, when Sicily is occupied, we shall next invade Italy proper, or attack Sardinia and Corsica, or where the final decisive invasion of the continent will be attempted. For any plan, the clearing of the Mediterranean is essential, and for that purpose the capture of Sicily is prerequisite.

Sicily is not yet the continent, though it is divided from the continent only by a strait some three miles wide. Nevertheless it is a big mass of land, rough and mountainous, and its capture presents most of the problems to be met in establishing ourselves on the continent. The difficulties will furnish a measure of still more arduous tasks to come.

GET THE HOME FRONT IN STEP

IF you are a quail hunter you will have learned that the way to get results is to pick out a quail, not to blaze away at the whole covey.

That technique goes for what's been happening on the home front in this war. Domestically we are firing at the flock, while our armed forces are concentrating.

To switch the simile, we have been out of focus. The battle on the Jones-Wallace sector was engaging more of our interest than the attack on Cologne. We were getting more concerned about 1944 than about 1943. Not that domestic controversies are unimportant or should be ignored—but that we should adjust our vision to first things first; that we should get our proportions on straight and realize that winning the war transcends the sum total of Joneses and Wallaces, subsidies, rollbacks, Little Steel formulas, A-cards, B-cards, low or high ration points, and all that host of home questions which seem so vital but which, added up, are nothing as compared with military victory which is now possible much sooner if we can keep things rolling in our favor.

Congress has gone back to the grassroots. We believe its inspection of Main street and the countryside will soon reflect the public's resentment of the paradox. For, from Main street and the countryside have gone millions of our youth to risk their necks while we at home are only risking our pork chops.

So, in sizing up our part in the great and tragic drama, let's keep our eye on problem No. 1—the winning of the war.

Let's ask ourselves—is what I do or what I say adding to, or detracting from, that over-all objective?

Let's bring our performance at home up to the standard of our armed forces abroad.

GUNNING OBSTRUCTS

COUNCIL President Thomas J. Gunning of Ward 33, formerly West Park, has an interesting record when it comes to obstructing most types of war housing. Since his ward is closest to the Fisher Bomber Plant No. 2 and Cleveland Airport, his actions bear directly on Cleveland's part in the war effort.

In his zeal to protect his constituents' property from possible ill effects of apartments and low-cost war housing, Mr. Gunning seems to have taken the attitude that nothing is now good enough for Ward 33. This applies to vacant fields as well as lots along Riverside drive, which have been zoned for stores and apartments since 1929.

When a builder shows a desire to use one of the Ward 33 fields or Riverside drive lots, Mr. Gunning rushes in with a zoning law amendment to rezone this particular spot for single or double homes.

When a trailer camp was proposed for a Brookpark road field to provide space for war workers who brought their own homes to overcrowded Cleveland, Mr. Gunning introduced an ordinance which would make it illegal for a trailer to remain at a camp for more than two weeks. This ordinance, if passed, will ruin the use of the orderly trailer camp at Euclid Beach, will hurt postwar vacation business in Cleveland and will, of course, effectually prevent war workers thrifty enough to own their own trailer homes from living near war plants in Cleveland.

Mr. Gunnning led opposition to location of 500 publicly financed home units on Riverside drive at Ponciana avenue. In this case we congratulate him on withdrawing his original demand that this war housing project be abandoned after it had been started. A compromise with federal and local officials shifted the project homes slightly to the south, away from higher-cost homes on Ponciana avenue.

Fighting construction of two "garden-type," privately financed apartments at 3215 to 3235 Riverside drive, Mr. Gunning pushed through a "spot" rezoning of this block, limiting its use to single houses. In this, he was too late to stop one of the buildings, because a permit had already been issued. A technicality regarding its permit has stopped construction of the second.

Now Mr. Gunning is speeding another spot rezoning through Council, to block an apartment in the strip along Riverside drive between Milburn and Fernway. This strip of Riverside drive, like the other, had been zoned for apartments since 1929.

We should like to hear, from Mr. Gunning, a constructive suggestion as to sections of Ward 33 which may be used for war housing without his objection.

This war must be won, somehow, and one of the essentials is much more housing for war workers at our bomber plant.

STRENGTHENING OUR LIFELINE

THE new Gen. Douglas MacArthur lock at the Soo, which will be opened tomorrow, is a wartime improvement to the greatest ship highway in the world. Its peacetime advantages are easily recognized, also.

Clevelanders are apt to overlook the fact that the commerce passing through the Soo locks in ordinary times is far in excess of that borne by the Suez Canal, which has been fully reopened as a result of our African victory.

Through the Soo locks pass most of the iron ore destined for the blast furnaces of industrial America, grain from the northwest and coal for that territory.

The first rude lock with timber floors and sills was built in 1797-98 by the Northeast Company, to eliminate the costly portaging of the increasing cargoes of furs and merchandise at the rapids in the St. Mary's River, which connects Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

The new lock, several hundred feet shorter than its companion Sabin and Davis locks, which dwarf those of the Panama Canal, will speed up the movement of vessels and cut the cost of moving freight.

It was not until months after a railroad freight wreck at the Soo had damaged a lock and demonstrated the need of additional lock facilities that Congress voted construction funds to safeguard the nation's lifeline.

The completion of the new lock removes a cause for worry. Long ago, of course, the necessary steps were taken to protect the locks and canals from sabotage or other enemy attack.

It is gratifying to note that the work was completed far ahead of schedule by the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., in spite of the bitterest winter ever experienced at Sault Ste. Marie. This achievement will be appropriately recognized by the presentation of the Army and Navy E.

ESSENTIAL? YES, SIR!

THE War Production Board may be hard as steel in its policy of limiting or denying raw materials for civilian goods. And if there is grousing as a consequence, the WPB can take it in stride in the interest of maintaining the supply of stuff for the Army and Navy.

But when the all-powerful board put its collective wits to work and decided that, war demands or no, this country's diaper mills must keep humming it proved its wisdom when the blue chips were down. There is no debate on a fundamental like this, just as there is no "ersatz" for this indispensable garment of the nursery. And if production is not up to demand, as angry complaints to the WPB by our own Congressman Frances P. Bolton and others indicate, the board will be wise to refer the problem to the WMC and shift skilled labor to the textile mills.

The old question of essentials in wartime used to be about guns vs. butter. Now, to moderize it, can we have the guns and diapers, too? There is only one answer—we must!

LET'S TRY TO ENFORCE IT

EVERYBODY has been concerned about the problem of juvenile delinquency.

Some weeks ago, Safety Director Celebrezze recommended a new curfew ordinance to combat it. The ordinance was adopted and became effective 13 days ago.

Thursday, The Press pointed out that nobody was attempting to enforce it. Director Celebrezze and Police Chief Matowitz were both ignorant of the fact that it was in effect.

Yesterday, two Press reporters told about seeing 250 unaccompanied children under 16 on the streets between 11:30 p. m. and 1:30 a. m. They did not see any policemen telling the children to go home. Director Celebrezze, however, said that during the night the police had warned 29 children and sent them home.

We are not too sure that a curfew law is enforceable. There was an old, obsolete unenforced ordinance on the books when the new one was passed. But maybe it is enforceable. The only way to find out, as we see it, is to try to enforce it. Director Celebrezze, as the sponsor of the ordinance, should insist on a serious effort.

The problem of juvenile delinquency is so grave that every promising method of dealing with it ought to be applied.

SWING SHIFT BASEBALL

ANOTHER convention in the American way of sporting life has been uprooted and left gasping on the dew-laden grass of the morning. Baseball, the onetime 3 o'clock game, was played before noon at League Park one day this week before close to 4000 spectators who thoroughly enjoyed the city's first swing shift contest involving American League teams.

The crowd was almost double that expected. It was a crowd of men and women in working clothes for the most part. It was a crowd that gushed legitimate enthusiasm because the Indians beat the Washington Senators. It was a crowd that appreciated the Tribe management's experiment in providing morning sport for those who work the graveyard and swing shifts.

Baseball required 40 years to break away from afternoon habit. Night baseball was tried. It has been successful. In Cleveland morning baseball has been successful in its single trial. There will be more morning baseball. There may even be around-the-clock baseball some day.

If the fans want it, they'll get it.

CLAPPER IN AFRICA

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

ADVANCED BASE IN NORTH AFRICA —(By Wireless): A new record in this theater was set a few days ago when one Flying Fortress brought down 13 Nazi planes. One gunner alone shot down seven.

Such feats continued to increase the prestige of the Fortress and cause its early champions to feel vindicated against the criticisms which were heard earlier in the war. On a recent raid a Fortress which fell behind because of damage to one of its engines was pounced on by 15 German fighters. The Fortress fought off the whole 15, knocked down five, and escaped.

The steady advance in air superiority by the Allies probably is the result not only of the larger Allied production but also of a fundamental mistake in the German conception of air war. While the Americans concentrated on the thoroughly armed Fortress which has telling offensive power the Germans were putting their best efforts into fighters instead of bombers. The fighter is a defensive weapon. The bomber is what carries the war to the enemy. At the same time, as the Americans have demonstrated, it can become a powerful means of destroying an enemy fighter force.

AGAINST helpless people and helpless communities such as Warsaw and Rotterdam the Germans were able to bomb the cities into a shambles and drive the people out in panic. But Allied airmen consider the German bombing of London was stupid. The target was too large and in spite of severe damage in spots there just was too much of London to destroy it from the air.

Neither did the Germans induce terror and panic but rather the reverse for the population of London steadily improved its methods of fire fighting and otherwise protecting the city. American airmen who are the developers of precision bombing believe that the Germans might have come close to knocking out England if they ignored London and concentrated on the aircraft factories making Spitfires. As it was, the British were able to build up fighter forces that made it too costly for the Germans to persist in mass bombing.

ALL of this is considered by airmen whom I talked with in England and here to carry a lesson for our side, namely, that we must destroy the German fighter force because it constitutes the first real hurdle to victory. Tunisia went fast when the Germans lost control of the air. The daily losses of German fighters now probably will have the greatest bearing on the future course of the war.

In raids over France and Germany the Fortress is becoming as important as a destroyer of German fighters as for bombing and this use of Fortresses may well be exploited to hasten the end of the German air force.

Germany placed great faith in air warfare and the fact that she is losing is not because the air does not have value but because the Germans, in spite of the pioneering, did not understand the use of it in the sense that the Americans and British do. Our use of bombers plus the overwhelming advantage in production on our side means most certainly that the day is to come when Germany is out of the air.

REPORTS on broken-down laundry service, coming in from all over the country, are perhaps just the beginning of similar wails to be expected from other service trades—beauty and barber shops, repair trades of all kinds, tailors, employers of hotel and house servants, messenger services and the like. The squeeze on all such businesses is bound to get tighter and tighter and the pressure comes from a combination of natural circumstances and government war regulations almost impossible to beat.

To begin with, the rates of pay in all the service trades have always been lower than in manufacturing. Not being in interstate commerce, the service trades haven't enjoyed the benefits of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Now, with the manufacturing industries grabbing every wage earner they can find and paying high prices, they are attracting labor away from the service trades, which suffer and must curtail accordingly.

On top of that, the service trades aren't classified as essential industries, although recently rules were amended to give laundries the same preferential treatment in the allocation of man power as is given to essential war industries. Anyone working in a service trade can't get deferment. Service trade employers outside laundries classified as "locally needed" by a regional WMC themselves can't get help from the U. S. Employment Service in recruiting new workers and they can't get help from the War Manpower Commission in having such help as they do have stabilized or frozen in their present jobs, though the wage levels are stabilized by War Labor Board.

WAR industries consequently raid freely and pirate as they please on the working forces of the service trades.

Service trades are also at the bottom of the list in getting additional machinery to take care of the increased demands put upon them by a public with money in its pockets to pay for services it formerly did without. Manufacture of laundry equipment, shoe repair machinery, beauty shop paraphernalia was virtually suspended a long time ago to save materials, facilities and manpower going into essential war materials.

UP to a short time ago, the service trades were able to get by, but now the pinch is beginning to be felt all over the country, and that's what the shouting is about. It is going to get louder, and the swell service you have been accustomed to is bound to get worse. Before the war is over, the service may be terrible.

What the people in the business of supplying services to the public are trying to do in the face of this situation is to build up a case for their essentiality. In the case of laundries, the case ran that since more women are working in industry, they haven't the time to do their own washing, and must send it to a laundry. If they can't get laundry service, they have to stay home from work a couple of days a week, and that increases absenteeism in a war plant.

THE report of the three-member panel on work stoppages at the Aluminum Co. of America plant here has been filed with the Regional Labor Board. It will be discussed by the board during the coming week.

Meanwhile, Frank Uible, once Ohio House speaker, the neutral member of the panel, continues as arbitrator. Few clashes have occurred since the panel went to work. Several have been averted by Frank's adjudication of the disputes.

David's Good Turn

A FEW days ago Service Director Sam David and Charley Sheets sat down to dinner. They agreed that Sam had done Charley a good turn by squeezing him out of the streets commissioner's job at City Hall. Charley now has a responsible job in private industry.

That all leads to some byplay yesterday whereby Sam was able to move his own choice into the streets commissioner's job merely by the expedient by certifying Charley for a return to work. Of course, the ex-commissioner was in the position of having to give up his vastly more secure private job to return to the city, or of giving up his civil service rating.

He chose the latter—and David moved in Fred Vitovec as acting commisioner. Thus all ends well.

Strangely, David, a Democratic ward leader, who supervises what probably is the most political department in the administration, didn't pick Vitovec because he's a Democrat.

Some years ago while sanitary engineer, he needed an engineer. He hired Fred Vitovec from the state. When he became service chief, he asked Fred to go along with him to City Hall as assistant streets commissioner.

Likeness Startles Mayor

RECENTLY, when Mayor Lausche, while speaking at an E award ceremony, was photographed in a typical speaking pose, with one hand outstretched.

A "blowup," about seven feet tall, was made, mounted on cardboard and brought to the mayor's office. City Hall reporters discovered it, toted it into the mayor's private office and stood it beside his desk.

When the mayor walked in, he roared: "Who did that?"

He sat down and worked at his desk for half an hour with the likeness staring him in the face. Then he jumped up, lugged it into the tapestry room at the rear of his private office and left it there, explaining that he couldn't work because the likeness startled him every time he looked up.

BEHIND the Councilman Stapleton-John Keane fight over share-the-ride signs in Ward 1 is an old and bitter political feud.

John Keane and Ed Stapleton, for nearly a decade, have been on opposite sides of political disputes, either as candidates against each other or as supporters of rival candidates. Keane came within 81 votes of beating Ed Stapleton for the councilmanic nomination in 1939, and if he had won, the political destiny of the ward might have been changed.

There have been reports he might be a candidate this year. Perhaps that motivated the Stapleton opposition to his program.

John Keane is an indefatigable worker, who drives hard when he has an idea or is in a campaign, and if he were to pitch into the Council race he could cause the incumbent councilman trouble.

So, naturally, Ed Stapleton was inclined to view with suspicion any move by his perennial rival, no matter what he merit of the move.

Revenge for O'Donnell

FOR years John O'Donnell has been waiting to take a whack at Sam Kornhauser whom he and and the one-time "majority bloc" of the School Board placed on the Library Board some years back. Sam turned out to be a thorn in the side of those who appointed him.

This past week Johnny got his chance and took after Kornhauser on his residence outside the Cleveland school district.

He won his protest, and now there are prospects of a wide-open fight for the Kornhauser term. And if O'Donnell can force Max Gruber off the board, since he, too, resides outside the school district, control of the Library Board will be in the balance, depending upon the selections for these two posts. Max, like Sam Kornhauser, hasn't performed in the manner his sponsors have wanted.

THE Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., which wins an Army and Navy E for completing the MacArthur Lock at the Soo months ahead of schedule, presents a study in conservatism and old-line business methods.

For half a century the company has been doing a tremendous amount of work along the lakes, public work in particular. The company employs no lobbyists to get contracts, does no advertising, doesn't publicize its work. Its offices in the Williamson Building are simple, almost severe, and sedate.

Its local head, J. J. Murphy, is rated one of the city's great citizens. He shuns the spotlight in the tradition of his company and is very reticent in telling of the company's achievements in being dratfed by the Government to build the largest dry dock in the nation, at Bayonne, N. WASHINGTON, July 10—The second front in Europe has begun.

Nazi drive against the Reds was the signal. Dope is that the British and Americans planned it this way. They had been waiting to see what Hitler would do, as well as to complete their own preparations. If Hitler sat tight, went on the defensive, they could pick their own time to strike. If he attacked all out, they'd intervene to help their Russian ally.

Italians, according to persistent reports, continue to look for a way out, a maneuver to save themselves. They are not finding it. The formula remains "unconditional surrender."

Stop, look, listen: Gen. Giraud warns overconfident America not to expect Nazi armies to crack up.

From his recent experience as commander of the French under Gen. Eisenhower in Tunisia, Gen. Giraud says German troops are well trained and disciplined, morale is good. And in 1918, he recalls, Germans fought well up to the last minute of the last day.

In Tunisia they quit only after they had been outgeneraled, outmaneuvered, outfought and overwhelmed with more and better equipment. Giraud corollary, therefore, is that the Allies must not count on an easy victory; must count on winning only by making ourselves superior to the enemy on the fighting front, the home front, production line, communications, and in soldier and civilian morale.

Byrnes is being urged to build a staff like that Lloyd George used during the other war. It was a staff of competent, trusted, personal friends. Each member was assigned to watch one segment of the war effort constantly. Lloyd George met this staff at breakfast each day, got reports from them of what was going on everywhere. Same staff acted as his liaison with the war cabinet, attended all sessions of that body.

Future of Tin Cans

By DAVID DIETZ
Scripps-Howard Science Editor

INSTEAD of worrying about tin for tin cans why not find a way of packaging food in a container that is as edible as the food itself? That is the question asked by Dr. Willard H. Dow, president of the Dow Chemical Co.

Dr. Dow belongs to that small group of chemical and industrial wizards who have revolutionized industrial progess. His father founded the Dow Chemical Co. to extract useful chemicals and metals from the salt brines of the wells in the Midland (Mich.) district. He has extended the process to the ocean.

Magnesium that goes into airplane engines and other plane parts and bromine for high-test gasoline and aviation fuel are both coming out of the Atlantic in plants built by Dow on the seashore.

Dr. Dow's opinions, therefore, represent those of a man who has a habit of translating revolutionary dreams into accomplishment. Consequently, it is worth listening to what he has to say.

He points out that there is plenty of tin in the ocean and that the day may come when it will be extracted as easily from sea water as magnesium now is.

But he thinks that instead of seeking new sources of tin, the scientists of the world ought to work for a substitute that will prove more useful.

HOUSEWIVES, annoyed by point rationing of canned goods and the necessity of salvaging available tin cans, will be pleased with Dr. Dow's dream of a whole new batch of containers.

"There is no reason why we should not sometimes eat the containers in which food is stored," he says. "We have learned to make synthetic sausage casings and ice cream cones. Why stop there?"

Dr. Dow does not insist that all containers be edible and points out that new synthetics are already available for manufacturing flexible tubes for tooth paste, shaving cream and the like.

He foresees a vast development of all sorts of synthetics with the end of the war and believes that there will be as many different kinds of synthetic rubber as there are companies manufacturing it.

While well aware of the present shortcomings of synthetic rubber and the fact that it will not yet make a tire as satisfactory as natural rubber, he has vast confidence in what scientific research will accomplish.

In this, he is on sound ground and I am inclined to agree with him heartily from what I have seen of research in this field. He points out that the history of research in the field of indigo and many other natural products has been the eventual production of a synthetic that was better than the natural one.

"Uniformity of specifications and lower costs will establish synthetic rubber permanently as a new industry after the war," he says.

BUT as chemist Dr. Dow is not content to talk about the progress of science, he is equally worried about the ability of mankind to make the best use of scientific knowledge.

He points to the coming of wars as a demonstration of mankind's inability to deal with its problems. In the future, he says, we need a scientific approach to world problems.

I am inclined to agree with this, but I am also inclined to be more optimistic about the future than Dr. Dow seems at the moment. It seems to me that on every hand one hears the spoken determination to avoid, after World War II, the mistakes that were made after World War I and which led to the present conflict.

The application of scientific methods to social problems, however, is more quickly asked for than delivered. It does not follow that a smart biochemist will make an equally good student of social problems.

Moreover, it must be remembered that the complex problems of society demand special techniques for solution. One can carry the spirit of the scientific laboratory into this field but not the same instruments. You can see a microbe under a high-powered microscope but not a human motive.

Dr. Dow, who was recently awarded the Chandler medal by Columbia University for distinguished achievement in science and industry, was born in Midland, Mich., on Jan. 4, 1897. He began his career with his father's company in 1919.

Today's Business

By John W. Love

Sir Harry Oakes, who was said to be Canada's wealthiest man when he left there for the Bahamas in 1939, suffered the fate of the old Australian prospectors who figured in Sherlock Holmes' stories. But Oakes had no luck in Australia, and, so they tell us over the radio, not until he was put off the T. & N. O. train at Swastika, Ont., where he had no money to take him farther. That was in 1911.

There he met a Chinese who told him of suspected gold in the vicinity. Prosecutors were already working the area. As the legend runs, he made his big strike by accident. He was on his way back to camp, he cut through a patch of bush, stopped a moment, happened to look at the ground, there was the ore! As the story goes in Kirkland Lake, no discovery in mining history could have been more incidental.

His Lake Shore mine has taken out upward of $180,000,000 of gold. More than that, Oakes opened up Canada's own Rand, that belt which runs 125 miles across country about 400 miles almost north of here, from the mines near the T. & N. O. past Noranda, Rouyn, the Cadillacs and Mallartics to Lamaque and beyond. The total yield of the reef passed half a billion before the war. William Sixt, who went from Case School to Cobalt, long managed the mine next to Oakes'. He is now a broker in Toronto. Herbert Cannon and Andrew Meyer, Cleveland mining engineers, have been all over the area. F. L. Cody of Cleveland had a half interest in Tech-Hughes, across the road from Lake Shore, but he had to give it up. For a time the miners were using Teck-Hughes stock certificates to pay for haircuts, but eventually it produced $70,000,000 or so.

Jack & Heintz Shares

No gold mine, exactly, because subject to renegotiation, is Jack & Heintz of Cleveland. I was writing here the other day of the absence of any meaning in what Congressman Engel said of the earnings of Jack & Heintz as a percentage of invested capital. Such percentages make no sense in companies of extremely rapid growth, and in Jack & Heintz the original $100,000 Engel mentioned didn't show the capital investment anyway.

While I was on the subject I could have added that the company's incorporation has never been changed, and the ownership is still represented by only 100 shares. William Jack, Ralph M. Heintz, W. Russell Jack and the estate of the late Clarence Jack own them all.

Nobody would ever think of putting those particular shares on the market for public distribution, of course, but if they were sold in that form, and if the market appraised them as it has been doing with shares in aircraft companies like Lockheed and Consolidated Vultee, their price today would be around $25,000 apiece. That value would be 1-100th of about 1½ times the 1942 earnings of approximately $1,700,000 after taxes and before renegotiation. This is not, however, as much as one capitalist is said to have offered in putting down a check for $10,000,000 for an interest up to 49 per cent. I understand he was not the one Cleveland man who is able to do that.

In Thursday's column I said the company paid or is paying 80 and 90 per cent in income taxes. I should not have written it in that way. A particular dollar of profit may be taxed at 90 per cent but the ceiling is 80.

Stencils and Postal Zones

A reader of this column called me to say he had several hundred dollars' worth of addressing stencils and all these had to be thrown away to conform with the new postal regulations which divide the large cities into zones. The new address of The Cleveland Press, for example, is Cleveland 14, O., and it would cost quite a piece of money if every mailing list The Press is on had to be revised. Maybe millions for the whole country.

I suggested he read the current number of the William Feather magazine. Mr. Feather arranged with the Cleveland Post Office to put the zone number after the state, thus: Cleveland Press, Cleveland, O., 14. The stencils don't have to be remade.

Assistant Postmaster Frank Klein says new stencils should have the zone number after the city, but he sees no objection to editing existing stencils in the manner Mr. Feather does.

In Africa

With Ernie Pyle

Fourth of a Series on the Wacs in Africa.

NORTH AFRICA: There are some amazingly interesting individuals among the 283 Wacs now serving in North Africa. For instance, one girl used to be a bartender. One was a reporter on an English paper in China. One is an heiress to Penney Store millions. One was a poetess. One was at Pearl Harbor. And two of them have sons in the service.

Five of the Wacs have met their brothers here in North Africa. They are Lieut. Sarah Bagby of New Haven, Mo.; Lieut. Susan Hammon, Nahant, Mass.; Capt. Ruth Briggs, Westerly, R. I.; Evelyn Pagles, Tonawanda, N. Y., and Ethel Crow, Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Mary McCurl of Baltimore has a son in the Merchant Marine and Mrs. Florence Byrns, Cincinnati, has a son in the Army. Miriam Stehlik, Cedar Rapids, Ia., was a model before joining the Wacs. Virginia Stacy, Seattle, was at Pearl Harbor and now works for the Navy here.

Poems About Pills

Alice Hesse of Boulder Creek, Cal., had a book of poetry published. Sgt. Nana Rae, New York, has become a poet since arriving here. She came out with one on the G. I.'s most unfavorite pill. The title is "Atabrine," and the poem follows:

"If I should die before I wake,
At least I won't have pills to take,
And after doses one to three,
[illegible] have [illegible]"

One of my favorite Wacs is Betty Jane O'Leary of Pittsburgh. She is a beaming blonde with impish eyes. She does secretarial work at WAC headquarters. The first time I appeared there, without my having identified myself or anything, she began commenting favorably upon my dogs, my picket fence at home, my good looks and the general quality of genius apparent in these columns. Smart girl, that O'Leary.

Reminds Them of Mother

Sgt. Mary Murray is 43, with a young face and graying hair. She has traveled all over the world as a fur salesman. She married into the Navy and lived for many years in China. She saw the Japanese invasions of Manchukuo and Shanghai in 1931 and 1937. Now she is chief cook at one of the three WAC messes and she says she never enjoyed anything more in her life.

Every afternoon there is a string of G. I.'s at her back kitchen door waiting for coffee and a chance to talk to Mary. She hears more battle stories than any other Wac. For some reason the men want to tell her eveything. Dog faces just back from the front unburden their horror stories to her, and what some of them have been through almost makes her cry at night when she relays the hair-raising experiences to the other girls.

There isn't a more popular Wac with the soldiers than Murray, and she thinks they are all wonderful. Slightly tipsy soldiers weep on her shoulder and occasionally ask to kiss her because she reminds them of their mother.

She kisses them back, but wishes their impulses were stirred by something less maternal.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK: This is nothing on the order of a beef, you understand, but just an innocent, wholesale explanation or speculation having to do with our lack of cruising radius here in these eastern states where they measure out the gas with an eyedropper and people, when they do venture on the road, go turtling along at 25 miles an hour and cut her off entirely and coast on the hills to stretch their mileage.

People aren't sore about this, but they are slowly going nuts, not because of the inconvenience of limited and cramped transportation for necessary travel, but from a suppressed longing to sling the old lady and the kids, if any, into that moping old buggy, so mournful and silent there in the shed, and just go for a summer night's drive.

I imagine that our feelings along the eastern seaboard are something like those of the undergrads in Sing Sing when they see the night boats chugging past in the Hudson, turning cool white feathers off their bows or hear the stylish, fast trains growling through the tunnel.

There she sets, in the garage, the old Buick or the Ford or the Chrysler, still pretty good in the treads but going stable-crazy like a barned-up steed for lack of a pleasant, regardless run to nowhere in particular in the cool of the evening, a sweet refreshing tankful of Ethyl at one of those high-toned filling stations, now going to rust and weeds, a breather in the parking space while the family takes on a few scoops of beer with cheese-on-rye and so home and back to the stall.

Riding a Necessary Relaxation

We may not have realized as much but almost all of us had become addicts of motion for its own sake in the years since the other war as the roads grew smoother and the engines and the tires almost infallible. Riding in the car was one of our simple, necessary relaxations and, as this second summer of rationing drags along on much smaller allowances and with driving for pleasure strictly verboten under penalty of gossip, scandal, embarrassment and possible revocation of the ticket, our people are beginning to chew bits of paper and gaze off into space.

The enforcement may have something to do with this nervousness. If you have a ticket you may take a vacation trip if you can convince your neighbors on the board that no train or bus can take you where you want to go, provided you can get the gas. Or, going to the store to lay in a slab of gun, a loaf of bread and some cigarettes, some stranger may up and ask you whither away and you feel compelled to tell him that's your business and what is this, anyway, the Gestapo?

But I still don't think that is our main trouble now. Our trouble is that it has been so long since we could step on that starter, back her out, whip her around and head her away just following the roads for maybe 40 or 50 miles on no business whatever, but just to be moving and going and with no explanations or lies to anybody.

Take Family on Business Trips

Nobody around these parts has done anything like that for a year, and I have noticed that some public officials who have legitimate errands of more than 10 miles nowadays pack the loved ones along to let them review old scenes and breathe some of that country air and somehow look more like Sanger's Circus or Gypsy John Mitchell and family than dignitaries of state.

We here may not realize it and the people in the middle west, the west and south just can't get the idea, not having been through the experience, but after a while, like those boys in Sing Sing, you begin to pine for a glimpse of an ordinary crossroads over the ridge or the bouquet of Joe's Lunch on the Post road, 30 miles away, a hamburger joint and a dump of the purest ray, to be sure, but dear to your heart.

I think the people of the east have been very game and sportsmanlike about it all, although some necessary mystery is made of the reason why, there is general acceptance of the proposition that the gas that we don't get is going to Europe and Africa. If there were some way to drain off a little from, say Illinois and Indiana, to raise our allowance, that would be real nice, of course, but nobody has shown that it can be done and, in the absence of proof that it can, probably it can't. There is no reason why Harold Ickes should be sore at the east. He always got good pluralities around here.

It isn't anger or annoyance that is getting us down around here. We are just going stir-crazy, that's all.

My Day

By Eleanor Roosevelt

TUMBLING D W RANCH, Nev.: Some days ago I found out from the War Production Board what the situation was as regards wool production in this country, and to my surprise I learned that whereas two years ago our problem was one of acquiring enough raw wool to meet our needs, today our bottleneck is machinery.

In the intervening time we built up a government-owned stock pile to meet emergency needs. Two years ago we conserved raw wool by limiting the use of it and by blending it with other fibers. Today the trouble is that we have more demands from the military and for essential and foreign deliveries than our machinery can produce. Therefore, we are trying to increase production through extra hours and extra shifts, but this, of course, is difficult to do. We are now producing all the yardage possible and the effort is being made to preserve that yardage by making all economies possible in the manufacture of essential clothing.

I think some of the criticisms which have come to me about the details of the way this conservation is to be accomplished, should have consideration. Sometimes the people actually in the industry may want some things which are not really as good for the average consumer as they are for the trade, or at least the consumer does not think so. Such consumers' organizations as exist and such individuals as have ideas on what is the best way to conserve yardage and still give people the maximum number of garments, should make it a point to be heard.

I wonder if the privates in various camps throughout this country have been writing to each other saying: "Let's see if we write to Mrs. Roosevelt if she will send us some cookies." First, three boys in the far northwest wrote me, saying they would like a box of cookies from the White House. I sent them. The other day another letter came in from the middle west in which two boys said that various other boys in camp had wives to send them cookies, but they were single and got none.

I suppose their mothers or sisters must have been too busy with other members of the family, so they thought it would be good to get cookies from the White House! I am very glad to send the cookies, but sad to say, my dear boys, if this is a campaign there comes a limit to what the White House can do, and I think my last box of cookies to soldiers, sailors or marines, whom I do not know, has now gone out.

A REVEALING exhibition of French paintings—showing Cleveland's wealth in that particular field—is being featured currently at the Cleveland Museum of Art. Most of the great names of the 19th and 20th Century are included in the show and the development of painting from the romanticists through the realists, impressionists and moderns, is beautifully represented.

The nucleus of the exhibit consists of several paintings loaned by Leonard C. Hanna, prominent Clevelander who is now in Birmingham, England. The paintings from his New York apartment were left with the Cleveland museum to be used as Director William M. Milliken and Henry S. Francis, curator of paintings, directed "for the duration."

To show these Hanna pieces as well as the many the museum owns, Mr. Francis arranged this French exhibit. Several other Cleveland-owned paintings are also included in the exhibition.

Besides the French painters, artists of other nationalities whose works are closely related to these particular French schools, are exhibited, including Ava-Nowak, Hungarian; Bo Besko and Picasso, Spanish; Carl Hofer, German; Van Gogh, Dutch, and Mary Cassatt, American.

Never Before Shown in Public

MR. HANNA'S collection along has 15 paintings, most of them shown publicly for the first time. Included in his group are two Picassos, one of which is the striking "Figures in Pink" (the museum owns a sketch for one of the figures, shown along with the painting); a portrait of Mlle. Ravous by Van Gogh, a greenish, coarse painting typical of the Dutchman's style; a Gauguin and several Renoirs and a Cezanne.

Other Clevelanders who loaned paintings for the exhibit include Harry D. and G. S. Kendrick, Dr. Eugene Freedman and Alexander Ginn.

The other great French artists representative of this period are Redon, Degas, Delacroix, Monticelli, Corot, Boudin, Fantin-Latour, Daumier, Guys, Manet, Monet, Matisse, Toulouse-Lautrec, Derain, Couture, Ingres, David.

Besides tracing the development of French painting through this period—which is an interesting contemplation in itself—the outstanding point in the exhibit is that so many and such fine paintings of these particular French schools are owned in Cleveland.

Exhibit Honors Grieg

AN exhibit in honor of the Norwegian composer, Edvard Grieg is now being displayed on the third floor of the Main Public Library. Among the articles on exhibit are books, photographs, musical scores, and colored plates of Norway. Grieg was thirteen years old when he composed his first piece, "A Set of Variations Upon a German Melody," which was destroyed by his teacher.

Capt. Lawson's Book Is Thrilling

By RICHARD McLAUGHLIN
Book Reviewer

BY now Capt. Ted W. Lawson is famous and his experiences during and after the Doolittle air raid over Japan are widely known, but let me urge you all to read his book, "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" (Random House, $2), to be published Monday.

Here is the complete story of the raid—the secret preparations for it, the hard weeks of training, the trip across the Pacific on the aircraft carrier Hornet, the hair-raising take-off from the flat-top by those Mitchell bombers, the flight to Japan, the bombing itself.

And, after the bombing, there is the incredible story of what happened to Capt. Lawson and his brave crew. The plane crash in the water, just short of shore, as the engines failed. Lawson came out of the wreckage with leg and arm mangled, face bashed in.

How Chinese peasants and guerrillas helped these injured men to reach safety and medical care is as inspiring a story as you will read of this war.

The captain watched a buddy saw off his left leg, then when he finally reached home had to go through the same operation again at Walter Reed Hospital as well as have painful plastic surgery performed on his battered face.

Wife an Inspiration

THAT Capt. Lawson is still a member of the Army Air Forces shows what he thinks of the need for every American to fight this war to a finish.

Besides telling his experiences, Lawson also tells briefly of what happened to each of the other men who took part in the raid on Japan. Lakewood's Lieut. Bob Meder, who was captured by the Japs, is mentioned, of course.

An important figure in the story is Capt. Lawson's pretty wife, Ellen, who gave him the strength to go on whenever he reached points where he despaired of regaining freedom and good health.

"Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," a Book-of-the-Month Club selection for this summer, was edited excellently by Robert Considine, International News Service columnist.

New Deeping Novel

GOOD escape reading is Warwick Deeping's "Slade" (Dial, $2.50) which is a mild sort of a novel about "Caspar Milqutoast" type of Englishman whose sweet manners, gentlemanly bearing, fine feelings bring him success in spite of himself and his shrewish wife.

A mysterious background, with seven years of jail mixed up in it, adds piquancy to the story. The locale is a small but prosperous seaside resort, the characters typical Englishmen and women of the past century.

"Slade" is wrapped up in honeyed Deeping sentiment, with touches of homely philosophy. The outcome is unexciting, not unlike the whole itself. Yet it's pleasant and entertaining summer fare.

Waldo Frank Tells of His S. American Experiences

WALDO FRANK tells the story of his trip through South America in "South American Journey" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $3), and he includes his version on the insults and attacks upon him at some of the places he visited.

It is an entertaining account of these neighbor countries, their peoples, their resources, their philosophies.

Plenty of Action in "The Handsome Heart"

IN Peter De Vries' novel, "The Handsome Heart" (Coward McCann, $2.50), a young man who has been committed to a state hospital escapes and is aided by Edith, a pretty young woman who believes he is sane.

In the course of his flight he falls in with a band of coffin looters, kills a man and flees to Chicago where his former sweetheart, now married to his brother, lives. Edith follows him and then it is a matter of choosing between the two women.

The Stars in July

THE bright planet Venus shares honors with the "summer triangle" in the night skies of July. Now 120 times brighter than a first magnitude star, Venus dominates the western sky.

The summer triangle is high in the eastern sky. It is formed by Vega, bright star of the constellation of Lyra, Deneb, bright star of Cygnus or the Northern Cross, and Altair, bright star of the constellation of Aquila.

These stars, as well as the other summer constellations, are easily found with the aid of the accompanying star map. To use it, face south and hold the map overhead, the top of the map pointing north. The map will then give you a replica of the heavens.

Clevelanders planning to attend next week's Press Star-Gazing Parties at Wade Park on Tuesday night and Lakewood Park on Thursday night will find this map particularly useful.—David Dietz.

Crooner Sinatra Swoony

Girl Writer Recalls Him as Hungry-Looking

By MARIE DAERR

THAT blissful, respectful murmur you will hear at Public Hall next Wednesday night as Frank Sinatra appears on the stage won't be the last-minute tune-up of the Cleveland Summer Orchestra.

No, ma'am. It will be the sighing of thousands of feminine voices as their owners settle themselves happily for a song session with the phenomenal crooner.

When Francis Albert Sinatra was signed for an appearance with the orchestra, it was just one more step on the spectacular ladder of fame he has mounted recently.

A year ago this month Sinatra appeared at R-K-O Palace Theater with Tommy Dorsey's swing band. Today, Palace employees wish they could remember what he sang. He was advertised as one of six featured performers—his name in type no larger than any one else's.

Not a Big Impression

IN his review of the Palace bill, Omar Ranney of The Press mentioned Sinatra's name only when he reported that Dorsey was bringing out a recording of "Daybreak" with Sinatra as the vocalist. Dorsey predicted it would be a hit. It was.

And now Miss Bertha Wellman of The Press and I make a terrible confession. We went to the Palace to see "Moontide" and, consequently, we saw Frank Sinatra. AND WE CAN'T REMEMBER WHAT HE SANG.

We do remember that he looked young, casual and rather hungry. He had broad shoulders and locks of hair that fell becomingly into his eyes. When he grasped the microphone he did so nonchalantly, almost absentmindedly. When he sang it appeared to cost him no effort. His voice was sweet, soothing, so low that at times it was a whisper.

We recall that when Sinatra appeared the younger feminine element of the audience "Oh-ed" and "Ah-ed" and that when he left the spotlight they clapped and cheered. We remember, too, seeing Sinatra emerge from the Palace artists' entrance and leap into a taxi. He looked yellow in his make-up and even hungrier.

Miss Wellman and I have concluded that it is Sinatra's boyish quality that mows (or moos) his fans down. Young girls like him because he dresses and acts the way their boy friends did before they went into service. Older women fall for him because he looks as though he needs a square meal and some mothering.

According to reports, the young girls suffer most when Sinatra appears. For them, he out-Bings Crosby and out-Rudys Vallee, makes them moon, sight and faint and even organize clubs dedicated to his singing.

He's in Big Time Now

SINATRA left Dorsey's band last October to go on his own. Since that time his career has included appearing at the Paramount Theater in New York for $2500 a week and then being engaged by Manhattan's Riobamba Club.

The man who whispers "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To" and "That Old Black Magic" with devastating effect is 25 years old, used to be a sports writer and started singing in an amateur way in 1933. He followed a broadcast on Major Bowes' program with songs over several New York stations and then was signed by Harry James and Dorsey, in succession.

He is married and the father of a little daughter. His wife spends much of her time turning down proposals of marriage directed to her husband.

Wednesday night he will sing Cole Porter's "Night and Day," "The Song Is You" from Jerome Kern's "Music in the Air," and "Summertime" from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." (He will also have several encores prepared.)

Rudolph Ringwall, conductor of the Cleveland Summer Orchestra, is making the rest of the orchestral program "all popular," and will include in his groups five Morton Gould arrangements—"Pavanne," "Dark Eyes," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Sophisticated Lady" and "Star Dust"; a medley of patriotic marches, selections from Romberg's "New Moon" and "Mlle. Modiste" by Herbert.

Kullman Draws 6564 to Concert

By ARTHUR LOESSER, Music Editor

CHARLES KULLMAN, well-known Metropolitan Opera tenor, was the star attraction at the "pop" concert at Public Hall last night; he clouted the box office for a score of 6564, the second highest of the season thus far.

Moreover, he provided the eager listeners with some vocal artistry of a very high order. His singing of the "Dream" aria from "Manon" was a masterpiece of sustained mezza voice, and his performance of "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" would be hard to beat for charm of tone and felicity of phrasing.

Mr. Kullman also sang a number of operatic rocks-of-ages: The "Flower Song" from "Carmen" and "La Donna E Mobile"; and he devoted the later portion of his offerings to musical comedy numbers, such as "Yours Is My Heart Alone," "Sweetheart," "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" and many others. Public enthusiasm ran high.

The Cleveland Summer Orchestra, under Rudolph Ringwall, presented some famous thrillers, such as the "Tannhaeuser" Overture, the Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, and Chabrier's "Espana." They all induced their customary stimulations. "Poet and Peasant," they say, still survives on some remote farm-house pianos; it gave some of us oldsters a bit of nostalgia to have Mr. Ringwall revive it.

The "March to the Scaffold" movement from Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique" seemed a little shy in all this bright company, but it served for contrast.

A good time was had by all.

ONE of the most interesting things about a bird is its name. I mean the common name by which most people know him and not the long scientific names.

Most birds are named for their appearance or for the sounds they make. Some are named for their actions or feeding habits, a few in honor of prominent persons.

One of the unique groups is the family to which the nighthawks belong. The nighthawk himself is named only half correctly. The first half of his title is appropriate, for any time from dusk to dawn one may step into the streets of Cleveland and see him or hear his raucus squawk. But the latter half is misleading for he is not a hawk; he is an insect eater.

One of his cousins is the whip-poor-will, named so because his whistled call sounds very much like those words. Another one is called simply poor-will as this bird forgets to use the whip in his singing. Still another whistles, "chuck-will's-widow," and is named just that.

The flicker, common local woodpecker, is named for the brief glimpses of gold that come from the underside of his wings when he flies. The ovenbird, a ground-nesting wood warbler, gets his name from the shape of the nest he builds. This nest is completely hidden by an arched roof and is entered through a small round hole he leaves in the side.

Two flycatchers, similar in appearance, are most easily distinguished by their calls, after which they are named. One calls a harsh, rather guttural "phoebe" and the other whistles a clear and plaintive "pee-aw-wee."

And of course our national bird is called the bald eagle when he isn't at all bald. His head is very well covered with feathers, their whiteness giving merely the impression of baldness.

Two Pianists Play Concert

SEAMAN HAROLD FINK, former student at the Cleveland Institute of Music, will appear in a joint recital with Marian Matousek on July 20, 8:30 p. m., at the institute. Both are pianists.

The pianist is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fink, 10716 Tacoma avenue. He joined the Coast Guard a year ago and is now stationed in Buffalo, N. Y.

At the institute he studied with Beryl Rubinstein, who is now a captain in the U. S. Army. He also studied at the David Mannes School in New York and with Leonard Shure who is head of the institute's piano department this summer.

JOHN JACOB NILES, specialist in the American folk songs, will appear at the First Unitarian Church on July 25 in a concert arranged by Walter Blodgett, organist there.

Tomorrow the First Unitarian Choir will give a special choral program at 8 p. m. under the direction of Mr. Blodgett.

Covering Clubs

By Betty Kralik

THE League of Women Voters apparently has its own ideas about perking up the somber traditions of Monday—variously and sadly described as blue Monday, washday or the day that comes after the week-end. Current gossip is the Cuyahoga County League plans to cheer the calendar by re-establishing the old convention that "Monday is League Day."

They start day after tomorrow with a day-long series of committee and board meetings at the league offices. They'll wind up in the evening by throwing the league doors open again to monthly night meetings especially re-established for the busy women of our busy times. Mrs. Malcolm McBride will direct Monday's opening session—a government board meeting at 9:30 a. m. At 10:30 the meeting will be thrown open to all members who want to straighten themselves out on the problems of protocol in the relationships of state, national and local leagues.

At 1:30 p. m. there'll be a short meeting of the executive board, with Mrs. McBride again at the gavel. Under the leadership of its new chairman, Mrs. B. W. Maccracken, the government and social welfare department will go into a planning session for its scheduled eight-week study campaign.

Study Social Security

On the docket for their attention are the Ohio and federal social security laws, the National Resources Planning Board proposals in the field of social security, the recommendations of the present social security board on extensions of current provisions. The study will be split among four working committees, who will report at the end of their two-month stint to the governing board at a general committee meeting. Then there'll be a general membership meeting to consider their mutual findings.

Mrs. Roger Herter will be the speaker for the first of the reopened evening sessions at 7:30 p. m. She'll discuss "Broadsides and Their Use in Wartime." There'll be a report, too, of the state league's findings on the Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill.

City Club Museum Outing

Women's City Club is establishing something of a record for outstanding summer parties. There was June's highly successful garden party at Mrs. Robert Emmet Baker's home, and now comes the annual outing scheduled for next Saturday on the terrace and in the auditorium of the Art Museum.

The party has a nice historical note. . . . City Club Juniors and Museum Junior Council members are modelling "War Wear," both Sunday-go-to-meeting gowns—and uniforms—worn by women during the periods of each war in which the U. S. was involved. All this takes place on the north terrace, while guests eat their lunch. Appropriate musical accompaniment on flute and clarinet will be provided by musicians from the Music School Settlement.

Following the style show the group adjourns to the auditorium, where Milton Fox, museum instructor, talks on "The Uses of Art in War."

Modeling the costumes, furnished by the Western Reserve Historical Society, will be Mrs. Richard Abbott, Mrs. Thomas B. Allen, Mrs. Herman Black, Mrs. Charles Gleason, Mrs. Jack Howey, Mrs. H. S. Eide, Mrs. Albert S. Ingalls Jr., Mrs. Richard Jett, Miss Ferne Beverly Jones, Mrs. John Kerr, Mrs. Edward Kline, Miss Eleanor Munro, Miss Alice Murray, Miss Phyllis Peckham, Mrs. M. W. Stanley, Miss Jean Taylor, Mrs. Stephen Thayer, Mrs. Ralph Tyler Jr., Mrs. John Travers White and Mrs. John F. Wilson.

Mrs. Henry J. Crawford is general chairman of the outing, aided by Miss Virda Stewart.

Lakewood Juniors Party

The yearly summer party of the Juniors of the Lakewood Woman's Club will take the form of an indoor garden bridge luncheon next Friday at 1 p. m. at the Lakeshore Hotel.

Party chairman for the frolic is Mrs. Ronald Underwood who's being assisted by Mrs. Robert Elliott and the following committee: Mrs. W. T. Rosol Jr., Mrs. Robert Day, Mrs. Max Harbaugh, Mrs. Russell Deubel, Mrs. G. H. Goetz, Mrs. Paul Crumlish, Mrs. William Kahler, Mrs. David Bowden, Mrs. E. C. Mulvihill, Mrs. Fred Best, Mrs. William D. May and Mrs. James W. Littleton.

Garden Fifth Columnists

"Fifth Columnists in the Garden, including what to do about Mr. Cottontail," will be investigated in Mrs. Felix Harenski's talk at the July 20 meeting of the Independence Garden Club at 8:30 p. m. in the Town Hall. Mrs. Twyla Conway will read a poem on "Bugs," and the meeting will be presided over by Mrs. R. R. Fickling. Hosts and hostesses for the evening are Mrs. George Bender, Mrs. John Faber, Mr. and Mrs. Harenski, Mrs. Florence Booth and Mr. and Mrs. Fred [illegible]

Miss Bell was gowned in ivory satin, the dress having a medium-length train and a short tulle veil. Her bouquet was of white gardenias and baby breath. Thomas Hoyt Jones walked down the aisle with her and she was given in marriage by her half-brother, Thomas L. Cheney.

Maid of honor for Miss Bell was Miss Mary White. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Thomas L. Cheney, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Mary C. Ramsey. They wore dresses of pink net with ruching trimming and hats of matching materials. Their bouquets were of blue delphiniums. The altar was decorated with regal lilies and candelabra were in the windows. The Chagrin Valley Hunt Club, the scene of the reception following the wedding, was decorated with garden flowers.

Best man for Mr. Ramsey was George Gascoigne. Ushers were Mr. Cheney, Richard Seymour and Thomas Parker.

Several out-of-town guests were here for the wedding. Mrs. William Barton Eddison, aunt of the groom, came from Ardsley-on-Hudson, N. ## How Near Are We Now— as Close as in Last War?

By FREDERIC STERBENZ

NEXT Wednesday will be our 585th day in this war. On our 585th day in the last war, firing ceased and defeated Germany passed under the yoke.

On our 585th day of this war, the enemy is still far from being defeated. Indeed, we are not yet engaging the enemy, within the Far East or in Europe, on any field in which decisive victory can be obtained.

Mr. Sterbenz

But (if accounts from Moscow are not too sanguine) Germany has just suffered its third vital defeat. If it were possible for a harassed nation to assess its situation calmly at a time when its very life was at stake, and if it were possible for the doomed oligarchy of Nazi Germany to sacrifice itself in the interest of the nation, the war in Europe would end within a week.

Marshal Goering's air barrage has been shattered and, in general, command of the skies has passed from the Axis to the Allied powers. Adm. Doenitz's submarine barrage has been shattered on the North Atlantic and the materials of war that Hitler expected the U-boat to keep away from his door are beginning to roll toward the continent like a great tidal wave.

And now, at last, 46 months after those first great, dazzling victories in Poland, the paralyzing blows of German armor have been smothered. Russian defensive power has caught up with Nazi striking power and German armor has battered itself to pieces on the Belgorod front.

While German armor may yet be able to win ground for exploiting a chance weakness, Germany has in truth passed to the strategic defensive. With the failure of the submarine to control the North Atlantic, with our war factories beyond the Germans' reach and outproducing the Axis at a steadily increasing rate, the defeat of the Axis is but a matter of time and effort.

Our task now is to gain the offensive, to overcome the German army's defensive power. We may hope that the Germans will not be so foolish as to fight until they have exhausted every last resource, but we certainly cannot hope that Germany will admit defeat before we have actually imposed defeat on the German army. And defeat in this sense means not the stopping of a German offensive but the conquest of territory that the German army is trying to hold. Our attack will have to be so overwhelming that the Germans will abandon hope of being able to hold any position against us.

As in 1918?

By Dec. 10 this war will have run the number of days of the European war of 1914-18. The mind leaps to the possibilities. June 4, 1918, the German offensive was checked on the Marne. July 18, the great Allied-American offensive on the Aisne-Marne salient opened. Nov. 7 the Americans entered Sedan, cut Germany's principal line of communication. Nov. 11 the war ended.

With the great armies of the British Empire and of the United States still fresh, with our great flood of military supplies, with command of the air virtually assured and command of the sea apparently obtained, we can see the possibility of overwhelming the harassed German army in the same space of time as in 1918.

But perhaps the mind is a little too agile. Perhaps we are still a little too hopeful and a little like gesture children. In 1918, we were on the continent, with two-thirds of France at our backs. We had had the submarine under control for more than a year, and we never had to fight on the coast with the sea at our backs, the worst possible position an army can have.

It is obvious that for all our manpower and all our power to produce the materials of war, the Allied High Command is not yet confident of the ability of our forces to invade the continent and stay there. But today's invasion of Sicily indicates we are almost ready for the effort and perhaps when we do attack, in August or September, we will do so with forces so overwhelming as to be irresistible.

Well, as long as we are perhapsing, we might mention a perhaps on the pessimistic side. The German offensive of 1914 ended on the Marne Sept. 6, and Sept. 11 the Germans went into trenches. It was four years and two months after the Germans first went on the defensive that the war ended.

It won't be that long this time. But it might be well not to put too much hope in the ending of the war in Europe by Dec. 10 of this year.

Good News From Russia

News from the Russian front, meantime, is about the best of the war. Dispatches this week indicated that the Russians had increased their fire power considerably and that they were able to apply it where it was most effective, against the forces supporting the armored spearhead.

The Germans tried to regain momentum in the Belgorod sector after their initial advances were stopped, by throwing in more heavy armor. Russian artillery and tank busters gained the German Tigers. The German tank losses as reported by the Russians seem almost incredible, but in view of the circumstances of the action, in which the Russians stalked what was intended to be an overwhelming German attack, the Russian report of 1843 tanks knocked out in four days probably is reasonably close to the truth.

There is no reason to doubt that the Germans were intending an offensive that would destroy Russia's effective fighting power and leave the German army free to turn the bulk of its strength against the Allies, who have obligingly given the Germans more time in the west. As I have said before, the virtual defeat of Russia this summer offered Germany its only hope.

Changeover Takes Time

The Germans are stubborn and they may be expected to continue action on the Russian front, hoping to find a weak spot that can be exploited. Our experience in this war makes us wary of predictions and the knowledge that the Russians have been badly hurt makes us more wary. But the results of the fighting this week indicate that even in a break-through the Germans will not again have the success they had in Russia in 1941 or 1942.

While the Russians apparently have stopped one German offensive by smothering German armor, it does not follow that the Russians can take the offensive. Russia has studied methods of stopping German armored action and has developed an apparently successful means of defense. Its main reliance has been on artillery and tank busters as well as on planes and infantry. There are no indications that the Russians have prepared a mixture of armor and infantry in offensive proportions.

The Russians were able to use their defensive forces in two winter offensives, the second of which was more effective than the first, but Russian offensive power waned with the dying of winter largely because of the lack of mobile striking power. Belgorod was still a defensive action. Organization changes, we have discovered in this war, take considerable time, even when the materials are available.

Thus we have to face the possibility that the failure of a German offensive on the Russian front may result in the creation of a fairly inactive Eastern Front, requiring fewer troops, fewer planes and almost no armor.

Pacific Will Take Longer

A Russian offensive should be certain next year. But what interests us now is whether the Russians can attack this year and thus keep on the Eastern Front most of the Axis forces now employed there. What Russia can do at the time we are invading Europe will determine the length of the war in Europe.

We got into this war because Japan attacked us at Pearl Harbor. And from the viewpoint of self interest, in the light of American economic and political power, the Pacific is of first importance to us even though we have made the defeat of Hitler our first task.

Well, how about the war in the Pacific? Certainly it will not end by next Wednesday, nor by Dec. 10. Nor is it likely to be over by Dec. 10 of next year. Yet victory is in sight, on a distant hill. The advantage that Japan gained in surprise attack has been wiped out. The Japanese navy is inferior in power to our Pacific Fleet and the Japanese are far out of the running in their ability to replace losses in merchant shipping.

Our action in the Solomons is going well, as far as we can judge from the meager reports our military departments allow us. The Japanese lost heavily in the sea action in Kula Bay (but the sea forces did succeed in their mission, which was to land more troops). Our own reported losses are small.

So far, the Japanese have lost 184 warships, known sunk and all possible duplications eliminated. Another 84 may have been sunk. We have lost 74 warships. The Japanese have lost 356 merchant ships. We have lost only 16 in the Pacific, these low losses in our supply craft being about the only advantage we gain from our exterior positions.

Navy Secretary Knox informed us this week that the current action in the South Pacific is the beginning of the United States offensive against Japan. Something of that sort has been indicated by the amount of naval power we have concentrated in that region.

Japs Willing to Spend

The Allies are getting ready for an offensive into Burma and then into China. Current guesses are that Stilwell may run that show. But weather being what it is in Burma in the summer and fall, action in that quarter is not indicated until late in the fall, probably early December.

The Japanese seem to be doing well enough in exploiting the materials of the countries they have seized. And they are still willing to spend men, as the action in Kula Bay this week indicates. They will be willing to spend men for quite some time.

The war in China started its seventh year this week. The beginning of this new year finds Japan everywhere on the defensive, and there is no indication that the Japanese will be able to regain the offensive. Yet beating Japan back from its far-flung positions will be a hard job, and Japan can still view the defensive prospects with a brighter eye than Germany can. The Japanese have still to learn the meaning of Yankee determination, and until they learn they will keep on believing that their wasteful use of men will tire us out.

City's Italians Hope for Quick Allied Victory; Anxious Over Relatives

By THEODORE ANDRICA

Clevelanders of Italian origin received the news of Sicily's invasion with mixed emotions. They were hoping for a quick occupation of the island and at the same time they were anxious over the welfare of many relatives still in Italy.

Many of Cleveland's Italian families have relatives fighting on both sides of the battle. Their sons are in the American Army while their brothers, cousins, nephews are in the Italian forces.

At least a third of Cleveland's Italian population came from Sicily. Calabria, the "mainland" province nearest to Sicily; Cosenza, Appulia, Molise and Abruzzi are other provinces in southern Italy which sent many people to this country.

Many Relatives There

During my trips to Sicily, Calabria and Abruzzi I have never visited a village, town or city in which there were no relatives of Italian immigrants in America or former residents of the United States.

When I stopped by road building gangs in almost any part of Italy there always was someone among the workers who spoke to me about his relatives in America. Very often someone would speak in English.

Despite all the pressure the Mussolini regime exercises on the population, the American troops' invasion will be rather welcomed by the civilian population of Sicily. In no place in Italy have I seen more signs "W Il Papa". ("Long Live the Pope") than in Sicily. No doubt the Sicilians like the Pope, but another reason for so many signs was that they tried to counterbalance the pro-Mussolini signs.

Comment on Invasion

Phillip Garbo, well-known decorator and painter, who is a native of Cefalu, 35 miles east of Palermo on the seashore, made today the following comment on the Allied invasion of Sicily:

"The Italians always had great admiration for America. As long as America has the final say at the conclusion of the war, the Italians will be happy. They all know that the present war is a great misfortune for Italy.

"I hope that many people will be spared in this conflict, both in the armies and among civilians. I most sincerely hope that Rome will be spared any damage. Rome is the city of the entire world, not only of Italy.

"We all hope that this tragedy will be over soon and that America will have the final say at the conclusion of the war, for the benefit of the peoples of the world."

Charles G. Gallo, long a leader of the Ohio chapter of the Sons of Italy and a native of Ravalusa, near Licata, on the south shore of Sicily, said:

"The sooner the war is over the better for everybody. I am sure the Italian people do not want to fight against America."

Natale Comella of 3573 E. 154th street, formerly state secretary of the Order of Italian Sons and Daughters of America said:

"If Italy surrenders it would be better for everybody. I am sure America does not want to punish the Italian people in any way, once Mussolini is out of the way."

The invasion of Italy today brings to mind the declaration of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, Order Sons of Italy, made on June 12, 1940, following Italy's entry in the war on the side of Germany:

"The members of the Order Sons of Italy in America are stunned by Italy's declaration of war and are extremely sorry that Italy has felt constrained to enter the European holocaust. We have been praying for peace and hoping that this hour might never come to pass and that some solution would be found whereby this act of Italy might have been averted. Our motto has been and will be, 'America first and above all.'"

Checking Up for a Personal Visit?

LONDON, July 10—(U.P.)—Prime Minister Churchill went to the Aldwych Theater last night with his wife and daughter, Mary, well knowing that Allied troops were about to invade Sicily.

The show they saw was "Watch On the Rhine."

VOL. II — CLEVELAND, O., SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1943 — No. 12

The general public had its say about the meat shortage this week through representatives of consumer, religious, labor and civic groups at a meeting with Mayor Lausche.

Average Clevelanders have been angry about the meat situation and gave vent to some ideas that haven't been expressed by government agencies or higher-ups in the industry.

Given a chance to become articulate, the little fellow—through the group representatives at the mayor's meeting—charged that:

NEIGHBORHOOD meat dealers hide selected cuts for favorite customers.

HOTELS and restaurants have a surplus of meat supplies and are holding back carcasses.

THE PUBLIC has not been given a true picture of the national meat situation either for military reasons or because the Government is confused and is unable to make it clear.

As a result the mayor announced policemen will soon set out to get evidence against black market operators and other food regulation violators by making actual purchases and obtaining evidence as they do in liquor law violation cases.

Cleanup

The drive to halt prostitution in cheap hotels here scored its first success when Judge Alva Corlett issued an injunction against the E. & S. Hotel, formerly the Astor Hotel, at Chester avenue and E. 12th street. The hotel has been closed for two weeks since Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan opened the drive to clean up the downtown district.

Employment in Cleveland reached an all-time high during June. Companies making aircraft parts showed the biggest expansion, particularly those which hire women.

The Real Memphis Belle

No scene from a movie, the picture below was taken here when Capt. Robert K. Morgan, pilot of the Flying Fortress Memphis Belle, met his real Memphis belle, Miss Margaret Polk. Capt. Morgan, former Clevelander, had brought his ship, veteran of 25 daylight raids over Germany, to Cleveland but didn't know Miss Polk was coming up from Memphis, Tenn., to see him. They will be married soon.

Holiday?

The long holiday weekend meant a good time to some but was only another work period to many war factory employees.

Biggest event—the Festival of Freedom—filled the Stadium with 80,000 cheering spectators, brought 55,000 other folks downtown to witness the giant military parade.

Thousands ignored government and transportation company pleas to stay at home and jammed railroad cars and busses in the worst holiday travel jam in Cleveland history.

The city is making worthwhile money on its parking meters. Take for the first six months of this year was $129,784.24.

The city's children are enjoying The Press-City of Cleveland traveling zoo as it makes the rounds of the playgrounds this summer. Last week a total of 30,000 youngsters took time out from baseball and other games to watch the animals.

In Square

Mayor Lausche Tuesday suggested to the Socialist Labor Party that it hold its talks and meetings in Public Square and refrain from using the recreational areas of the parks for that purpose.

Shortage

Large storers of food have a bad time these days when their electric refrigerating machinery breaks down. Vast quantities of precious food are endangered because there are not enough trained service men to repair damages.

To help the situation, representatives of the refrigerator service industry went to Washington this week and asked that induction of members of their trade be held up until replacements can be trained. They also asked permission to pay higher wages to compete with war plants.

Gas Problems

In an effort to cut down the flow of gasoline, OPA announced that motorists will be required to write their license numbers across the face of gas ration coupons given out after July 21. This will provide a double check on the amount any driver purchases.

In another ruling on the driving question victory gardeners were denied extra gas for getting to cultivated plots far from home. The move was based on a stand that gardens planted after July 12 would be too late to produce enough food to make them worth while.

A move to erect Greater Cleveland's proposed war shrine with public tax funds was announced this week when the trustees of the Memorial Day Association set aside funds for putting the proposal up to the voters in the next primary or general election.

New Shortage Crisis Near

A busy Congress stopped deliberations Wednesday to listen to Cleveland's Congressman Frances Bolton describe a new crisis in shortages.

Mrs. Bolton, mother of three grown sons, warned that diaper production is not keeping pace with the birth rate and a serious problem impends.

They don't call Patrolman David Offutt the stork. But they may start calling him that soon. He's a member of the Police Mobile Patrol which takes many expectant mothers to the hospital. Thursday he delivered a baby for the 20th time when the ambulance was called too late to make the hospital.

Traffic Toll

One person killed, 16 injured and 70 automobiles damaged in accidents was the Fourth of July traffic toll in gasoline-rationed Cleveland. There were no firecracker deaths.

Monsignor Vincent B. Balmat Thursday was named chancellor of the Cleveland Catholic diocese; succeeding Bishop James A. McFadden. On July 22 Bishop McFadden will assume his duties as bishop of the newly created Youngstown diocese.

Lakewood's 45 garbage collectors walked off the job Wednesday when their demands for a 44-hour week were not met.

With suburba residents badly worried, the men returned to work the next day under a two-week truce agreement.

Six gamblers this week escaped 30-day terms in the Workhouse by going out and getting essential war jobs. They had been given their choice by Judge Julius Kovachy.

Juvenile delinquency took an odd twist when four boys painted red enamel swastikas on the windows of a public school. The four—8 to 10 years old—were arrested.

Large Expansion of Plants Is Seen

NEW YORK, July 10—(U.P.)—Construction of industrial plants for the production of civilian goods in the first postwar decade will be 30 per cent greater than in the last 10 years prior to the war, F. W. Dodge Corp. predicted today.

The estimate, in terms of 1940 dollars, "is based upon the currently accumulating deferred demand for new plant capacity in unexpanded civilian-goods industries," such as food products, paper and pulp, printing and publishing, textiles, refrigerators, railroad shops, lumber and woodworking.

According to the construction authority, this group of nonwar industries has shown a declining volume of new plant construction since October, 1941, when initial restrictions on such building were imposed.

From 1941 to 1942 this group—which normally invests 50 per cent more annually in new plant facilities than the war group—had a decline of 31 per cent.

Court to Rule on SEC Charges

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 10—(U.P.)—Federal Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye held under advisement today a Securities and Exchange Commission motion that the court prevent "continued loss to thousands of investors" by restraining the Investor Sydnicate Inc. from engaging in "further sales-switching practices."

Nordbye said he would render a decision on the motion "shortly" on the basis of evidence presented at a hearing of SEC charges yesterday.

Commission Counsel Edward H. Cashion told the court yesterday that the Minneapolis investment house and its two subsidiaries, the Investors Mutual Inc. and the Investors Syndicate of America Inc. indulged in "gross misconduct" and "fraudulent practices" in the sale of securities.

Averages Hit New Highs in Irregular Market Advance

Main List Moves in Narrow Area; Some Issues Gain Beyond a Point

NEW YORK, July 10—(U.P.)—Stocks made an irregular advance in the short session today with enough of the leaders rising to carry the general average into new high ground for three years. Trading was moderately active.

Bonds displayed rallying tendencies after an irregular decline. Rails moved narrowly and the industrial and utility sections likewise were featureless. Foreign issues were featured by a rise in bonds of German-occupied countries. Australian 4½ per cent bonds due in 1956 gained more than a point. U. S. Government issues were dormant.

Grains were firmer after yesterday's decline. Wheat had advances ranging to more than a cent a bushel while one rye position was up more than 2 cents. Cotton eased a few points. Hogs were dull with the salable receipts insufficient to make a market. Hence no quotations were available.

There were a few individual strong spots in the stock list and gains ranged to more than a point in several instances. The main list, however, moved in a narrow area.

Pepsi-Cola, near closing time, rose 1⅝ points to a new high at 48½. Chicago Pneumatic Tool gained nearly a point. Sinclair oil made a new high.

In the steels Bethlehem preferred made new high while its common was easier. U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube had small losses. Several utilities made new tops on small net gains.

Rails added to yesterday's gains and then turned irregular. Paramount and Montgomery Ward made new tops in their respective sections.

Income Payments Increase Sharpy Over 1942 Total

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—Income payments to individulas in May and the first five months of this year were 27 per cent higher, respecitvely, than in the corresponding period of 1942, the Department of Commerce reported today.

May payments totaled $11,132,000,000, compared with $11,215,000,000 in April, the April-to-May decline being attributed chiefly to seasonal factors including the usual drop in dividend and interest payments.

For the first five months of this year payments rose to $54,760,000,000 from $43,089,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1942.

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones noted that the principal factor in the rise for both May and the five-month period was the sharp increase in wages and salaries paid to war workers. For the first five months this year the rise in wages and salaries was 31 per cent to $30,099,000,000.

The department's index of income payments, adjusted for seasonal influences, rose in May to 210 per cent of the 1935-39 average, extending the advance which got under way in April, 1940. In April, this year, the index was 208.

BOSTON WOOL

Domestic and foreign medium wools continued in demand for use in Army blankets, but orders for fine Australian wools slackened considerably this week, according to the U. S. Agriculture Department's weekly wool review.

Purchases now are practically all in wools which have arrived in port, although sales could have been made as soon as wools were reported shipped, the review said.

A few small sales of original bag lots of bulk fine staple territory wools were made for the account of Commodity Credit Corp.

Generally heavier condition than expected before shearing caused appraisal prices on territory wools to run considerably under the price level established when contracting was active.

Bids on 785,480 pairs of wool ski socks were requested by the Quartermaster Corps. Preference will be given to bids based on the use of all domestic wool.

Boston warehouses are reported far behind in unloading of cars and preparing wool for appraisals because of labor shortages. Karakul wool from Montana and Nevada, shrinking 50 per cent, was appraised at a grease price of 29 cents.

Charge Miles With False Advertising

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—The Federal Trade Commission last night charges Miles Laboratories Inc., Elkhart, Ind., with failing to reveal in its advertisements the "harmful potentialities" that may result from excessive use of Dr. Miles Liquid Nervine, Dr. Miles Nervine tablets and Dr. Miles anti-pain pills.

The FTC complaint also alleges that the corporation's advertisements misrepresents the therapeutic value of Liquid Nervine and Nervine tablets.

In an attempt to block issuance of the complaint, the firm had filed suit for a declaratory judgment in U. S. District Court here on grounds that the FTC was without authority to determine the legality of language used on labeling of Miles products. The suit, which asked the court to pass on the commission's jurisdiction, was dismissed June 23.

It is charged by the FTC that none of Miles' advertisements contained any warning against use of the three preparations in greater amount or greater frequency than that recommended on the labels of the containers.

John R. Cox of Weatherhead Co. Buys 23-Suiter

By JAMES K. CHANDLER
Real Estate Editor

John R. Cox, vice president of the Weatherhead Co., today purchased the 23-suite apartment house at 11859 Edgewater drive, Lakewood, for $140,000. The property was part of the estate of Henry A. Datch, former photoengraver for NEA Service.

The estate was represented by Russell F. Greeter, the buyer by R. W. Purcell and the broker was D. W. McCoy.

Buys $28,500 Home

Mrs. Katherine K. Watkins has purchased the English type home of E. C. Jacobs at 20190 Parkside drive, at Lake Erie in Rocky River, for $28,500. It includes four bedrooms and tow baths, with a finished third floor. The grounds include a sand beach. The George H. Freeland realtor office handled the deal.

16-Suiter Sold

The Cleveland Trust Co., trustee, sold the 16-suite brick apartment at 582 Eddy road, corner of St. Clair avenue, to Barney and Ben Savransky for $42,000. Joseph Weiss was the broker.

Leases Hotel Crawford

Hotel Crawford, 3922 Prospect avenue, has been leased from the Prospect-Crawford Co. for $5400 a year for five years by Dorothy Houlihan, manager.

Euclid Avenue

There is a warm spot in the heart of every Clevelander for Euclid avenue. The name, somehow, brings the city to mind more clearly than any other.

We believe the name means a lot to the Cleveland boys in the service and that many of you are pretty eager for another look at the old street.

Euclid avenue was in the news again this week—as it has been since the days they had a fence around the old town common at Public Square.

At the annual meeting of the Euclid Avenue Association, Alexander C. Robinson III, architect, told members that new glories of beauty and utility await Euclid avenue in the expected postwar building boom.

He warned, however, that plans for the avenue must be fitted into general city planning of contiguous areas. He said Euclid avenue has been "the step-child of city planning" and never had the attention given other city developments, such as the Mall.

Bankrupt

Easy come easy go might have been the heading on the item this week that told Patsy Perroni, heavyweight boxer, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His purses for one fight used to be more than he now makes in an entire year as a guard at a war plant.

Because they do not reside in the Cleveland school district, Samuel J. Kornhauser and Maxwell Gruber were ruled ineligible to be members of the Library Board.

Mr. Kornhauser, up for a new term, cannot accept the office, Assistant Law Director Charles White ruled when the question of their eligibility was brought to him. Mr. Gruber will move to retain his post.

Perhaps the meanest of Axis agents are those who spread false rumors of the death or injury of men in the service.

They have been at work in Cleveland again with their false reports to undermine the morale of families at home.

Clevelanders with relatives in the services were warned that no one has any information on casualties except that received by next of kin from the War Department. They were asked to report false casualty rumors to the FBI, which will attempt to trace them. Two Cleveland families were unnerved Monday by the false-rumor mongers.

Curfew

High-ranking officials—including the safety director and the chief of police—didn't know the new curfew law to keep juveniles off the street after 11 p. m. is on the law books, it was revealed Thursday.

Fact that the law is being ignored was brought to light when three juveniles were arrested at 4:30 in the morning after they had stolen a truck for a joy ride. Only a shot from a police gun scared them enough to stop their mad dash.

Friends of the Cleveland Zoo this week opened their drive for funds to supplement the amount the city provides for annual operation. Amounts asked among the friends of the zoo range from $1 to $26.

Gay Blades

On June 14 five married women returning from a party were followed by three gay blades who yoo-hooed and made fresh remarks.

The gay blades were surprised and hurt when the women went into one of their homes and five men—husbands who had been playing cards and awaiting their wives' return—came out of the house and beat them up.

They were even more deeply hurt Wednesday when Judge Bradley Hull heard the case, said he "wasn't playing for marbles" and sent them to the Workhouse for 30 days.

Canteen

United Automobile Workers' Union, Local 45, is planning a canteen for the use of servicemen and union members at Fisher Bomber Plant No. 1. The local also will inaugurate a physical training course for members who are to enter the armed forces.

Residents in the Wade Park avenue-E. 118th street area protested this week they are in the same boat as the Oakies, who were blown off their lands by the dust storms of a few years back.

The dust storms are started by the whirring engines of city transit busses which start at a loop near that intersection. It's so bad that housewives can't hang out their washing and have to keep windows closed in the hottest weather.

YOUR HOME FRONT SPORTS LETTER

DEAR YANK: Allie Reynolds, the rookie from Wilkes-Barre who has been making himself solid with the Indians of late, pitched a 5-2 victory over Washington in the morning game at League Park which opened a big series for the Tribe.

This offered the Redskins a chance to hoist themselves over Washington and back into the first division. This is how the race stood: Detroit 2½ games behind New York, Chicago 3, Washington 4, Cleveland 5, Boston 5½, St. Louis 6½ and Philadelphia 9½.

The game, which started at 11:30 a. m. and attracted 3691 cash customers, and also was enjoyed by 2000 school children, was marked off as the kind of a success the Tribe's front office will remember for future scheduling.

Return of Mel Harder, shelved for two months by a fractured ankle, meant the release of Frank Doljak, Cleveland sandlot product who had been signed when the outfield was reeling from a half dozen reasons. Doljak promptly went back to Albany, the last club he had played with before quitting baseball for war work more than a year ago.

There wasn't much excitement on the other side of the fence, in the National League, where Brooklyn was St. Louis' only challenger, Pittsburgh was a poor third and Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and New York were strung out well back of the leaders in that order.

Larry Atkins announced that Lloyd Marshall and Mose Brown were matched for a 10-rounder companion fight to the Chalky Wright-Lulu Costantino battle July 21 at the Stadium. Freddy Pope tries to repeat over Ham Wiloby in an eight-rounder.

Harness horse racing devotees, entrenched at North Randall, mourned Will Caton, veteran trainer and driver, who died at his Bedford home. His Excellency won the Stallion Stakes.

Mel Riebe cracked a couple of home runs to become The Press Sandlot Star of the Week. He plays with the Factory Furnitures, hot shots in the sandlots. Toronto's softball gals managed no better than a split with teams here in four games at Lakewood Elks' Field. Regards—BEN WARFIELD.

Switches to Defense of Ray Mack, Which Is Best in League

As a charter member of the Why-Doesn't Ray Mack-Hit Club, I have been attorney for the plaintiff in every American League city and in most of the National League orchards. Consequently, I feel a public duty at this time to leave this narrow field and switch to a defense of Mack as the best second baseman in the business.

The refugee from a drawing board was quite well buried a year ago and even this summer beneath the ballyhoo for second basemen who earned their letters with the bat, rather than with fielding finesse. While Mack was concentrating on off-season engineering and on-season magic with his hands and throwing arm, campaigns were launched to prove half a dozen other second basemen superior to such ordinary performers as Lajoie, Gehringer, Collins, Hornsby and Frisch.

The powerful New York press tried to fashion Jerry Priddy into heaven's gift to second base posterity. This failing, Joe Gordon was shaken out as the premier second baseman of all time. Boston countered with Bobby Doerr, a fine young fellow and a corking performer. Mack faded back like a desperation forward passer with one minute to play.

Then, too, Raymond was a victim of a circumstance over which he had no control. Until Lou Boudreau was promoted to manager, he and Mack were mentioned in the same breath by everyone. Their double plays were spectacular, sensational, colossal, terrifying to the enemy.

Public Quit on Ray, but Players Didn't

As manager, Boudreau became the athlete of 1942 about whom all the stories were written. Mack plodded along beside his former roommate, but no longer were they Boudreau and Mack, the team. Ray was lost in the public shuffle.

He was a good second baseman last year, as good as ever. His teammates knew his value and in their awkward way tried to keep his spirits up as rivals and fans harped upon his weak hitting.

After all, the drone of enemy voices each time Mack steps to the plate must get under the skin. . . . "Well, here's the all-American out," they bark with saw-tooth voices.

There isn't much to Mack's batting average, but his few hits and his batting power must be concentrated. For only Jeff Heath and Boudreau have batted in more runs than has Mack. If the ex-Case hero should improve his batting average 50 or 75 points he would drive in that many more runs and rank up with the league leaders in this important department.

But there we go talking about his batting and the idea of this piece was to say that Mack is the best fielding second baseman in the business, and if you don't believe it ask any ballplayer. You could poll the American League regulars and Mack would win hands down.

One of the veteran Redskins was talking about Mack the other day.

"There's a terrific ballplayer," he volunteered. "And he's getting better. He moves to his right now much better than he used to. He always could go to his left and throw on double plays . . . the best ever."

Mack could get there yet.

Reynolds Could Make Tribe Tough in East

Allie Reynolds, a young right-hander who throws one of the liveliest pitches in the business, could exercise a tremendous influence on the Tribe's maneuvers during the important eastern trip which will follow next week's all-star game. Reynolds, victor over the Yanks and Senators his last two times out, is strong enough to start every fourth day and pick up the slack in Boudreau's pitching plans created by extra days of rest for Al Smith and Mel Harder.

Reynolds' ascension to the top bracket was not due any more to his decisions over the Yanks and Senators than it was to his previous starts and appearances during which he lost four times. Even in defeat, the tanned Oklahoman was impressive with his fast ball that zigged and zagged up to the hitters.

With confidence obtained from his last two triumphs and with further study of rival batters and their weaknesses, Reynolds should wind up among the team's leading throwers by late September. He needs only a sharper understanding of situations he creates for himself while on the mound.

In a race as tight as the one seven American League clubs are conducting, the influence of one pitcher can be pennant-swaying. Milo Candini has proved this to the Senators, who wouldn't be in the upper crust except for the Italian's triumphs.

Reynolds has shown he can pitch, he has heart, he can stand plenty of work. Such a character is rare, indeed, and irreplaceable in this kind of a year.

Tribe Scores One Run for Bagby in 31 Innings

Jim Bagby    Buddy Rosar

The Press Sports

CLEVELAND, SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1943

Jeff Heath    Lou Boudreau    Ken Keltner    Al Smith

THEY'LL TWINKLE TUESDAY: Here are the Indians' representatives on the American League All-Star team which will battle the National League's picked squad in the annual classic to be held at Shibe Park in Philadelphia Tuesday night. Boudreau and Keltner were picked on the squad for the fourth straight year, while Bagby, Rosar and Heath have been chosen for the second time. Smith, who has won seven games and lost only two for the Tribe, has been honored for the first time.

Jim Again Victim as Mates Are Blanked for 13 Frames

Senators Squeeze Home Winning Run to Keep Indians in Fifth

By BOB YONKERS

Instead of resting in third place, 1½ games behind the league-leading Yankees, the Indians today are submerged in the fifth slot, 5½ notches from the top—all because they have scored the grand total of one earned run for Jim Bagby in the last 33 innings he has pitched.

Those 33 rounds represent three complete games of 11, 9 and 13 innings, respectively, and they've all been lost despite the fact the opposition was able to aggregate only six runs and 18 hits off jinxed James.

An idea as to how costly that prolonged diet of goose eggs has been may be had by considering the three losses and adding them to the Indians' victory column. Then subtract three defeats from the loss column. Take one victory apiece from the Yanks, Senators and Athletics and give each an additional defeat.

The revised standings would give the Tribe 37 victories and 33 defeats for a percentage of .529. The Yanks still would be first, with a record of 38 and 31 for .551, but they would be only one game ahead of the Tigers. The Senators' ledger would show an even .500 rating for 37-37 and they would be in fifth place, 1½ games behind the Tribe instead of two games ahead.

Bagby Should Have 10 Victories

And Bagby would have 10 victories and five losses instead of seven triumphs and eight defeats—quite a creditable record to carry into next Tuesday's All-Star Game at Philadelphia.

His streak of miserable luck started on June 30 when he held the Yanks to five hits in 11 innings but lost, 3 to 1. The Indians scored their lone run in the second inning and that was the last legitimate one they manufactured for their ace—and he's pitched 31 innings since.

Last Monday he turned in a four-hitter against the Athletics, but the Tribe also garnered four blows and an unearned run in the second as it lost, 2 to 1, over the regulation route.

But Lady Luck slapped Bagby hardest at the Stadium last night, while 11,840 fans suffered sympathetic pains. Pitching himself out of at least three disastrous-looking holes, the slim right-hander shut out the Senators for 12 innings, yet all he got for his labors was a 1-to-0 set-back, Washington squeezing home the big run in the 13th.

Priddy's Bunt Scores Johnson

The Senators needed only one of their nine hits to salt the game away. Bob Johnson led off in the 13th by drawing a pass and he scampered to third on Alex Kampouris' single to right. Jake Early then popped up but Gerald Priddy, who shared hitting honors with Mickey Vernon at three apiece, stroked a bunt toward the first-base side of the mound. Bagby fielded it with his back partially turned to the plate, so he had to wheel around before whipping the ball in to Catcher Buddy Rosar. But Johnson slid in ahead of the throw.

The Indians threatened in their half of the 13th when Mickey Rocco walked and Ray Mack sacrificed him to second. Jeff Heath was sent in to bat for Bagby and Rae Scarborough, who had relieved Dutch Leonard in the 11th, was replaced by Milt Haefner, a southpaw. Heath nearly ruined Manager Ossie Bluege's strategy as he blasted deep to George Case in right field. Oris Hockett then sent a short fly to right center and Center Fielder Stan Spence raced in for a spectacular catch to end the game.

Leonard, who was too tired to continue, according to Bluege, allowed four hits in 10 innings. Scarborough was credited with the victory.

Fillies Trot in Randall's Feature Race

By ISI NEWBORN

Their program interrupted yesterday by weather conditions, Grand Circuit trotters and pacers offered an enlarged racing program at North Randall today including the remainder of yesterday's uncompleted card.

Featured event was the $7657 Coaching Club Stakes for 3-year-old trotting fillies. Entered for it were Lenora Hanover, the Colonel's Lady, Barbara Babcock, Margaret Wyatt, Scarlet Hanover, Tidy Hanover and Duchess Hanover.

Because there was hardly a doubt that Thomas Thomas' champion, Adios, would win, the $2280 American Stake for 3-year-old pacers was to be raced at 12:30 p. m. today without wagering. Entered against Adios were King's Counsel, Purdue Hal and Widow's Pride.

Thereafter, until the start of the regularly scheduled program at 2:30, the incompleted portions of yesterday's card were to be raced off.

Yesterday's races were interrupted just after His Excellency, with Tommy Berry up, had come through on the rail with a brilliant stretch rush to win the initial heat of the $2755 Matron Stake for aged trotters. The time was 2:03¼. Cannon Ball was second and Volstadt third.

Earlier, Clint Hodgins drove Elgin to a surprise victory in the single dash of the 13 class pace; Lee Smith drove Reveler to victory in the first heat of the 13 class trot, and then Hodgins drove home another winner named Barkis in the lone heat of the 19 class pace.

The daily double in which Elgin and Reveler were the winning horses, paid $107 despite the fact Reveler was a 4-5 favorite.

Mort Cooper Racks Up 11th Victory and 4th Shutout

Baseball Roundup

By UNITED PRESS

The Brooklyn Dodgers today had almost forsaken the job of chasing the front-running St. Louis Cardinals to ward off the challenge of the Pittsburgh Pirates, for the Dodgers are closer to the third-place Pirates—four games—than they are to the Cardinals, who lead by 4½.

The Dodgers beat the Pirates, 8-7, yesterday, but only after a 10-inning struggle. They got four runs in their half of the inning to win. Billy Herman worked a perfect squeeze bunt off Bill Brandt, Pittsburgh pitcher, to send across the winning run.

Mort Cooper, better known as Mr. Baseball in St. Louis, racked up his 11th triumph and his fourth shutout as the Cardinals blanked the Braves, 7-0.

The Cubs came through with two runs in the 12th to whip the Giants, 5-3. Ace Adams gave up the two winning tallies in his 36th relief appearance of the year.

The Reds came from behind with six runs in the sixth to wipe out a 4-1 handicap and defeat the Phillies, 11-4, in a night game.

In the American League, Detroit bounced to within two games of the idle, league-leading Yankees by blanking the A's, 4-0, in a twilight game.

Mike Chartak's ninth-inning homer with the bases empty gave the Browns a 5-4 decision over the Red Sox in a night game.

Lynn Patrick Inducted

Candini Bids for 8th in Row Tomorrow

Indian Items

Milo Candini, the Washington Senators' undefeated rookie right-hander, will shoot for his eighth straight victory in tomorrow's double-header with the Indians at the Stadium.

Al Smith, the All-Star southpaw, who has won seven and lost two, will pitch one of the games for the Tribe and may oppose Candini. Neither Lou Boudreau nor Ossie Bluege were certain who would be their other pitchers.

Vern Kennedy and Early Wynn were to be the rival moundsmen in the third game of the series at the Stadium this afternoon. Kennedy has won two and lost two and Wynn's record is 7-5.

Oris Hockett skidded about five feet on the seat of his pants after making a nice catch of Stan Spence's drive to left in the first inning last night. . . . Ken Keltner robbed Spence of a hit in the eighth and Gerald Priddy of a bingle in the 11th with fancy plays. . . . Bob Johnson, George Case, Spence, Priddy and Roy Cullenbine also sparkled afield. . . . Boudreau plays nearly behind Keltner with Case at bat, and the outfielder obliged four times last night, popping to the shortstop once and grounding out to him three times. . . . Joe Heving, the Tribe's relief pitcher, was in uniform for the first time since he was struck by an automobile last Friday night. . . . Boudreau says he might use Mel Harder for a few innings during the week-end competition.

Nashville Whips All-Stars

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 10—Nashville, winner of the first-half crown of the Southern Association split season, put over a pair of runs in the sixth inning to defeat a team of All-Stars, 3-2, last night.

'A' Nines Open Second Half Race for Title

The Bartunek Clothes face the Waldorf Beers on Woodhill No. 5 tomorrow in the feature contest as the second half Class A race gets under way. Factory Furnitures, first half kings, play the Russo Wines at Brookside Stadium and the Rosenblums meet the Navy at Edgewater in the other contests.

LOS ANGELES, July 10—(U.P.)—Fifteen thousand track fans gathered in Memorial Coliseum today with expectations of seeing Gunder Hagg, the Swedish distance runner, break under 9 minutes in his two-mile race against Gil Dodds of Boston.

"If Hagg doesn't run faster than 9 minutes flat, he's going to wind up in second place," warned Dodds, the divinity student who finished 20 yards behind Hagg at Chicago last week when the Swedish wonder was timed in 9 minutes 2.8 seconds.

"I'm in much better condition than I was in Chicago and I'm confident of a better race," added the stocky little easterner.

Thompson Is Favored Over Caspio

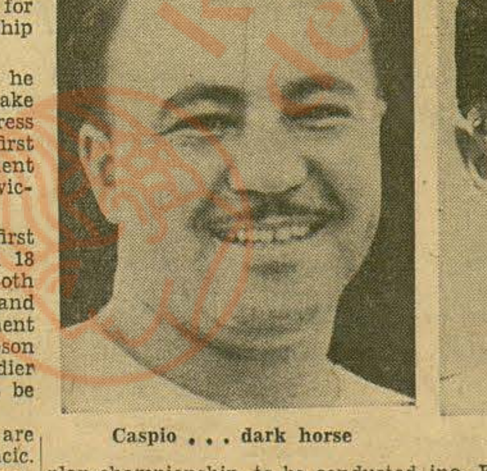
By JACK CLOWSER

Just as they did two years ago, Jimmy Thompson and Jim Caspio will meet tomorrow at Highland Park in the 36-hole final match for the city public links championship and The Press trophy.

If Thompson beats Caspio, as he did in the 1941 match, he will take home the huge, statuesque Press trophy for keeps. He won his first leg on it in 1937, and permanent possession comes with the third victory.

They will tee off for the first round at 10 a. m. The second 18 probably will begin about 2:30. Both contestants are long hitters, and both have had much tournament experience. However, Thompson has shown himself to be the steadier with the pressure on, and must be considered the favorite.



Caspio . . . dark horse

Thompson . . . favorite

Finalists for the Class B title are Clarence Kantor and Joe Florjancic. John Nowack, the publinks champion last year (he was beaten in the first round this year) plays Steve Martin in the Class A consolation final.

Entries are coming in at the Cleveland District Golf Association office for the annual 36-hole medal play championship, to be conducted this year by the Public Links Association. First round of play will be Wednesday at Highland Park's new 18.

Already entered are Colin Dow Jr., Steve Nagy, Joe Pastor, Henry Hartwick, George Novotny, Joe Horvath, Bill Fredrix, Sevvy Severino, Ed Gannon, Leo Preisler, Oris Stecker, Al Atkins and Joe Banko.

Competition for The Press Industrial League individual medal play championship and the qualifier for the match play championship was proceeding today at Lost Nation, with 150 in the field.

Softball Gals' 50-Minute Tilt Is Knockout

Strictly Personal

By BEN WARFIELD

The gal war workers who took to softball for their recreation—like the Yankees to the American League lead, any given season—are becoming slick ball players. . . . It took only 50 minutes for Weatherhead to edge Pump Engineering, 2-1, last evening at Glenview in a clash that sparkled with all of the good action and excitement that you'd want in any ball game. . . . Pauline Sevec, who had hurled five-hit ball until the last inning, suddenly found the sacks populated with only one out. . . . Dorothy Plau came in to cool Pesco's hectic rally with two strikeouts. . . . Marge (Alabama) Godfrey gave Weatherhead only five hits over the route. . . . Marge Yuhat tallied both of the winner's runs, singling in the first and fourth innings and working her way home from the initial station with World Series finesse. . . . Elizabeth Buchak gave Pesco its run in the first, being helped along by Sylvia Georgetti's fine bat work. . . . This week-end: The Ferguson Auditors at Elks' Field tonight and tomorrow. . . . Leece-Neville and Chicago Pneumatic Tool battle at Glenville tomorrow night at 9 o'clock for the first-half championship in the Industrial "A" League. . . . Earl Rondin has Lutheran League games slated for Brookside and Gordon tomorrow afternoon. . . . Phil Goulding, waiting for a call from the Navy since graduation from Hamilton College, is among those interested in Lakewood Park open tennis tourney tomorrow.

Yankees Beat Sailors

GREAT LAKES, Ill., July 10—The New York Yankees defeated the Great Lakes Blue Jackets yesterday, 8 to 6.

Merchant Marine Drive Planned

Official Due on Monday to Discuss Recruiting

A program to stimulate merchant marine recruitment in this area will be discussed Monday by Maritime Service officers here when Lieut. S. H. McConnell, U. S. N., chief public relations officer, arrives in Cleveland.

He will meet with members of the Cleveland Advertising Club's War Efforts Committee, who have aided the service in recent campaigns, and outline plans for future projects.

Lieut. D. C. Phillips, regional enrolling officer, also announced increased quotas for men to train for merchant marine duty. An acute shortage of trained seamen still exists, he said. He predicted that new Liberty and cargo ships would not be able to leave their docks unless more men enlist soon.

Men between 17½ and 50 who qualify can be transferred to training stations within 10 days, Lieut. Phillips said. The local office is at 1720 Euclid avenue.

Lieut. Walter W. Fleming will arrive from Columbus tomorrow morning to recruit Naval Construction Corps men tomorrow and Monday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. at the Navy recruiting office, fifth floor, Federal Building. All branches of the Seabees are open.

More men from Selective Service Boards 12 and 17 were in the armed services today following their induction yesterday. They are now on furlough or already at training points.

Men accepted were:

BRIDGE IN CLEVELAND

By BEN CREEL

Newly elected directors of the Cleveland Whist Club will meet next Wednesday evening to elect officers.

At the same time, preliminary plans, at least, will be drafted for the fall season and there will be some positive discussion of proposals for the club to conduct some sort of a summer tournament.

If there is one pitfall that the average player finds more than any other, it is that of doubling. Before a double is made, close consideration should be given to every bid that has preceded arrival at the final contract. Honor cards are not always open sesame to setting opponents.

Take the following hand for example:

North
♠ Q J 3 2
♥ Q
♦ K 10 5 4 3
♣ 8 7 6

West
♠ K 5 4
♥ 9 8 7 6 5
♣ A J 10 9

East
♠ A 8 7 6
♦ 9 8 7
♣ K Q 5 4 3

South
♠ 10 9
♥ A K J 10 3 2
♦ Q A J 6

The bidding has gone: South, one heart; North, one spade; East, two clubs; South, four hearts.

A double looks attractive to the West player, but after discounting the possibility of more than one club trick, it is much better to pass or else bid five clubs as a sacrifice.

JUNIOR AVIATOR

T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By ED CLARKE, Aviation Editor

Some time ago we built a light indoor stick model with a soda straw motor stick. Today's model uses soda straws as motor sticks. It is designed after the famous P-38 "Lightning," but is built light as an indoor mode. It will fly with plenty of speed and if balanced properly will have an extended glide.

Two soda straws cut down to 7 inches make the hollow motor sticks as tail booms. Make them as shown at bottom of drawing with a solid balsa plug at each end. Note notches cut in straws to fit wedges in nose and tail plugs. Bend tiny prop hooks and rear hooks. Cement rear hook solid into rear plug and put prop shaft into hole bored into nose plug. Three free washers go over each shaft, and wide thin-bladed 3-inch diameter props are used. Make one left-hand and one right-hand propeller. For power, use rubber from inside a golf ball, taking as many loops as will gt the straws.

When props, rubber and plugs are fitted to each motor stick, wrap a layer of scotch tape around ends of plug and straw to hold assembly in place.

The light wing is of conventional construction. Build it of balsa, seized as shown. Sand smooth and cover with light-weight tissue. Note that the center section of wing, between booms, is flat, with a rib at center and one under each boom. The tips have one-inch dihedral.

Two wing mounts are made of very soft balsa (see dotted line over rib 1 for shape) and carved to fit snugly under each boom. Short lengths of wire (A) are cemented in place as shown. Cement wing mount to wing and assemble to booms by looping rubber under wire A and over booms and back under other wire, crossing at top.

Make fuselage of soft 1-16-inch flat wood, rounded at front and tapering to thin knife edge at back. Cement to center of wing.

The tail surfaces are of light one-ply cardboard cut to shape and cemented in place at rear of motor sticks.

Balance model by moving wing back and forth along booms, or add a bit of clay to nose of fuselage.

You'll enjoy this easily and quickly built speedster, especially for indoor flying, although it will perform well outdoors on a hot, windless day.

Next week we will review the making of propellers. Some of you new Junior Aviators may not know much about them.

George Hamilton's Band Returning as Next Attraction at Bronze Room

"Betty Co-Ed's" Pappy: From the Waldorf-Astoria in New York to the Mark Hopkins in San Francisco, George Hamilton's music has long been an outstanding feature. His successful hotel tour of the country included a stopoff here a few years ago. And once again the former Dartmouth Phi Psi who composed the popular "Betty Co-ed" is coming to Cleveland. His band has been booked for a 10-week stay at the Hotel Cleveland's Bronze Room, starting July 22. This time, George is bringing June Howard, one of the most beautiful band vocalists in the country, with him.

June Howard . . . she sings, too.

The band comes here from Pittsburgh. Its soft, rhythmic melodies are ideally suited for the Bronze Room. George needs no introduction to local dancers, as they know his music well from his previous engagement, his many network broadcasts and appearances on the screen in such musicals as "Gold Diggers" and "George White's Scandals." And wait until you see (as well as hear) Miss Howard. Mmmmm.

Son-in-Law Held in Oakes Slaying

French Count, Millionaire Quarreled Over Marriage

NASSAU, Bahamas, July 10—(U.P.)—Count Alfred De Marigny, 35-year-old French nobleman, was held today on charges that he murdered Sir Harry Oakes, his father-in-law, as the climax to quarrels over his marriage to the multi-millionaire's 19-year-old daughter, Nancy.

Attorney General Eric Hallinan said Oakes apparently was clubbed to death as he slept in his palatial home Wednesday night. The slayer also set fire to the bed clothing, burning the body severely, police said.

(Basis of the quarrels, according to reports in the United States, was Oakes' objections to the count on grounds he was a fortune hunter. He once disowned and disinherited his daughter, one of five children, but later relented, it was said. He never became reconciled to the marriage, however.)

The Duke of Windsor, governor of the Bahamas, conferred with police at Oakes' home soon after De Marigny, wearing a rumpled linen suit, was arrested last night. The duke made no statement but was reported greatly distressed over the case.

Oakes, reputedly worth $200,000,000 from his Canadian gold mines, was found dead by Harold Christie, his closest friend and a business partner, Thursday morning.

Autopsy findings were not revealed and a coroner's jury investigating the case suspended proceedings until Tuesday.

De Marigny was visited in his jail cell by his lawyer and a friend, Marquis Georges De Visdelou, but it was indicated no further steps in the case would take place until Monday, when he probably will be given a hearing.

De Marigny's wife was reported to be en route from New York to Bar Harbor, Me., where Sir Harry's widow is living. Other members of the family also were gathering there.

For two days the case was veiled by police secrecy. Two Miami police officials, including Capt. Edward S. Melchen, chief of Miami's homicide squad and the Duke of Windsor's bodyguard when he is in Miami, were called in soon after the body was found.

De Marigny, maintaining an outward calm, was questioned yesterday and the day before. Then at 6 p. m. yesterday Police Commissioner R. A. Erskine Lindop announced the arrest.

Apply Pressure to Lift Ban on FCC Testimony

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—A special House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission today threatened to ask the House itself for authority to compel production of evidence denied the committee by order of President Roosevelt.

While "regretfully" taking exception to the President's action, the committee prepared to make public a "sensational" Navy memorandum criticising alleged FCC blunders in the field of military intelligence. Committee Counsel Eugene L. Garey said the author of the memorandum, Rear Adm. S. E. Hooper, retired chief of Navy communications, had been "gagged" by a presidential order forbidding naval officers, "active or inactive," to testify before the committee.

"Adm. Hooper was ready and willing to testify," Garey said, "but under this order, although retired, he would be subject to Navy discipline if he did so."

Committee Chairman Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.) charged last night that President Roosevelt had taken an attitude which raises the question whether he can "in the public interest" limit the constitutional powers of Congress.

He released the statement after letters from the undersecretaries of war and of Navy desclosed that Mr. Roosevelt had directed the Army and Navy to withhold certain documents requested by Cox's committee, and that the President also had told Army and Navy officers and Budget Director Harold D. Smith not to testify.

Amster-Kirtz Quits After 45 Years

The Amster-Kirtz Co., 45 years in the restaurant and hotel supply business in Cleveland, is liquidating its stock and going out of business for the duration, William M. Kirtz, president, announced today.

Inability to get new stock and equipment is the reason given by Mr. Kirtz for closing the business which has done a $4,000,000 annual volume in normal years.

The company will continue to operate its other stores, including those at Akron and Canton, and Mr. Kirtz will maintain an office in Cleveland with expectation of reopening a store here after the war.

Jones and Wallace Confer With F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, July 10—(U.P.)—Feuding Henry A. Wallace and Jesse Jones sat down together yesterday with President Roosevelt, but they had a lot of company and kept a discreet distance.

The occasion of their first meeting since War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes failed in an attempt to resolve their bitter dispute was a cabinet meeting.

By accident or prearrangement, the vice president and secretary of commerce sat on the same side of the table, but they were well spaced. Three men sat between them.
